Town of Caledon Intensification Strategy

Welcome to the "Made for Caledon" Intensification Strategy

The Town of Caledon has initiated a study to determine how intensification will be incorporated throughout the Town.

Intensification is usually defined as an increase in density within built-up settlement and designated greenfield areas.

Intensification can be achieved in several ways from new development of vacant land within built-up areas as well as the redevelopment of under-used lands. Intensification, in the right built form, can help strengthen neighbourhoods by improving and utilizing existing community services, roads and infrastructure.

The Bolton Farmers' Market is starting fresh for 2014. From June 14 to October 11, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m in Downtown Bolton.

We are looking for new vendors. If you are a farmer, producer, artisan, entertainer or community group give us a shout.

Do you need help clearing your hydrant? Contact us at 905-791-7800 ext. 3499

Keep Fire Hydrants Clear in the Winter

Snow covered fire hydrants increase emergency response times.

Fire hydrants keep our community safe by allowing Fire and Emergency Services personnel quick access to water in case of fire. That's why you should never park in front of a hydrant or block it in any way.

It is important to always keep the fire hydrant near your home or business clear of snow. Snow covered fire hydrants increase emergency response times. By making sure your fire hydrant is snow free and accessible from the road at all times, you and your neighbourhood will be safer in an emergency.

Your opinion is very important! We need your input to help guide us in what intensification should look like and where it should go in the Town of Caledon. The results of these community meetings will help serve Town Council to better understand the current and future direction for a Town-wide intensification strategy.

If you are interested, you may choose to attend one of three (3) meetings scheduled on Tuesday, February 18, 2014 at the following times and locations:

Editorial Toronto doesn't need Olympics

There is nothing wrong with a big party.

Indeed, most of us enjoy attending them occasionally, and are maybe envious when we can't.

There's also nothing wrong with massive spectacles, especially on an international scale.

But such events and happenings come at a cost, and sometimes they just aren't worth it.

So while there might be some conceivable advantages to Toronto hosting the 2024 summer Olympic games, we're glad to see that the idea is not likely to get very far.

A report was sent to a committee of City council recently outlining the possible benefits and detriments, and the committee elected to take no action. Most observers seem to agree that means they have put the notion on a shelf, where it's probably going to stay.

We can see a couple of problems with mounting a bid to host the games.

For one thing, it would require the backing of a very united community. Granted, there will always be some dissent in such an effort, but we have to look at current conditions in Toronto. The people running the show to the south are having trouble determining the status of their mayor. We're having a hard time understanding how a creditable bid is going to be put together from such a starting point.

We also have to wonder if there's a realistic chance of success. The report that was dealt with by the Toronto councillors last Monday, compiled by Ernst & Young, indicated that it would cost between $50-and-$60 million just to make a formal bid, with nothing guaranteed.

Toronto made a bid to hold the 2008 games, and lost to Beijing.

Some of us remember that bid. It carried a lot of unified support from people and groups in the area, and there was a lot of enthusiasm too. But the decision rested with officials of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), and some of the top people in that group made it clear they wanted Beijing. We would submit that the Toronto representatives could have put forth the best case in history, and it would have done no good — the ball game had been decided before the local team had come to bat.

Does this area need to repeat such an experience?

Besides, officials in this area already have their hands full with next year's Pan Am games, and everyone is wondering what kind of shape that effort is in, especially when it comes to finances. Granted, it's a work in progress, but there is plenty of room for concern. Among other things, it amounts to the fact that this area is just not ready to go for the Olympics.

Besides, the IOC could look at the big spectacle that Toronto is currently working on, and decide it's some other city's turn.

We think it's a safe bet that merit won't be very high on the list of criteria.

We don't see much in the way of a mood within Toronto or the surrounding area to make a serious bid for the 2024 Games, so it might make more sense to simply not bother.

Or better still, maybe they should wait until the chances of success look more promising.

When IOC wants Toronto, they'll let the appropriate officials know

Olympia's plan for Melville pit."

The "pit," not the citizens' interest. Disappointing. So it is time to stand up and state our opinions loud and clear.

Our mayor and councillors had an opportunity to stand up and say "No" to gravel, and "Yes" to our neighbours living in Melville.

I have lived in Caledon for 30 years and I have come to know and love the rolling hills, forests and creeks and meadows, and the people inhabiting it. As an architect and planner, I created beautiful and useful structures, not only in Caledon, but the U.S.A., England and Pakistan. I love it here, as all of us do. If the pit goes ahead, Melville is in danger of losing its pristine, beautiful surroundings. To what? A huge gravel pit.

We in Caledon want to preserve the living earth in its glory, and need to side with our Melville neighbours to keep our water pure and clean. The Melville community needs to be protected from noise, dust, truck traffic, etc. Stripping off the living crust of earth to get to the gravel benefits only a few. Certainly not the citizens of Caledon, especially those of us who live in Melville.

The Orangeville community will also be impacted by noise, traffic, dust and water loss.

Council decided to give a huge gravel pit the green light. The Melville community's preference for clean air, clean and adequate water and their enjoyment of the wonders of Caledon was ignored.

Caledon needs to support our fellow citizens. It's time to remind our elected representatives that they speak for us. We don't want more gravel pits adjacent to vibrant communities. Our involvement may just preserve our health, the beauty of our landscape and Caledon will truly be the greenest town.

Our descendants will thank us, and so will our political representatives when they do what is right for us.

Don't accept bureaucratic babble to excuse their action by claiming impotence. Direct them to decide on healthy environment and not to discriminate against community interests by blaming policies that are wrong.

It happened today

It was a sad occasion, but many could argue it marked the start of something good.

When it comes to monarchy, the start of a reign usually begins on a sad note, and that was the case here.

King George VI never wanted the Throne, but it befell him nevertheless. He overcame a bad stammer and his own reluctance to symbolically lead his people during an extraordinarily grim period of their history. Many believe it was the strain of that duty that hastened his death.

All men die in their due time, and when it comes to a King, that means the reign of his successor begins.

The reign of King George ended and the reign of Queen Elizabeth II began this day, Feb. 6, 1952.

MPP Sylvia Jones speaks out on potential gas tax hike

Dufferin-Caledon MPP Sylvia Jones came out swinging recently against the Liberal government's latest tax and spend idea of raising the gas tax by five to 10 cents to fund transit expansion in Toronto.

"The Liberal government is out of ideas so, as per usual, their only solution is to raise taxes on hard working Ontarians," said Jones. "A large portion of Dufferin-Caledon residents commute to work every day. They have to sit in gridlock, and they have to pay to fuel their vehicles. Raising the gas tax will make it more expensive for them just to get to work."

Jones went on to point out that, unlike urban areas like Toronto and Mississauga, many Dufferin-Caledon families don't have an alternative to using their vehicle. Additionally, some rural communities already lose out on the provincial portion of the current gas tax, since municipalities with transit systems get all of the tax's revenue.

In September, Premier Kathleen Wynne appointed Anne Golden to head a new advisory panel to review Metrolinx's investment strategy, and come up with a series of recommendations to fund transit expansion in the City of Toronto. The Golden Report was released Dec. 12, and one of the central recommendations was raising the gasoline tax by five to 10 cents per litre. If the recommendation is implemented, it would result in a tax increase from 14.7 cents to 19.7 to 24.7 cents per litre — a rise of as much as 70 per cent.

The report also suggested that an increase in the gasoline tax could be paired with a 0.5 per cent increase in the HST.

"This is yet another example of the Liberals' tax and spend agenda," said Jones. "The Liberal government doesn't have a revenue problem — they have a spending problem. We can't forget that this is the same Liberal government that just wasted $1.1 billion to cancel two gas plants in Oakville and Mississauga."

Jones is concerned that at the end of the day, an increase in the gasoline tax will do damage to a still uncertain Ontario economy.

"Many Ontario families are already struggling to make ends meet. An anemic Lib-

'Non-partisanship'? Ridiculous

NATIONAL AFFAIRS Claire Hoy

The thing to remember about Canada's Senate is that it was never meant to be anything but a haven for the elite.

When Sir John A. Macdonald orchestrated what he called a body for "sober sec set up a body of important people - read "elites," the same haughty approach Sir John A. had at the beginning, when only the rich and powerful were deemed worthy - to decide who sits in the Senate.

His plan would replace prime ministerial appointment power with a non-elected, unaccountable body choosing non-elected, unaccountable senators. Hard to see how that's more democratic than what we have. At least now – as we've seen with Mike Duffy, et al – prime ministers get the heat when things go wrong Under Trudeau's scheme, nobody would bear responsibility.

eral economy has led to job losses and stagnant wages, and people are feeling the pinch," Jones said. "Families are worried about their hydro bill, their worried about their mortgage, they're trying to make ends meet, but Kathleen Wynne keeps dumping more and more costs on their shoulders. Does the Premier honestly think that Ontarians can afford to pay more Liberal taxes?

Jones concluded by pointing to the Progressive Conservative white paper, Paths to Prosperity: Building Great Cities, as an alternative to the government's taxationheavy approach. Building Great Cities was released recently and Jones called it a credible plan for investing in Ontario's cities with the substantial amount of money Ontarians already pay in taxes.

Man charged for not being in Newfoundland

A 40-year-old Caledon resident, who apparently should have been living in Newfoundland, has been charged with breach of an undertaking.

Caledon OPP reports an officer stopped a grey Chevrolet Astro van in the area of King Street and Highway 10 the morning of Jan. 31.

Investigation revealed that a passenger in the car was bound by an undertaking order with conditions. Three of the conditions were to reside at a specific location in Newfoundland, to notify RCMP in writing 24 hours in advance of a residence change and to report to RCMP by telephone every Wednesday. The officer learned the man was living in Caledon and had failed to report that to RCMP, or to report in as required.

The man was charged with three counts.

ond thought" - somewhat ironic given Macdonald's serial lack of sobriety - he made it clear that the idea was to keep check on the "democratic excesses" of the elected House of Commons.

He and his fellow Fathers of Confederation didn't want the plebes getting too uppity, don't you know.

Which is why, at the time, a senator had to be worth at least $4,000 before being qualified to sit in the Red Chamber. Doesn't sound like much now. But back in 1867 it was an enormous sum, specifically designed to keep the riff-raff out of the running.

Lord Dufferin, Canada's third governorgeneral, described the Senate as "an absurdly effete body – nothing but a political infirmary and a bribery fund."

Not much has changed, alas, despite 132 of virtually unbroken efforts to "reform" the place.

The latest attempt comes from Trudeau The Younger – Justin to the uninitiated – who, without so much as a how-de-do to his 32 Liberal senators – announced they were no longer members of his caucus and, according to him, "There are no more Liberal senators."

"The Senate must be non-partisan, composed merely of thoughtful individuals ... independent from any particular political brand," he said.

This garnered Trudeau considerable media coverage and underscores the fact that most Canadians – even those, like me, who think the Senate has a legitimate role to play – are not happy with the status quo.

Trudeau's move may pass muster as great gambit in a high school debating club, but it really makes little practical sense and doesn't advance the issue of genuine Senate reform.

For starters, there are Liberal senators. They aren't in the Liberal caucus any more, but they are Liberals - and most of them have made that clear – having already formed their own "Liberal Senate caucus" independent of the Commons Liberal caucus. Trudeau has the power to decide who sits in his caucus, but even he, despite his omnipotent lineage, does not have the power to turn lifelong Liberals into something they are not.

Worse, his grand notion of "reform" is to Another thing. This notion of "non-partisanship" is, I humbly submit, totally absurd. Nobody is non-partisan. Nobody. Sure, people are partisan about different things, not necessarily a particular political party, but, with the possible exception of robots, everybody is partisan to something.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper has, as you likely know, referred several questions dealing with Senate reform to the Supreme Court and, perhaps, when they reply things may become clearer.

But don't count on wholesale reform, not under our current constitution, where it would take at least seven provinces and the federal government – and the Senate itself - (and for some things, all 10)provinces) – to agree to change. Not going to happen. Ever. Which is why NDP Leader Thomas Mulcair's campaign to nuke the Senate is so disingenuous.

Harper has been criticized for promising Senate reform then larding it up with Tories. Fair enough. Remember though, that he first tried several times to bring in various reforms and was blocked each time by the opposition parties. So here we sit.

Harper also takes heat for being authoritarian. What about Trudeau? He didn't discuss his plan with anybody. No caucus debate. No conversations with the senators, many of whom have toiled loyally for the party since long before he was born. And suddenly, to paraphrase a famous campaign quote from his late father, he told the Liberal senators "Zap! You're frozen out."

Trudeau's real reason, alas, is obvious. The general audit of the Senate is due soon and there are bound to be plenty of juicy headlines. So he hopes that when Liberal Senators are found to have been looseygoosey with public spending he'll be able to say "Hey, they aren't Liberals. They're independent.'

Well, as the old saying goes, if it looks like a Grit, and walks like a Grit, and talks like a Grit, it is a Grit.'

As B.C. Liberal Senator Mobina Jaffer responded, "I'm still a Liberal senator, not independent. I'm still a Liberal. I've always been a Liberal. I've been a Liberal for 38 years."

We may question her judgment, but that's another issue.

King author brings Canadian military history to life

By Mark Pavilons

It's not easy to make Canadian history come alive. A King City author lives and breathes it, passing on his insights and extensive research to readers interested in Canada's military past of the late 1700s.

Gavin K. Watt, well respected in his field, recently released "Poisoned by Lies and Hypocrisy, America's First Attempt to Bring Liberty to Canada, 1775-1776," shedding new light on the impact of the Revolutionary war on Canadians.

An avid re-enactor for decades, Watt knows just Watt knows just how to fire a British "Brown Bess" musket – what it feels like and smells like. He's worn the uniform of the day, and experienced the mock battlefield.

And that's how his stories of the men and their regiments come to life in his books.

Poisoned by Lies and Hypocrisy, Watt chronicles the first two campaigns of the American Revolution through their impact on Canada. He goes in-depth retelling the story of Governor Guy Carleton, charged with defending Quebec with British regulars, Natives, American loyalists and a motley group of militia.

While the War of 1812 predominates Canada's early battles and conflict with the United States, the campaigns of 1775-1776 were integral in Canada's history and evolution. Were it not for the combined valiant efforts of all who served, our very existence today would be quite different.

Watt spent roughly 18 months poring through and compiling the pertinent information regarding the loyalist regiments and its soldiers of the time. These early conflicts and actions of the soldiers really founded Ontario, Watt pointed out, noting his research was a real "eye-opener.'

American accounts of the history of the day tend to be quite different from our perspective and Watt sheds some light on these Canadian founding fathers. Pulling from his wide network of historians both here and south of the border, his "gigantic" personal library and collection of documents, Watt put the pieces together nicely in this easy-to-read account of those early campaigns.

Some fascinating tidbits came to light, including the creation of the Quebec Act of 1774 which basically restored French civil law and accepted French Roman Catholicism. This helped stir up our American brethren, and is quite possibly a cause of the Revolution. Another factor that caused American opposition was a discussion of releasing slaves in the United States. Watt said the stamp acts and tea duties were really "minor stuff" in the bigger picture. Some saw the Quebec Act as punishment for the Boston Tea Party and other protests.

The Americans had repeatedly promised not to invade, with an attitude, Watt observed, that's very similar to today's "your with us or against us" approach. As tensions grew, it seemed armed conflict was inevitable.

Watt said another fascinating aspect he uncovered as the willing participation of members of the Seven Nations of Canada as well as the Canadiens.

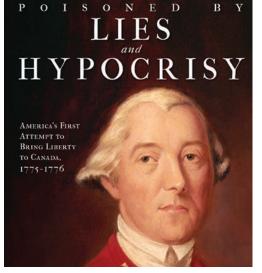

The major campaigns of the time were the occupation of Montreal and the siege of Quebec City. European troops, British regulars, loyalists and French Canadiens fought together to successfully defend our country.

These failed attempts by commander Montgomery, Benedict Arnold and Morgan make for interesting military reading.

Watt concentrates on the individual stories of the Canadian officers, French Canadiens and aboriginals, and the roles they all played.

Using master rolls, a limited number of post-war records and building on his previous book, The British Campaign of 1777 Volume Two: The Burgovne Expedition, Watt presents a fair, balanced account.

His books appeal to those interested in Canadian history and those who "get the bug." Anyone with loyalist ties would also enjoy the historic tales.

Watt's interest primarily centres around The Seven Years War and the Revolutionary period. From his re-enactment involvement, he can verify that the conditions of the day were "awful." Soldiers at the time had to battle sickness, disease and the cold.

He has been involved in re-enactment since the 1970s and has been involved in parades, military events and celebrations both in Ontario and in the U.S. He's been active in three 18th Century recreated units – the 1st and 2nd battalions, King's Royal Regiment of New York and the 1758 New York Provincial Regiment.

'The Colonel's" Company of the 1st battalion Royal Yorkers was founded in 1975 in preparation for the American bicentennial celebrations and was likely the first recreation in Canada of an tico.ca.

historic regiment, with the exception of those at government-run historic sites, which at the time portrayed only British and French soldiers. In contrast, the KRR's founding members chose a United Empire Loyalist regiment whose disbanded veterans were amongst Ontario's first English-speaking settlers, (Canadian unit).

In 1984, while heading a shooting club and a reenactment regiment, he republished Ernest Cruikshank's regimental history of the King's Royal Regiment of New York, adding a master roll of the 1,500 men who had served and several images of related artifacts.

A benefit of reenacting was his growing friendship with American historians who were every bit as passionate about their Revolution as he was about their rebellion.

Members take this guite seriously, and the hobby typically involves collections of both authentic period weapons and reproductions. Actually holding a piece of history in one's hand makes it real.

While trying to obtain historic records is a constant challenge, Watt finds the hunt and end result rewarding. His interest hasn't waned one iota.

Currently, he is researching the subject of non-military refugees who came to Canada during the Revolutionary War their names, relationships and how and where they were housed and provisioned.

The interest and participation in recreations is a family affair, with Watt's two daughters, son, son-in-law and grand-daughter all taking part. The Watts' family album looks more like a historic text than typical modern vacation photos.

For Watt, history is never dead, but simply waiting to be re-explored.

CLASSICAL GUITAR SHOW

Archtop Cafe in Bolton last hosted its first ever Classical Guitar Open Mic. Despite the weather, they had a good turnout, and it was really well received. There were five different players, the youngest being Carlos Sanchez from Cedar Mills. It was so successful, they have decided to make it a regular event, probably every three months.

Snowfest in Caledon will be a fun Family Day celebration

Voted Festival/Event of the Year by Ontario Tourism for the Hills of Headwaters Region, SnowFest 2014 returns for Family Bebbington, Caledon's own multi-tier for- and Emergency Services and the support just south of Charleston Sideroad in Cale-Day (Feb. 17).

The event is being hosted by the Caledon Agricultural Society.

"Community engagement is paramount," observed Society First Vice-President Tim Forster, convenor of SnowFest.

He was referring to the competitions involving service clubs and community groups, churches, elementary school children and volunteer firefighters, who compete for podium positions and the coveted gold, silver and bronze medals.

"At James Dick Construction, we are absolutely thrilled with the success of Berns. SnowFest and the great community event that it has become," commented James Dick Vice-President Greg Sweetnam. "Tim Forster and his volunteer team have done an outstanding job building a festival out of, basically, a pile of snow and added a bunch of happy people.'

Cornerstone Standards Council (CSC) pits and quarries that meet communities' is releasing its draft standards for responsible aggregate extraction in Ontario. The draft, which proposes actions that pits and quarries would voluntarily undertake in order to be certified, is posted online at www.cornerstonestandards.ca and are available by request also comments@cornerstonestandards.ca

CSC will be hosting a public information meeting Feb. 12 at Victoria Parks Community Centre in Mono Mills. CSC Director of Outreach Nicholas Schulz reported it will provide information on draft standards for a voluntary certification system for pits and guarries in Ontario. He added this certification system proposes a new, more collaborative approach to the siting, planning, operation and rehabilitation of aggregate sites.

The Feb. 12 session will run from 4 to 9 p.m., with 20-minute presentations at 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 p.m.

CSC is reaching out to individuals and groups interested in the role voluntary certification can play in the aggregate sector. The council is seeking feedback on the draft standards, wanting to know if they accurately reflect achievable expectations for progressive pits and quarries.

Town wants public input on population numbers

By Bill Rea

The Town is being asked to adjust is projected population numbers, but councillors want the public to have input.

A public information meeting is planned for Feb. 20.

Town planners sent a report to council last week, calling on Peel Region to adjust Caledon's 2031 population projections from 108,000 to 113,000 and employment numbers from 46,000 to 49,000. The report also stated the population numbers were to be set at 146,000 for 2041 with employment numbers at 73,000. These numbers are based on the Province's amended growth plan figures for Peel, and planners reported the Region has started a review of its Official Plan to allocate the revised numbers to the area municipalities.

But council voted instead to refer the report back to staff.

Councillor Patti Foley commented the numbers the Province is calling for would open the door to Caledon becoming a city, and she argued that's not what people wanted when they moved here.

We're being asked to plan by numbers," she remarked.

She also stressed the need to know how much farmland will be lost with this increased population. She said farmland can't be replaced once houses go up, adding the Province didn't think about where food comes from when it came up with its numbers.

Councillor Rob Mezzapelli pointed to the need for public consultation on this "pivotal shift in the future of our community."

"We need to make the public aware," he urged. "Come out and have your voice heard.'

"The community has to decide how Caledon grows," he added. "Not the Region, not the Province, but the community.'

He also said he has not been told by the Province that the Town can't plan the community as it wants, and suggested a strong message from the public can be passed up the line.

"I just ask that we have our minds open to comments like that from the public," he said.

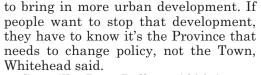

Councillor Allan Thompson commented on the need for the Town to take a position. Mayor Marolyn Morrison said there will be the meeting, with the issue returning at another council meeting.

Councillor Richard Whitehead supported sending the report back to staff. He also commented on the need to get people involved in the issue.

He recalled the Interim Waste Authority (IWA) that was set up by the Bob Rae government to find a site for a massive garbage dump for Peel. No one paid much attention to the IWA until the actual site selection got going, and then they appreciated what was going on.

The discussions about population numbers have been theoretical so far, Whitehead commented. As things get more practical, he said people are going to start paying attention.

He also stressed the need to make sure people understand the Town is being compelled to manage Provincial policy, and not get the idea that council is trying Councillor Doug Beffort said it's important that people in villages like Belfountain, Alton, Caledon, Cataract, etc. understand what these numbers might mean for their areas.

Councillor Richard Paterak observed that the Province has taken the creativity out of planning, giving the Town a calculator to do it instead.

'We are free, as residents ourselves, to speak up at this public meeting," he remarked

Jones says minimum wage not keeping manufacturing jobs

By Bill Rea

Ontario's minimum wage is going up June 1, but Dufferin-Caledon MPP Sylvia Jones didn't think it really addresses employment problems.

The government announced last week the minimum wage will go from $10.25 to $11 per hour. This reflects the rise in the Consumer Price Index since the last minimum wage increase in 2010.

"Increasing the minimum wage will help improve the standard of living for hardworking people across the province, while ensuring that businesses have the predictability necessary to plan for the future," Premier Kathleen Wynne commented.

"Our government is focused on helping

Tilson signs banner for Canadian Olympic Team

Dufferin-Caledon MP David Tilson last week signed a banner on behalf of his constituents that will be presented to the Canadian Olympic Committee this month in Sochi, Russia

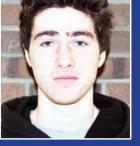

"Canada is sending a stellar team to Sochi for the Winter Olympics this year to follow up on our tremendous success coming out of Vancouver in 2010," Tilson said. "I hope this banner, signed by MPs from all parties, will provide some extra inspiration for our athletes."

Canada set a record in Vancouver by winning more gold medals than any other country in a single games in Winter Olympic history. Canada's Own the Podium program, which has been a driving force behind Canada's continued evolution to a world-leading sport nation, is funded extensively by the federal government, in addition to funding invested by the Canadian Olympic Committee and Canadian Paralympic Committee.

A16 February 6, 2014 Caledon Citizen Town asked to consider other lands for expansion

By Bill Rea

Caledon council last year picked lands on the west of Bolton for village expansion, and neighbouring land owners are lobbying to be included.

Consultants representing Flato Developments Inc. appeared before council last week.

Michael Gagnon told councillors they weren't hoping to get anything approved right then, but were interested in adding to the process, and he hoped to have a meeting with municipal staff soon.

There's an obligation on the Town to have Bolton grow by 190 hectares to comply with the Provincial growth plans. Six areas were considered as options, and the one recommended by the Town's consultants is on Humber Station Road, between the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks and The Gore Road, north of King Street, also known as Go Station Focus option.

Gagnon told councillors Flato has been building developments around the Greater Toronto Area (GTA). The company has 50 acres straddling Humber Station (most of it on the west side), just east of the lands being eyes right now. He said including these lands in the project would provide an opportunity to create a true "western gateway" into Bolton. There was also an argument that it would represent a logical expansion of the current built-up area.

Gagnon also said including these lands would provide a more balanced approach than what's currently being proposed.

He also cited 13 criteria set out by staff for deciding where the expansion should take place, and he said this idea would fit in with them. The criteria included logical extension of the current built-up area, supporting future urban structure, being compatible with adjacent farms, being accessible by major roads, ease of infrastructure upgrades, being able to benefit from existing and planned facilities and infrastructure, etc.

Gagnon observed it's the Province that dictates the numbers the Town has to work with, and he also pointed out the Province is likely to put an east-west highway through the area. He urged councillors to take their direction from the Province and make the best community possible.

The lands in question have residential development nearby, as well as commercial areas to the south.

He argued the idea has lots of merit, stating it represents a logical extension to the built-up area, it can be easily integrated with natural heritage features, provides an opportunity to continue expanding the community to the west along King Street, it doesn't present complications with other planning studies like the GTA West Corridor, it's close to existing or proposed employment areas, it can accommodate environmental features, can be connected with several major roads, supports future public transit, etc.

Councillor Rob Mezzapelli was pleased to see efforts to expand discussions on this issue.

"I am looking to have more conversation," he said.

Councillor Patti Foley liked the idea of mixed commercial space being used as a buffer, but Mezzapelli didn't want it to have a negative impact on existing commercial operations.

Councillor Richard Whitehead stressed the importance of understanding what will happen if the proposed GO Station goes into the area. He said the catchment area of that station will mean a huge number of commuters' cars will have to be parked there. He said 30 acres will not be enough.

Airport Road break-in

A quantity of money was reported stolen after a mechanic's garage on Airport Road was broken into.

Caledon OPP report the incident happened sometime between Jan. 25 and 27. They said those responsible broke a side window and searched the area before finding the cash box.

Police are asking anyone with information about this incident to contact them at 905-584-2241.
