Peel Regional council approves its 2015 budget

By Bill Rea
Peel Regional council last week approved the 2015 operating and capital budgets. The budget included a property tax increase, representing another $33 on the average residential home (assessed at $452,500) and a $58 increase for the average small business (assessed at $534,300). Regional council also approved a seven per cent increase in utility rates representing an increase of $39 for the average household and $98 for the average small business.

Quote of the week

"It didn't knock me down. I still love to cook. It was just a bump in the road."
CBolton resident Holli Miller, on her experiences in her unsuccessful bid in the Master-Chef Canada competition.

Peel utility rates are still the lowest in the Greater Toronto Area. Caledon's Treasurer Peggy Tollett said that will work out to a 1.9 per cent increase for Caledon taxpayers, which is what was forecast. "It's a good news budget for Caledon," Mayor Allan Thompson commented. "The Region of Peel is a facing a number of key strategic issues that will have far reaching impacts on our community and the 2015 budget underscores Peel Regional council's commitment to addressing the needs of our residents and businesses," said Regional Chair Frank Dale. "This budget demonstrates council's commitment to remaining fiscally responsible while locating enough resources to meet our needs." "This is a budget that is financially responsible, focused on the needs of the residents and respects the taxpayer," said Regional Councillor Chris Fonseca of Mississauga, who chairs the Enterprise Programs and Service section of Regional Council. This was the first budget for several of Caledon's Regional representatives, including Barb Shaughnessy. She reflected that the previous council had called on staff to bring in the budget as low as possible. "I though they had fairly done that," she commented. "I think they did the previous council wanted. They did what they were told to do." Shaughnessy also expressed how impressed she was with the Regional staff, calling their work competent and diligent. "They seem to be on top of everything," she said. "It's a fiscally, financially responsible budget," Councillor Annette Groves commented, observing it keeps services at their current levels while keeping the tax hike below in-

Video contest for Caledon students

To help raise awareness about Caledon's new Idling ByLaw, the Town has invited teachers and students of all Caledon schools to submit a short "idle-free" video, showcasing the idle-free promotional activities of their class or an idle-free message for the public.

In 2014, the Town joined more than 25 Ontario municipalities by introducing a new Idling Bylaw that prohibits unnecessary idling for more than two minutes. The new bylaw builds upon past anti-idling efforts, such as the establishment of idle-free zones at all Town facilities and libraries. Idle-free zone signs have also been provided to all Caledon schools and some local businesses.

"The wonderful thing about this contest is that it's a creative way to get Caledon youth, from kindergarten to Grade 12, excited and educated about the benefits of living in an idle-free environment," said Mayor Allan Thompson. "I can't wait to see what the results are."

To be eligible, videos must be no more than three-minutes and must be submitted by April 10. Approval from the school principal is also required.

In recognition of Earth Day, the winning video will be announced April 22. The winning class will receive a pizza lunch and their video will be featured on the Town of Caledon's website and presented to Town Council.

Road deaths on steady decline, but more work needs to be done

Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) are releasing a comprehensive report on the hundreds of fatal motor vehicle collisions it has investigated throughout the province over the last 10 years.

The majority of fatal collisions on OPP patrolled roads and highways are a result of poor driving behaviour or driver error. When officers investigate fatal collisions in which these factors were found to be present, they record the fatalities and collisions in the categories of driver action, driver condition and use of safety equipment. Four causal factors in collision deaths that are associated with these categories are consistently identified and for that reason, they are known as the “Big Four:” alcohol/drug-related, inattentive-related, speed-related and no seat belt/helmet.

When looking at last year’s (2014) data, OPP investigated 265 fatal road crashes which resulted in the deaths of 287 people. Of that, 46 deaths were alcohol/drug-related, 73 were inattentive-related, 61 were speed-related and 50 deaths involved no seat belt/helmet.

During the previous year (2013), OPP investigated 251 fatal road crashes which resulted in the deaths of 290 people. Of that, 73 deaths were alcohol/drug-related, 88 were inattentive-related, 47 were speed-related and 71 deaths involved no seat belt/helmet.

OPP are pleased to see the numbers down in three of the four major causal factors in 2014. However the one consistency they see every year, without exception, is that the overwhelming majority of fatal road crashes they investigated fall into these four categories and are preventable.

“As we have said before, regardless of how hard the OPP works to reduce the number of lives lost in road collisions, we cannot do this alone,” commented Deputy Commissioner Brad Blair, provincial commander of traffic safety and operational support. “Ontarians need to understand what we learn from this data, which is that the vast majority of the people who have died on our roads did not have to die.”

“Beginning this year, we are going to publicly share our detailed collision and fatality data because if Ontarians see the extent to which their driving behaviour contributes to road deaths, they will be more aware than ever that they have the strongest influence of all in putting an end to these deaths,” he added.

On occasion, OPP is asked why the Big Four category numbers do not equal the total number of road deaths. The Big Four are not mutually exclusive of each other. A collision can be counted in more than one of the four categories. For example, if an OPP collision investigation reveals that a deceased driver was not wearing a seat belt, was impaired and texting at the time of his/her death, this fatality would be counted in the attentive-related, impaired-related and no seat belt categories. There are other causal factors in collision fatalities that do not fit into the Big Four and make for a higher total value (e.g. animal-related collisions, driver under medical distress).

Traffic safety is one of OPP’s core functions and information is one of the their most valuable tools. The organization analyzes its fatal collision data every year to help it deploy its resources as effectively as possible, with the aim of reducing the number of deaths on Ontario roads. This is an important goal of OPP’s Provincial Traffic Safety Program.

OPP maintains a sophisticated statistics database which captures a wide range of data associated with the fatal motor vehicle collisions it investigates. Through the analysis of this data, police can establish where it needs to focus its provincial enforcement and public education efforts from one year to the next.

Overall, OPP are pleased to see a relatively steady decline in the number of road collision deaths over the last 10 years, including those that fall within the Big Four categories. While OPP, Ontario road users and other road safety partners have much more work to do to make Ontario roads safe, police are encouraged by this downward trend and hope to see it continue.

Watch out for door-to-door scam

Caledon OPP are warning residents to be vigilant when dealing with door-to-door sales persons.

Police report a man in his early 20s called on many homes in Bolton Feb. 18, asking to check the hot water tank. He did not have proper identification, but wore a tag that read “Consumer Relations”.

Residents should know their rights. They do not have to let sales persons in their homes. Sales persons must leave a home if asked to. If they persist, and refuse to leave they are in violation to the Trespass to Property Act and residents should contact police at 1-888-310-1122 or for emergency situations dial 9-1-1.

Those who are interested in what a door-to-door salesperson has to offer should take the time to find out about their business and their offer before giving them money.

Man charged with impaired driving

A 35-year-old man from Orangeville has been charged after being stopped by police on Highway 10 Feb. 10.

Caledon OPP reports officers were conducting traffic enforcement at about 1:40 a.m. when they were flagged down by a concerned motorist regarding a possible impaired driver travelling northbound. Officers located the suspect vehicle, a red pick-up, swerving on the road. Subsequently, they initiated a traffic stop to check on the driver’s sobriety. Upon speaking with the male driver, the officers detected signs of impairment by alcohol. The man was arrested and charged with impaired operation of a motor vehicle and driving with more than the legal limit of alcohol in his system.

His licence was suspended for 90 day and the vehicle was impounded for seven days.

CHIEFS RECEPTION

Ottawa was the scene recently of a Fire Chiefs Reception. Among those on hand was Caledon Fire Chief David Forfar and Dufferin-Caledon MP David Tilson.

Council not ready to drop work on Heather Glen proposal

By Bill Rea

Policies are needed in Caledon to support it being an age-friendly community. Councillor Barb Shaughnessy recently brought the issue up, expressing the belief that the Town should be following a holistic approach. That meant, as far as she was concerned, that Town staff should not work on a proposed seniors'-style development near Caledon village.

The motion from Shaughnessy called for policies in the Town's Official Plan to support an age-friendly community, based on in-depth analysis and consultation with stakeholders. She eventually withdrew the motion after her colleagues approved an amendment from Councillor Doug Beffort, calling for the provisions regarding the development proposed by Heather Glen Seniors Village be voted upon as a separate item.

"It's been gutted," Shaughnessy said. The motion also called for having all community initiatives for an age-friendly community directed to Town planners as part of the Official Plan review.

Heather Glen Seniors Village has shown interest in developing some 200 acres just north of Caledon village, and made a presentation of the proposal at an information session in March.

Shaughnessy's motion called on staff to halt their involvement in this proposal, focusing their resources to work on policies and incentives to ensure seniors' housing is developed.

Shaughnessy commented that the baby boomers, who are nearing retirement, are a one-time phenomenon.

"Do we build huge institutions and create white elephants?" she asked, as she called for a holistic approach on the issue.

"Boomers have thrown a wrench into the developer's retirement marketing plan, no surprise, as these were our hippies of the past," she observed. "The boomers have said 'no' to senior ghettos, cookie-cutter retirement communities and condominiums of days past."

Shaughnessy said some 47 per cent of boomers plan to age in place in their home, adding if they plan to move, they will want a neighbourhood with diversity and consideration for the environment.

She also said the Heather Glen lands are mostly marsh, and not within the settlement area boundaries. As well, she said Peel Region has determined there isn't enough water to support the 3,000 residents being envisioned.

Shaughnessy also wondered why there would be any support for a proposal like this, without studies or reports to justify it.

"The model of old is old," she said, adding the boomers want to be more individualistic.

The policies for the age-friendly community drew support from around the council table, but Shaughnessy had trouble finding colleagues who agreed with her on her Heather Glen position.

Beffort asked for that paragraph to be taken out of the motion so it could be voted on separately, but Shaughnessy resisted.

Beffort pointed out the idea was put before the Town's Seniors' Advisory Committee, where it drew a lot of support. He added he's discussed it with people in Caledon village and not encountered much opposition.

Beffort also pointed out the lands being eyed are agricultural, with wetlands and parts of the provincial Greenbelt, which couldn't be built on, so council has asked staff to monitor the situation.

"I don't think we can stop a concept," he added.

Director of Development Approval and Planning Policy Mary Hall told Councillor Jennifer Innis staff had attended some meetings on the proposal, adding there have been other meetings involving the Region and Province. She added staff was not lobbying on behalf of the developer.

Shaughnessy commented that planning staff had helped her write her motion and supported her position. Hall said staff might have helped with the wording, since they knew what Shaughnessy was trying to accomplish. But she said that didn't necessarily mean support.

She withdrew the motion as soon as Beffort's amendment to separate the Heather Glen provisions had passed.

Bolton's MasterChef says the experience was worth it

By Bill Rea

Sweet and sour meatballs on rice sounds pretty appealing, but it wasn't enough to tempt the palates of the judges on MasterChef Canada.

That was the entry put forth by Bolton resident Holli Miller, but it was not good enough to advance her to the top-16 of the competition.

She said the comments from the judges were positive.

"They did enjoy it," she said. "They suggested it was not MasterChef quality."

She also said one of the judges, Alvin Leung, thought that one of the meatballs wasn't cooked all the way through.

"I was a little disappointed," Miller said, but added she was happy that she had the experience. "It didn't knock me down. I still love to cook. It was just a bump in the road."

Miller, 24, was among 49 finalists to make it to this year's televised competition. They were all competing to make it into the Top 16 for the chance to win a $100,000 cash prize and the title of the next Canadian MasterChef.

She said MasterChef was one of her favourite shows, and her passion for cooking got her to audition for the competition.

Despite the setback, Miller said she's not discouraged.

"I would definitely try it again," she said, observing she now has a better idea of what the judges are looking for. "I would probably do something else."

“I thought it was pretty well prepared,”

Discuss marriage at Café Caledon

Café Caledon will host an evening to discuss the Meaning of Marriage and what makes a relationship a marriage March 4 from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

All are invited to attend this informative event and to share their thoughts.

Café Caledon takes place in a casual coffeehouse setting with free admission, and snacks and beverages available. It meets the first and third Wednesday of the month at the St. James’ Anglican Church, 6025 Old Church Rd. in Caledon East. Lots of parking at the back of the building.

Questions about Café Caledon may be directed to Mark Tiller at 905- 584-8506 or mark.cafecaledon@gmail.com was Councillor Jennifer Innis’s reaction to the budget, commenting that staff did a good job addressing the concerns.

She agreed the seven per cent utility hike was high, but the costs to taxpayers are still lower than other municipalities. She added the Region is going to be well positioned to provide the infrastructure needed for coming growth.

“They showed a lot of foresight, planning long-term,” she added.

Innis was pleased that $1.25 million has been set aside for municipal servicing at Bolton Camp.

Toronto and Region Conservation Authority made its budget presentation at last week’s meeting, stating the improvement at the Bolton facility will be a leading accessible regional attraction that provides innovative recreation, education and family programs. They will include youth innovation, as well as employment and training programs, pop-up shops and markets, festival and event space, fitness and recreation activities, food and art activities.

“I think that’s going to be a big asset,” Innis declared. “I’m very excited about the Bolton Camp.”

Councillor Johanna Downey also had praise for staff for balancing the needs of the community.

“The proposed increases are easily justified, as they forecast for incoming growth and build capital,” she observed, predicting there will be some difficult challenges moving forward.

“The Region of Peel is on a solid financial footing as identified and reaffirmed by our AAA credit rating, with less than 50 per cent of our Budget being funded through property taxes,” Dale added.

The Town of Caledon is expected to approve its 2015 budget this coming Tuesday (March 3).

Town holding meetings on Community Improvement Plans

Community Improvement Plans (CIP) are in the works for six of Caledon’s villages.

The Town will be holding two open houses and workshops in March to give the public more information on what’s being proposed.

The session planned for March 2 will be at Caledon Village Place. It will deal with the plans for Alton, Caledon village, Cheltenham and Inglewood. The March 30 meeting will be at Palgrave Public School, and will involve proposals for Mono Mills and Palgrave.

Both session will run from 7 until 9 p.m., with presentations starting at 7:15.

A CIP encourages revitalization, investment, improvement and promotes economic development in a village. Using a CIP, the Town may provide financial incentives like grants or loans to people who wish to improve or develop their property. The Plan may also establish a framework for Town-led initiatives, such as infrastructure improvements, streetscape improvements and other revitalization initiatives.

The study focuses on revitalizing the villages and improving the quality of life for residents.

The purpose of the meetings is to introduce the project and seek public input on the issues to be addressed by CIPs. Each meeting will include a presentation as well as a workshop.

Interested persons who are not able to attend are welcome to submit written comments to Paula Strachan, project manager of the Six Villages Community Improvement Plan at Paula.Strachan@caledon.ca

The materials presented at the open house will be posted on the Town’s web site at www.caledon.ca/sixvillages following the sessions.

NOTICE OF MEETING

Bolton Special Policy Area Study

You are invited to attend Public Open House #3 for the Bolton Special Policy Area Study. This study is intended to review and update the existing Bolton Special Policy Area (SPA) boundary and flood hazard policies based on new technical data and mapping for the Humber Watershed. At the Open House, the Town and MMM Group Limited will present its findings and next steps (Phase 2 and 3).

Your attendance and participation at this meeting are important for the Town as it is your opportunity to learn more about the Study and to provide your input on issues pertaining to the update of the SPA. The meeting is scheduled to be held on:

DATE: Tuesday, March 10, 2015
TIME: 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m.
(with a presentation scheduled at 7:30 p.m.)
PLACE: Rotary Place, 7 Rotarian Way, Bolton

WHY IS THIS IMPORTANT TO YOU?

As an approach to flood plain management, the SPA permits development in flood plain areas, which would otherwise not be permitted by Provincial policy. The SPA allows development and redevelopment while recognizing and minimizing the potential additional flood risks. The Bolton SPA was established in the historic core of Bolton because of its proximity to the Humber River. With new data and mapping, the SPA is being revised and existing SPA rules for development are being reviewed. This meeting will discuss the proposed changes to the SPA boundaries and policies. All changes will require approval from the flood plain regulator (i.e. TRCA), the Town and the Province. The current Bolton SPA was approved by the Province in 1986, through Official Plan Amendment 57 (By-law 85-65), which defined the boundary of the SPA and development requirements.

The community will have opportunities to participate in the Study through numerous public open houses, and a statutory public meeting during key stages of the process. A project webpage has been established where you can find updates about the Study, and staff contact information. Go to www.caledon.ca and search "Bolton special policy area study".

What is a Community Improvement Plan (CIP)? A CIP encourages revitalization, investment, improvement and promotes economic development. Using a CIP, the Town may provide financial incentives in the form of grants or loans to property owners who wish to improve or develop their property. The Plan may also establish a framework for Town-led initiatives, such as infrastructure improvements, streetscape improvements and other revitalization initiatives. The study focuses on revitalizing the villages and improving the quality of life for residents.

Who should attend? All interested persons or parties are strongly encouraged to attend one or both of these Open Houses / Workshops, including residents, business owners and other stakeholders in Alton, Caledon Village, Cheltenham, Inglewood, Mono Mills and Palgrave. There will be opportunities to discuss your ideas and provide input to Town staff and the consultants, to review background information and to provide written comments.

What is being discussed at the Open Houses? The purpose of the meetings is to introduce the project and seek public input on the issues to be addressed by the CIP. Each meeting will include a presentation as well as a workshop.

Interested persons who are not able to attend the Open Houses are welcome to submit written comments to the undersigned. The materials presented at the open house will be posted on the Town's web site at www.caledon.ca following the sessions. If you require an accessibility accommodation to attend or participate in the meeting or to access information in an alternative format, please contact Legislative Services at 905.584.2272 x.2366 or via email at accessibility@caledon.ca to make arrangements.

Caledon Town Hall Players have lots of Baggage

By Constance Scrafield

Take an IRA inspector, a pedantic, pain-in-the-neck sort of a chap whose baggage is mixed up with that of a lady book editor, who is very picky and opinionated. Introduce them to each other in order to restore each to the right baggage and see what fun will ensue.

The Caledon Townhall Players' (CTHP) production of playwright Sam Bobrick's comedy Baggage is currently running, as it pokes at the many foibles and failings of us all.

Baggage is directed by Jeff Bathurst, who, wearing the director's hat for the first time, promises Baggage will keep audiences laughing.

Although he has acted in many productions with CTHP, "this is my first time directing — it's a fun experience," he said. "I've been really lucky. It's a small cast of experienced actors. We have worked together before in several productions."

"There's a touch of Pygmalion, the one with the happy ending, in this play where she decides she's going to improve this man," he added.

Bathurst is pleased to be directing the play.

"It's good to try new things," he remarked of this recent challenge in his theatre life. "A director wears a lot of hats in community theatre. I was painting the sets the other day."

"I'm very pleased with the progress," he commented as rehearsals continued. "There's a lot of laughs in this show. It's quite funny. The man is just divorced — he was a terrible husband. She's a book editor — very picky — sees this guy she can reform."

Like many participants in community theatre, Bathurst joins other groups in other productions over any given year. He enjoys meeting his fellows in the community theatre circuit.

"Working with various groups keeps it fresh," is his thinking.

CTHP has a play committee, the members of which read lots of plays and present their choices for presentation at the theatre.

Said one of them, Jen Massicotte, "Baggage is quite a funny play. How many times do you lose your luggage, but how many times do you meet the people who have it? We submit our ideas to the Artistic Director, Heidi Kachel, and she picks the ones she likes. There are eight of us on the committee, but Heidi makes the final decision."

Mazzicotte's preference is for humorous plays.

"I want to laugh and I think most people do too," she said simply. "You have to give the audience what they want. We offer surveys and they seem to want comedies."

Kachel agreed.

"Baggage is a nice lighthearted, fun play. It deals with social quirks and ineptitudes."

Kachel has been Artistic Director with CTHP for six years, and has been with the group for 31 years.

As to what keeps her with the theatre group, she explained it with some humour.

"It's one of those things," she said. "I used to watch when Cheers was on TV and this just that kind of club, so welcoming. There's nothing to compare it to. It's home."

Over those many years, Kachel has done many things.

"I have acted in a number of shows and directed four plays," she said.

It might be almost said that Kachel's business, Harmonious Spaces, has an element of theatre to it.

She is a professional organizer and home staging. She enjoys the human side — how people feel about their personal spaces.

"It's not about the stuff," she said, "It's how people relate to it."

Now, having passed its 50-year milestone, CTHP is still going strong with the additional fun of one Saturday performance being matched with dinner at Knox United Church across the street from the theatre.

"People really like that and we usually sell out," Bathurst observed. "It's a great dinner — roast beef and then the show full of laughs afterwards. It makes for a great evening."

Baggage is playing Feb. 27 and 28 (includes the dinner show at 6:30 p.m. and a matinee that day at 2:15 p.m.)

The final weekend performances are March 6 and 7, with evening shows starting at 8:15 p.m.

Robert F. Hall Drama has another great adventure to L.A.

By Constance Scrafield

If you are done with the Winter Garden Theatre; been off-Broadway in New York; played in London, England; tickled the stage in Macerata, Italy; and performed in the Stratford Festival with your own version of Taming of the Shrew, where do you go next?

To the Bathurst Theatre in Los Angeles, of course.

Or you do if you are participating with Hall Drama, as run by co-directors and teachers Messrs Adriano and Ciccotelli at Robert F Hall Catholic Secondary School.

This year, they are presenting their own version of Black Comedy by British playwright Peter Shaffer. The nub of this farce is the reversal of light and dark: when the lights are on, the play is in darkness and, should the lights go off, all is revealed in the play.

Combine this with brilliant slap stick and comedic dialogue, and you have all the fun that makes farce such great entertainment.

Learn to care for land and water with CVC

Find out how to make the most of a rural property with guidance from Credit Valley Conservation (CVC).

CVC invites landowners to participate in its upcoming Caring for Your Land and Water workshop. The event takes place March 7, from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Centre 2000, Erin.

“This workshop is a great way for landowners to learn about rural property management,” said CVC Director of Restoration and Stewardship Mike Puddister. “We provide landowners with tools and information to make environmental improvements on their property.”

Workshop participants will create a Landowner Action Plan for their properties and will be eligible to apply for a new CVC funding program for rural landowners. The Landowner Action Fund provides grants to rural landowners for environmental projects, such as well abandonment, stream restoration, tree planting, invasive plant control, native plant gardening and more. Grant funding ranges from 50 to 100 per cent. Grants are subject to eligibility and grant caps.

Lunch will be provided at the workshop and all participants will receive custom maps of their property.

Workshops are free, thanks to funding from CVC's regional and municipal partners. Interested landowners should reside in the Credit River watershed and own at least one acre of rural property. Register by Feb. 27 at www.creditvalleyca.ca/events

Beware of door-to-door water heater salespeople

Peel Region is advising residents to be cautious when approached by anyone offering to inspect or sell a hot water heater or water filtration system.

Neither the Region nor its contractors knock on residents' doors to offer this service.

Recently, residents in Brampton and Mississauga have reported that individuals from a filtration company have attempted to gain entry to their homes to inspect their hot water heaters or sell a water filtration system or perform water tests. The Region would like to emphasize that these individuals do not work for the Region of Peel or its contractor Neptune Technology Group Canada.

Currently, the Region of Peel is conducting a mandatory Water Meter Replacement Program to replace outdated meters that have been in service for 20 years or more in Mississauga. Residents who must participate will be contacted by mail with a letter that instructs them to book an appointment with Neptune to have this work completed. All work will be done on an appointment basis. Neptune representatives will only contact residents at their door in the event that an appointment has not been booked.

All Neptune Water Meter Installers are uniformed, carry proper and visible identification and have Region of Peel decals on or in their vehicles. Residents are strongly advised to view this identification before permitting the service person to enter their home.

As to the plot, well, no disappointment there.

Brindsley, a young sculptor, is about to have a visit from a wealthy art collector and his prospective father-in-law. With a view to impressing both, he and his fiancé Carol “borrow” several pieces of antique furniture from his neighbour, who is currently away for the weekend. From there, there are misinterpretations, chaos of a power outage, ebb and flow of characters, half-lies and full rages. This is all lovely stuff and a proper challenge for the talents of the students performing in this Hall Drama presentation.

We had the chance to pay a visit to the school during a rehearsal late last week and took the opportunity to talk to the students and the two teachers.

“It is a very physical play,” Rob Ciccotelli told us.

“Very slap stick.”

There is a couch in the centre of the set.

“We brought in a film of Dick van Dyke doing his flip over the couch so that Brindsley could learn to do it,” Ciccotelli said.

“Learning to do it” has been going on since October when rehearsals began.

“We have our dancers teaching the others how to fall,” Ciccotelli explained.

“Early on, we put a blindfold on them to teach them about body language when you can't see. In acting, usually you make eye contact, but when it's dark, you don't. So, they're acting as though they are in the dark.”

“It's body language that tells the story and promotes the illusion,” Frank Adriano added, “so, it's dark in the beginning for about eight minutes.”

They outlined how they came to choose this play for this year.

“Adriano and I saw it (the play) about five years ago. We told each other when we have the right cast, we'll do this show,” Ciccotelli recalled. “One of the reasons this play appealed to us is that all the rules they've learned are all gone — it brings out the acting skills up a bit.”

“This year, with this cast, it was the right play,” Adriano commented. “It's got to be finally balanced — it's pushing us out of our comfort zone.”

“It's not a typical play,” One of the students put in. “Learning for the actor — a new experience for the audience.”

In addition to performing the whole several times, including the once at the Bathurst Theatre in L.A, the students are also acting in the Sears Ontario Drama Festival in Toronto, where they are restricted to 50 minutes, not 10 seconds more.

“Ten seconds after the 50 minutes and you're disqualified,” Adriano warned them.

This means cutting as much as half an hour out of the entire show.

“It's really tricky with all the variables,” he pointed out. “Taking into account laughter (we hope) from the audience and the physicality of the content.”

The trick to choosing the right play for Hall Drama each year depends on who signs up, not only for the show but also for the trip that the production will take. Next year, they are planning to go to London and Paris with Black Comedy.

One thing the teachers wanted to make clear is that

Editorial

Is there a problem in Harper's caucus?

The last couple of weeks saw the continuation of the soap opera that has represented the political career of Eve Adams; at least her career in federal politics.

The former Mississauga City and Peel Regional councillor crossed the floor of the House of Commons, abandoning her Conservative roots to embrace Liberalism, Justin Trudeau style.

Now it is true that Adams has run into problems that have gained a certain amount of national prominence, and it looks like she can take the credit for most of her troubles. It was reported that she had already been told she would not be allowed to carry the Conservative Party colours in any riding in Canada in the upcoming federal election.

But there is something that might be rather systemic in the way Harper's caucus operates, with Adams being the latest of a number of MPs who have abandoned his leadership; or been kicked out.

We all remember Belinda Stronach, who was elected as a Conservative under Harper's leadership and that memorable morning in May 2005 when she crossed the floor of the House and became a Liberal (and cabinet minister too).

There have been other cases in which Harper has demonstrated a certain lacking when it comes to getting along with his caucus.

In 2006, Garth Turner, who had previously represented Caledon in the House of Commons, was unceremoniously bounced from caucus. A couple of years later, Helena Guergis was forced to leave both the cabinet and caucus. To the best of our knowledge, there has never been a clear reason given for either move; not to Turner or Guergis or to their constituents.

As was the case with Adams, any one of these instances could possibly be explained away. But as they become more frequent, the issue of leadership must come into play. One would hope that effective leaders would be able to keep their followers in line.

And by that, we don't mean having MPs salute their leaders, get in line and do as they're told. No, Canadians expect more than that from their MPs.

The people who sit in the House of Commons were not just randomly gathered off the street, handed fancy titles and pretty good pay cheques just to sit there and follow marching orders. With very few exceptions, these are high-calibre people who have endured a demanding and competitive process to get where they are. They have their brains and their strengths, and they are expected to use them, and use them to the benefit of their constituents, as well as the country as a whole.

As is often the case when a Parliamentary crosses the floor, there have been suggestions that there should be restrictions on MPs' ability to do that.

Let's all hope that never happens.

True, it could be argued that such a move on the part of an MP is a betrayal of the voters who sent that person to Ottawa. That might have been particularly the case in February 2006, when David Emerson crossed the floor to sit as a Conservative (and minister) just weeks after being elected as a Liberal.

But if we want high-calibre people representing us in Ottawa, and if we're prepared to pay them accordingly, then we have to be ready to let them think and act with a certain amount of independence.

If floor crossings become too frequent, then it might be seen as a reflection on the leader's ability to lead.

Harper has a reputation of being able to boss people around. But can he lead?

Drawings are not offensive

There has been a little bit of controversy surrounding Peel Works decision to do an adaptation of the famous March of Progress drawing for their latest recycling campaign.

From Mississauga to Brampton to Caledon, the shock waves reverberated through a few offended citizens and councillors.

Some were offended by the nakedness (side view only), others thought it was racist, and others thought it promoted evolution. Wow. Welcome to the 21st century.

First, evolution does not need any promotion. The scientists practising in this field of study only quibble about the details and no longer consider it a theory, but biological fact. Secondly, the drawing is more sexist than racist since it only features an everyman human. Thirdly, remember that Adam and Eve had to wear clothes because they sinned — nakedness was the holy state. Just not very smart in these temperatures.

When we can no longer keep our sense of humour, and start to get all bent out of shape over a clever ruse to get our attention for better recycling and garbage disposal, let's remember what happened the last time the religious right got upset over a cartoon.

Thank you Peel Works, for keeping us smiling and helping us clean up our act.

Caledon

Not much time for TV

I heard an interesting item on talk radio a couple of days ago.

It was basically to the effect that people don't watch as many TV programs as they used to.

That didn't surprise me much. That fact is I don't waste nearly as much time as I used to in front of what my parents used to call "the idiot box."

For one thing, I don't have time. For another, there are too many stations available these days. If I'm going to waste time watching the tube, I'm going to get selective. For example, I generally don't bother with any TV series because I have no way of knowing if I'll be able to keep up with it. On the other hand, I have hung around the TV most Sunday nights as my wife watches Madam Secretary, which deals with some woman who managed to become American Secretary of State for some reason. I was the one who first suggested we start watching it, if only because the idea intrigued me (I think my interest in politics had something to do with it) and Sunday is a night that I'm usually (not always) home. But I will confess the show has grabbed Beth a lot more than it has me.

Beyond that, I haven't followed a series since The West Wing went off the air, and the last season of that show was such a creative write-off that I hardly missed it.

So you don't get the wrong idea, I do watch some TV. Indeed, as I write this, I'm seated at the kitchen table while Beth watches a rerun of Jurassic Park, a film we saw together early in our dating days — Fact is I enjoyed the company a lot more than I enjoyed the movie, and things haven't changed.

Beth generally has charge of the remote in our household, and since I often work nights, I figure I really have no business raising an objection. I'll occasionally come home while she's watching a "chick flick" (her words, not mine). She also has a thing for crime dramas, so I'll often walk in the door and join the investigation of some hideous murder already in progress.

I'm married. I know my place. I don't interfere.

But the bulk of my channel viewing falls roughly into three categories.

Beth is into sports, so I often come home to find her sitting on the couch watching the Leafs lose. At the risk of sounding cynical, I sometimes come home to find her sitting on the couch watching the Leafs win. Life can be so strange. And in the weeks to come, I expect to come home to find her watching the Blue Jays — they might actually win. And while she's not much of a football fan, Beth raised little fuss over me watching the Super Bowl a couple of weeks ago.

I also enjoy watching news and documentaries. Although Tuesday is deadline day for the paper and I usually have to work late (midnight is not uncommon), I made a point of getting home early enough one recent Tuesday to watch President Barack Obama's State of the Union address. I also try to watch 60 Minutes, which is usually followed by Madam Secretary — Good thing, since Beth has always frowned when I try to watch The Simpsons. And if I hear of a good documentary coming on, I try to heap lots of charm on my spouse for permission to watch it, hoping there's not a "chick flick" on a competing channel

(didn't I already state that I know my place?)

The other category is movies. Granted, I love many of the classics (Casablanca is my favourite), but there have been some pretty good movies in the last couple of years, such as the King's Speech and Lincoln. I thought it was a grand evening last Saturday night when I learned two Humphrey Bogart classics were on right after each other on one of the stations we get (The Harder They Fall and The Caine Mutiny).

Actually there are lots of great movies, that don't have Bogey telling Sam to "play it," that can be part of a wonderful way to spend an evening, and Beth and I have enjoyed many of them on our tube, from silents to recent Oscar powerhouses.

Oh yeah, we took out time Sunday night to watch the Academy Awards (at least as long as I could stay awake), even if we hadn't seen any of the movies that were nominated. I paid to see only one movie in the last year, and was a little surprised that it hadn't been nominated for anything.

Our TV (we only have one) still sees a lot of use, although we frequently don't bother with the channel-hopping.

I have quite a library of movies on tape, and our collection of DVDs is constantly growing. One of the nice things about my job is I frequently have to attend sales, bazaars, etc., and I usually make a point of checking on the movie inventory. My tape of Gone With the Wind hadn't even been opened when I grabbed it at one such church sale.

It is a fact that I will frequently ask Beth, on those infrequent evenings when I'm home and we have nothing else pressing, if there's anything good on the tube. If the answer is in the negative, we start going through the shelves of tapes and DVDs. And like I stated above, the collection is pretty good.

We have all six Star Wars movies (one of my Christmas presents to Beth a couple of years ago), and there are some discs with TV shows. We have a small collection of Perry Mason classic episodes, and Beth, for Christmas last year, bought me the set of first-season episodes of the original Star Trek series. I often find a session of watching Trelane a great pick-me-up (Trekkers, of course, know precisely what I'm referring to — the rest of you don't know what you're missing).

I sort of had the idea that Beth was going to buy me the set of second-season episodes for the Christmas we've just had. In fact, she's indicated that was what she was thinking, but she couldn't find it. Thus, I had to settle for the entire seven-year offerings of Hill Street Blues. Life is tough, but we're getting through it. As of this writing, we're nicely into the second season, not yet to the point at which I got interested in the show during the initial run.

And the internet is a great source for good viewing. My appetite has been whetted lots of times by items I have found just by Googling. I have found some great documentaries on the net, enabling me to add to my knowledge of a lot of topics that are of interest to me.

So who needs TV? In the last week, on the internet, I found a brief, but interesting, account of the crash of R101.

If you're curious about R101, turn off the idiot box and Google.

Three ongoing police investigations that Conservatives are watching

All elected officials are entrusted by the people to look out for and promote the interests of all Ontarians, and respect the law.

Unfortunately, the people's trust has been tested too many times and for too long by this Liberal government. Scandal after scandal, and police investigation after police investigation, we continue to see this government put their political interests ahead of the interests of the people of Ontario.

There are currently an unprecedented three police investigations for three different crimes, but all have one thing in common — a complete disregard of the people of Ontario.

In early 2012, the OPP began, and today continue to investigate Ornge Air Ambulance Service in regards to questions about Ornge's finances. As a result of former Ornge CEO Chris Mazza's record of mismanagement, Ornge has been a financial mess and lacked proper oversight, which has resulted in millions of taxpayer's dollars being wasted. This is all because of this government's total disregard in oversight.

This government chose to ignore repeated warnings about the financial mess and other problems at Ornge for many years. Now the people of Ontario are paying for it, and the police are continuing their investigation.

Just days prior to the 2011 provincial election, this government decided to cancel the construction of two gas plants in Mississauga and Oakville. This was nothing more than a political decision to save Liberal seats in the 2011 provincial election. Liberal employees then tried to hide information by deleting emails pertaining to the cancellation of the two gas plants. As a result, the OPP has been called in to look into the matter to find the missing information that was deleted and destroyed. This is the perfect example of the government putting their political interests ahead of the interests of Ontarians, and the police are continuing their investigation.

Finally, in the lead up to the Sudbury by-election, the Liberal's have been accused of bribing a political candidate. Reports have surfaced that the Liberal's allegedly attempted to bribe former Liberal candidate Andrew Olivier, to not run as their candidate in the by-election. The OPP has opened an investigation into this matter, and they believe laws were broken. This government only cares about staying in power and clearly don't care if it comes at some cost.

Whether it is negligence, or destruction of evidence, or bribery, they all have one thing in common and that is they are allegations that laws have been broken. My Progressive Conservative colleagues and I will continue to raise these scandals because the people of Ontario deserve to know if laws were broken, and those responsible will be held accountable.

United Way issues challenge to make it through 'The Longest Night'

United Way of Peel Region challenges residents to join the movement in creating awareness and generating support by making it through The Longest Night.

Any given night, there are between 169,000 and 195,000 individuals in Caledon, Brampton and Mississauga who are experiencing poverty and struggling to afford housing. With a wait list of 12,077, Peel has one of the longest social housing wait lists in the country.

"United Way of Peel Region focuses on poverty — reducing it, preventing it and supporting those who are experiencing poverty right now," observed United Way President and CEO Shelley White. "For those struggling to make ends meet, the threat of homelessness is very real. In our community, homelessness looks different — some families and individuals who lose their homes are turning to their cars for shelter."

Spending the night in your car can make for one of the longest nights of your life. It's uncomfortable. It's difficult and it's cold, but it's a reality for many.

Community members in Peel pledge to sleep in their cars for the night Feb. 27 to help raise awareness and funds for United Way of Peel Region's efforts to reduce poverty in the region. The community will be brought together virtually through pictures, videos and messages. Anyone can join the conversation at #LongestNight-Peel

This unique and immersive experience is designed to help people understand the struggles that some of their neighbours face daily. After all, there are no homeless people — there are human beings experiencing homelessness. If people's ways of thinking can be changed, it would make a world of difference.

Join agents of change from across Caledon, Brampton and Mississauga and help raise support and awareness for United Way of Peel Region's efforts to reduce poverty in the region.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Claire Hoy

It was the late George Orwell who once quipped that political language "is designed to make lies sound truthful and murder respectable, and to give an appearance of solidity to pure wind."

Which brings us, of course, to Ontario Premier Kathleen Wynne and her (mis) handling of serious accusations of bribery being leveled against two of her party apparatchiks.

Obviously, we're not talking about making murder respectable, but we are talking about Wynne's attempt to deflect the accusations by accusing both the Tories and NDP of "hypocrisy" for doing the same thing her people did.

First, it's not the same thing at all. And second, even if it were, what sort of political moral compass is Wynne waving around by suggesting that it's okay for her and/or her surrogates to break the law — assuming that's the ultimate outcome of this scandal — just because her opponents may have done something they shouldn't have?

By now, you're likely familiar with the details.

Ontario's Chief Electoral Officer Greg Essensa, in what he called an "unprecedented" ruling, found that two senior Liberal operatives, Patricia Sorbara — who is Wynne's deputy chief of staff — and Gerry Loughheed, a party official and chairman of the Greater Sudbury Police Services Board, appear to have broken Ontario bribery laws by offering former Liberal candidate Andrew Olivier a job in exchange for stepping down as the party's candidate in the recent Sudbury by-election race.

The Liberals wanted to bump Olivier — a paraplegic — in favour of Glenn Thi-beault, a federal NDP MP who switched parties to run provincially for the Liberals and who eventually won the by-election.

In their attempts to get Olivier to step aside quietly and make room for the NDP turncoat, both Loughheed and Sorbara contacted him and it's pretty clear from the tapes made by Olivier — he tapes everything because it's too difficult for him to write notes — that they offered him a myriad of jobs in return for his vacating his attempt to run again for the Liberals.

In the face of initial denials from the Liberals, Wynne included, that any conversations of that nature took place, Olivier ultimately turned the tapes over to the police and elections officials. Essensa, having investigated the matter, then said "it is my opinion" that the actions of the two Liberals "constitute an apparent contravention" of anti-bribery provisions in the law.

That led to the OPP getting involved, and at the time of this writing that investigation is ongoing and no charges have been laid. Yet.

Loughheed is heard on tape telling Olivier "I come to you on behalf of the premier ... to ask you if you would consider stepping down." He then adds "The premier wants to talk to you. They would like to present options in terms of appointments, jobs, whatever, that you and her and Pat Sorbora could talk about."

For her part, Sorbara was later caught on tape discussing a "full-time or part-time job" for Olivier who, by the way, declined their advances and finished a respectable third as an independent candidate in the by-election.

And now the doublespeak.

You would hope that leaders with integrity would do the proper thing and step aside — or that Wynne would set them aside — until this matter is resolved one way or the other.

Not Wynne, however. Instead of being contrite or the least bit concerned about the morality of her operatives, she has come out guns blazing, denying any improprieties and adding that, anyway, she has been approached in the past by Tories and New Democrats (whom she hasn't named) seeking jobs in return for stepping aside.

Even if that is true, it's not the same thing.

It's one thing for a politician, or anybody else for that matter, to seek a patronage post. Nothing illegal there. But it is illegal to offer an inducement for somebody to step down as a candidate.

It gets worse. Despite the fact that any reasonable person reading the transcript of those tapes would conclude that Olivier was offered bribes to step down, Wynne insists that "any suggestion that anything was offered in exchange for any action is false. The fact is that we were working to keep this young man in the process. That's what Patricia Sorbara was doing."

Really? Not only that, says Wynne, whatever Sorbara was actually doing she wasn't doing it as Wynne's deputy chief of staff but was doing it in her dual role as the party's chief election organizer, and therefore, until charges are laid, there is no need for either Sorbara or Loughheed to step aside.

It is not clear whether Wynne made these absurd arguments in her role as premier of Ontario or her role as head of the Ontario Liberal Party, but there you have it.

Hall Wolfpack squeak out ROPSSA victory in Mississauga

By Jake Courtepatte
After a hard-fought battle between two of the top teams in high school hockey's ROPSSAA North Conference, the Robert F. Hall Wolfpack emerged victorious to head to the league semifinals. They took on the St. Francis Xavier Tigers last Wednesday at Iceland Arena in Mississauga, entering the playoffs after posting a 9-0 regular season record. With the severely undermanned Xavier bench dressing only nine players, Hall set the pace early by delivering a number of big hits. The Tigers retaliated with a penalty less than three minutes into the game, but were able to kill it off with some nice defensive work to keep the Wolfpack players to the outside. With Hall going back to the powerplay for a tripping call as soon as the first one expired, the Tigers seemed determined to shoot themselves in the foot. However, most of the two minutes was spent in the Wolfpack end, with Xavier eventually opening the scoring for the 1-0 lead. The momentum seemingly switched, the Wolfpack picked up a slashing call in their own zone to head into the break down a man. On the penalty kill to start the second, a tipped shot had the Xavier players thinking they scored, with the refs ruling that the puck hit the post and did not cross the line. Despite heavy pressure from the Tigers' offense, Christian Hauck eventually tied the game at one on a rebound that bounced right to his stick in the slot. That would open the door for Hall, scoring 20 seconds apart midway through the second to jump out to a 3-1 lead. But with time winding down in the period, the game was far from over. A miscommunication between the Hall goaltender and his defencemen left the puck sitting all alone in front, allowing an alert Xavier player to bury it in the open cage to cut the lead to one. The highlight of the game came early in the third period, when Noah Do Paco fell to his knees while corralling a puck at the top of the Xavier circle. From his knees, he wristed the puck past the unprepared goaltender for what would eventually be the game winner. Despite a few close calls after an early goalie-pull, the Wolfpack held on for a 4-3 victory and a berth in the semifinal. The Wolfpack will vie for a spot in the championship game on the big stage, with the semifinal game being held at the 5,500-seat Hershey Centre in Mississauga. Mayfield Secondary School awaits a challenger for ROPSSAA supremacy, having already defeated Philip Pocock in a lopsided 6-0 win Monday.

Noah Do Paco celebrates his game-winning goal against the St. Francis Xavier Tigers last Wednesday.

Minor bantam Hawks heading to quarter-finals

The Caledon Hawks minor bantam AA team has gone undefeated on home ice in regular season play this season, setting a record for a 2001 team at the AA level. The season took off quickly as the AAs rose early to second place in the Bowen Division of the Tri-County League. They battled each team as they landed on Caledon turf. The height of their success was achieved when the Hawks beat the first place Burlington team, and then finished their last home game Dec. 22 with a win against the Woolwich Wildcats — both on home ice. Regular season statistics included nine shutouts, 100 goals for the Hawks and only 42 against, for a team record of 22-4-2, holding on to second place overall. Coaching staff are very proud of the boys' accomplishment to date and look forward to an exciting OMHA playdown run. The Hawks have now advanced to the quarter-finals of the OMHA and will be competing against Belle River in the upcoming weeks for their next playoff spot. The team would like to thank sponsors KMR Specialty Steel Ltd., E.A.M.A. Precision Machine and Tool Co., Schneider Electric, Calder Consulting, GFK Research, Crunch Research, Scotiabank, Agway Metals Inc., Dr. Robert Ames, Bargain Tire Auto Centres, Canadian Black Belt Academy, Dr. Andrew Howarth, Grogan/Walsh Group.

Little Rock curlers take part in Bonspiel at Chingaucousy

By Shellee Morning
 King Curling Club

Three Little Rock teams recently participated in the Little Rock with a Heart Invitational Bonspiel at the Chingaucousy Curling Club and for some, this was a whole new experience.

These future curling stars who practise/play once a week at the King Curling Club not only enjoyed their first ever spiel, but more importantly received the best lessons they can get in the game of curling — real game playing.

The Little Rock with a Heart Bonspiel welcomed clubs from the Brampton, Hamilton, Milton, Oakville and Unionville areas for a six-end, two-game format.

Jitta ‘steals’ the show
 Nine year old skip Jody Jitta, and his team of David Maan playing vice, Adrian Spataro in second, and Ethan Olivera as lead, opened their round at the Chingaucousy Spiel with a game against Team Milton.

The more experienced Milton team won the toss for hammer in the first and proceeded to sink a sea of rocks into the rings, applying pressure to the nervous King squad. Skipper Jitta stared down the broom for his target and executed a magnificent draw behind cover to “steal” the first end. Lightening the tension load, the King kids tightened their grip, allowing their skip to make the perfect shot in each end afterwards and finally winning the multiple-steals game.

The second game against Hamilton-Victoria was quite a bit more challenging for the nine to 11 year old youngsters. David Maan, who is now officially nicknamed “Mr. Double Take-Out,” said “why take out one rock when you can take out two,” did just that. Achieving double take outs on numerous occasions in the game rewarded him with a personal best performance. Although they were unable to take over their opponents, the kids had a great time and eagerly announced they want to do more spiels next year.

Last-minute team change
 Team 2 consisted of Jacob Switzer, Ethan Walsh, Rosie Fragomen and Noah Harbridge and was put together at the last minute due to the original teams’ hockey playoff schedule.

For both Rosie and Ethan, it was their very first bonspiel experience and without having any time to practise as a team, the kids did very well. Learning strategy and rock weight is a big part of curling and this team, even though they lost both games, executed some great guards and made a few hits that will surely build their confidence. A tremendous amount of knowledge for understanding the game was collected by them all, and the chance to meet new friends and share some laughter was all a part of the weekend event. Traditional handshakes were given, then it was off to the snack table for treats and sweets.

These youngsters all ranging in age from eight to 10, did their coaches proud in the way they handled themselves, both on and off ice.

Smiles win over
 Team 3 was led by 12-year-old Ethan Mumford, who guided his team of Eric Mumford, 10, Tayah Wilkins, 8, and Katerina Decoste, 8, with confidence and poise.

This was a first time bonspiel for both Tayah and Katerina, and both girls didn’t appear to be nervous at all. In fact, the smiles that emerged on their faces from the first rock thrown to the last won over the coaches, parents and fellow curlers. Even though the team lost both their games, Eric called a great game with shots that came up just inches short of a victory.

Next up for the Little Rockers is the Shamrock Spiel, hosted by the King Club, scheduled for March 18 and open to Little Rock and Bantam curlers.

Finishing off their season will be a trip to the Timbit Curling Championships, which is a three-day event with teams coming from all across Ontario.

There is lots of exciting curling yet to happen for future curling stars and everyone at the King Curling Club wishes them best of luck and great curling for their next two events.

Nine-year-old skip Cody Jitta (far right), seen here with team mates lead Ethan Olivera, 9, second Adrian Spataro, 11, and vice David Maan, 11, led his team to victory at the Little Rock with a Heart Bonspiel held at the Chingaucousy Curling Club.
