Parents protest sex-ed curriculum at MPPs' offices

By Bill Rea

With another school year starting this week, a lot of attention is being paid to the new sex-ed curriculum.

Rallies were held last Wednesday outside the constituency offices of MPPs all over the province, including Dufferin-Caledon's Sylvia Jones. The protests were organized by Campaign Life Coalition.

Rev. Roy Trepanier, executive director of Ezra Canada, was leading the small protest outside Jones' Bolton office.

He was not pleased with a number of points in the curriculum, pointing to a flyer issued by the coalition that cited "examples of controversial curriculum content." One of the items he mentioned was discussing genitalia and sexual consent with Grade 1 students.

"This is all the most horrible thing," he said. "A child's mind isn't even developed."

"It's organized mind control of youth," he added.

Other points the coalition object to, according to the flyer, is the teaching of gender theory in Grade 3, encouragement of masturbation to Grade 6 students and discussing matters like anal intercourse, oral sex and sexual pleasure with Grade 7 students.

Attendance at the protests was encouraged by the Canadian Families Alliance, which issued a statement Friday. "We are very pleased with the attention and coverage of nearly every MPP's office," stated Jotvinder Sodhi, president of HOWA Voice of Parents. "We will keep growing parental opposition in every riding until the 2018 election to make this a ballot question. MPPs must choose what they value more: Keeping their jobs by standing up for the rights of parents, or blind obedience to a party leader who insults and attacks the voters she claims to represent."

Trepanier was disappointed more people weren't out at

Trudeau and Paul Martin rally the faithful in Brampton

By Bill Rea

Liberals in Peel Region, and throughout the Greater Toronto Area (GTA) are showing lots of enthusiasm as the current federal election campaign goes on.

That was in evidence recently, as party faithful, including more than 30 candidates, packed a Brampton convention hall to hear from Leader Justin Trudeau and former prime minister Paul Martin.

Finances and the economy took up a lot of remarks from both men, Martin having been finance minister before he was PM.

He said Liberals understand who makes the economy work, adding it's people, with good families who want to raise their children. He also said Liberals understand that they can invest in people's needs.

The only goal the Conservatives have is to fight against their own deficit.

Martin commented that when the Conservatives came to power, the previous Liberal government had left them at surplus of $13 billion. The national debt has increased by about $150 billion since then.

Martin also charged the government of Prime Minister Stephen Harper refuses to bring the Canada Pension Plan up to date, and has refused to work with Premier Kathleen Wynne to fill the gap.

As well, he said there can't be a strong economy without democratic institutions.

Countries that don't have strong economies have government institutions that have been abused, he said.

Martin charged that Harper and the Conservatives have been attacking these institutions, like the Parliamentary Budget Office and the Privacy Commissioner.

"They're non-stop trying to undermined the Parliament of Canada," he charged.

He also said the Prime Minister's Office (PMO) had referred to a committee of Parliament "as a lot of useless red tape."

Progressive Canadian Party Leader (and former local MP) Sinclair Stevens has stated he personally and the party share the concern raised by former prime minister Joe Clark on the Syrian refugee crisis.

“As a member of the Clark Cabinet at the time of the Vietnamese ‘boat people’ crisis in 1979, I was part of a government that took human rights and the plight of refugees very seriously,” Stevens said. “We acted. Numbers to be accepted were raised to 50,000.”

“As in the Tehran crisis, we did not posture for political or election purposes, even though we quickly found ourselves in a second election campaign later that year.”

"That's not my country," Martin declared, adding the Tories are only paying attention to those who agree with them. "They have turned their backs on every Canadian who doesn't think like they do."

In his remarks, Trudeau said Martin reminds Canadians what real leadership is.

He also thanked the faithful for all their enthusiasm and hard work, also making sure to ask them, “Are we ready for real change?”

Trudeau said the current election is an important one, “and I am determined to win it.”

He also said the Conservatives are old and tired, and that they've run out of ideas. He added they have no plans to make the economy grow, or to create jobs.

Trudeau added Canadians don't trust Harper.

"That's what happens when you mislead Parliament and the Canadian people," he

PC Party Leader Stevens joins Joe Clark on refugees

he added. "We acted decisively. We saved lives. That is what Canadians expect. That is what Canadians demand now."

“Liberal governments did so too, with no more or less success,” Stevens observed. “The Progressive Conservative party was a very different party, a very different government, than the party and government led by Mr. Harper today.”

Clark, who was Canada's prime minister in 1979 and early 1980, as well as foreign minister in the Mulroney government, which took leadership in North America and in the Commonwealth opposing apartheid and working diplomatically to free Nelson Mandela, recently cited in interviews the important work his Progressive Conservative government and later governments did at that time. The Clark interviews noted the difficulties of security and impossible scale of the problems faced by his and later governments posed by refugee emergencies, urging the same determination by the Canadian government today and by the new government of Canada after the Oct. 19 election.

"Canadians expect our government to take a leadership role in international emergencies and to be a presence on the world stage," Stevens declared. "We've lost that part of reputation in recent years because of the agenda-driven Harper government. We must do better."

Children meet some interesting animals

Nicole Young of Rovili's Pet World in Bolton took some of her animal friends to Caledon Parent-Child Centre recently to show the off to the youngsters there. Everyone was pretty impressed with this blue-tongue Skink. Some of the children were a little reluctant to pet Gin, this 10-year-old bald python, but not all of them. Walter the turtle was a little shy, and wouldn't come out of his shell.

Albion Hills Community Farm is a non-profit operation that promotes understanding of local food and sustainable agriculture through education, conservation and community partnerships.

It draws a lot of support from the community, and gives back as well, by providing locally grown food to the area, and through the Exchange in Bolton.

Shannon Lee from Orangeville is in her second year of managing the farm. A farmer since she was in her teens, she has a simple explanation for her work.

"I love it," she said. "I want to connect to where my food comes from and help other people do the same."

Trudeau pleased with economic leadership shown by his team remarked. "It's hard to tell whether Mr. Harper is running a campaign or just plain running."

Trudeau said the Liberals have plans to put more money into the pockets of families. He said they will do that by cutting taxes for the middle class and increasing taxes for the top one per cent of the population. In contrast, he said NDP Leader Tom Mulcair wants to take at least $1 billion out of the economy during a recession.

He also observed one of the reasons for the growth in the middle class in the last generation is because more women entered and stayed in the workforce. Yet both Harper and Mulcair have declined to take part in a debate on women's issues. "We all know that Mr. Harper doesn't get it," he remarked, "and now we know Mr. Mulcair doesn't get it."

"Women's issues are everyone's issues," he added.

Trudeau said he's impressed with the strong economic leadership that's represented by his team. He also stressed the need to invest in jobs and growth, adding it will make Canada strong again, as it was before Harper.

"You need to know how to make it happen," he said, adding Most Canadians understand it. He also said his major disagreement with Harper is over "his lack of ambition for our country."

Trudeau charged that Harper acts like he's the best manager of everything.

"The only real risk is going to be by sticking with the failed plan of Stephen Harper," he said.

Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau and former prime minister Paul Martin addressed a hall full of enthusiastic supporters in Brampton recently.

Is PMO behind the Tories’ plunge?

There was a time when we were told Canada was governed by Parliament when it was sitting and by the federal cabinet the rest of the year.

But during the current long election campaign, we’ve heard nothing about the federal cabinet having met. The reality seems to be that the country is being governed by the Prime Minister’s Office, and likely has been since MPs left June 19 for what they undoubtedly expected would be a long summer holiday (we wonder how many of them had advance notice that Prime Minister Stephen Harper would launch an 11-week election campaign Civic Holiday weekend).

We’ll likely never know who it was in the PMO or the Conservative party that pushed the idea of the long campaign, but we doubt that it was the party caucus, whose members didn’t relish the thought of having to be out in the hustings all August.

However, the pundits have suggested the early election call was designed mainly to benefit the Tories in two ways, by allowing them to outspend their opponents and by limiting the ability of “third parties” to participate in the campaign with their own advertising.

Whatever the case, the idea seems to have backfired. Although the campaign started with the Conservatives out front and the main question being whether the slim lead over the NDP could be built upon to garner a fresh majority, the latest polling has the NDP and Liberals in a virtual tie for the lead and the Tories as far back in third place as the Liberals were in early August.

New polling released Monday night had the NDP on top with just under 33 per cent, the Liberals in second at 30.8 per cent and the Tories down to just over 26 per cent.

According to pollster Nik Nanos, the NDP have gained three percentage points and the Liberals two in the past month while the Tories dropped five points.

Interestingly, other polls have disclosed the existence of a huge pool of voters who haven’t yet made up their minds and may wind up voting for either the Liberals or NDP, depending on which party has a lead in the final days of campaigning.

Another interesting factor is a changing public perception of the three party leaders’ potential as occupants of the PMO. Initially, Harper was well out front, with NDP Leader Tom Mulcair in second place and Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau a dismal third — due, no doubt in part to Conservative attack ads portraying him as “just not ready.”

The latest polling shows the three leaders in a virtual dead heat, but with Harper slightly behind the two opposition leaders.

So how does one account for the apparent drop in support for the governing party?

One factor might well be the disclosures during the trial of Senator Mike Duffy of the role played by the PMO in trying to obfuscate, cover up and even lie about Nigel Wright’s $90,000-plus personal payment of Duffy’s challenged expenses.

But if the most recent polling came in the wake of world reaction to the worsening Syrian refugee crisis and in particular the sight of the body of a dead child on the Turkish beach, and another reason was Harper’s reaction to the news.

After Mulcair and Trudeau had both called for Canada to increase radically the current trickle of Syrian refugees to Canada, Harper simply defended his government’s role and attacked the other parties’ refusal to support Canadian military action against ISIS.

We are left wondering what role the PMO has played during the election campaign and whether it or Conservative party brass had given the PM advice on the subject.

Would the same advice have been given by others in the Harper cabinet or the Tory caucus, had either been in session? We suspect not.

At a time when Germany is prepared to admit 800,000 of the refugees and even Britain and France are promising to bring in more, the current Canadian commitment to allow just 10,000 in the next four years is ridiculously inadequate.

And we’re left wondering whether either the Liberals or NDP will commit to curbing the enormous power of the PMO.

Record reign

There was some mention in the media, but we were frankly a little surprised at how little.

As of yesterday (Wednesday), Elizabeth II holds the record for the longest reign of any British monarch. She has gone beyond the mark established more than 100 years ago by her great-great-grandmother Queen Victoria.

The accomplishment is remarkable. It’s not just a matter of having lived a long time. The Queen has been able to remain relevant during times when the idea of monarchy seemed out of step.

True, gone are the days when the person sitting on the Throne can order beheadings on a whim, or strike fear in the hearts of the disloyal. And there are those who would argue that the Queen has no relevance in Canada.

We can only respond by pointing out the number of Canadians who crawled out of bed very early one April morning in 2011 to watch her grandson get married, or the crowds that gather when the Queen or one of her immediate family comes to this country.

There is some talk of Canada parting ties with the monarchy. We would submit it’s only talk, and not likely to become reality. Long may she reign.

It happened today

Voters in and around Caledon usually send Conservatives to Ottawa and Queen’s Park, but there have been exceptions.

After two years of leading a minority government, propped up through a deal with the New Democrats, Premier David Peterson called an election, and won a massive majority for his troubles, and one of the seats he won covered this area.

Mavis Wilson was elected MPP for Dufferin-Peel this day, Sept. 10, 1987.

Welcome back to the routine

In my job, I have learned that it’s not hard sometimes to make people angry, and I suspect that’s what I’m going to do with the next sentence.

I don’t like holiday weekends. There, I typed it. It’s on the record.

In fact, I don’t do any holidays well, whether they fall on weekends or in the middle of the week. The only real positive thing about the holiday weekend we just finished with is it mean the end of summer holidays too.

I know many people eagerly look forward to abbreviated work weeks, my wife among them. But the reality of my job is it just complicates things, and throws my routine straight into the bucket.

In my case, I still have to get a newspaper out on time. An extra day off for most people means it’s harder to reach contacts, and even if I know how to get hold of them, I usually have a guilt trip if I have to bug them during a holiday.

I operate very much on a routine that consists of a seven-day week, and the time for work is budgetted throughout those seven days. Cutting things back to six days just creates a burden for me.

It’s also a fact that a lot of things shut down for holidays, making it harder for me to find events in the community. It’s hard being a workaholic.

True, that’s not always the case with all holidays, and a lot depends on which community you happen to be in.

For example, there’s usually not a lot going on Victoria Day weekend, although nearby Nobleton is an exception. The community there always has a festival the holiday Monday, complete with a parade, entertainment and a lot of other fun stuff, including fireworks. But there’s never much going on Canada Day in neighbouring King Township. As we all know, that’s not the case in Caledon. That day usually starts very early for me, and I’m usually much too tired to do anything when I get home in the evening.

And around Easter, it’s usually easy enough to find an Eater Egg Hunt.

Civic Holiday is an easy time to find stuff going on, especially around Terra Cotta with the big bicycle race. It’s usually a very hot day, and I sometimes wonder how the cyclists get through it, but they do.

I guess my real problem is these holidays are seldom holidays for me, because I have to work, often putting in full work days. Okay, so I’m jealous!

The Holiday season in December is something of a different matter. Community newspapers usually shut down for about a week, so there’s not a lot of work to be done (although I’m usually pretty good at finding some). Besides there’s usually so much to be done around the home, I seldom find the time to relax.

Some holidays seem to disappear. I went to school at a time when kids didn’t go to school Remembrance Day, and if Nov. 11 happened to fall on a weekend, then that was one year we didn’t get an extra day off.

I always felt a little robbed that there was no school in July, so there was no school for me to absent myself from Canada Day.

The reason behind some holidays and what they signify comes into play too.

For example, Labour day is supposed to be a day to recognize labour. But we all know what’s really involved. It’s the last day of summer vacation. It’s the end of care-free down time for the younger folks among us. I work all summer (apart from the week my wife insisted I take off), but I remember too well what it was like to be a kid, and I can have empathy for what the holiday really represents to them.

Of course, Labour Day means something more to those who are involved in the labour movement. There’s even a parade in Toronto. In the years when I worked in the big city, I used to make a point of getting to the parade. There were usually some participation from the communities where I was working, even if it was just politicians. Here were a bunch of labour advocates taking the day off so they could take part in a parade that necessitated me spending part of the holiday working. Some day, when I have time, I’ll try to figure out if that makes sense.

The parade ends at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds, and my parents used to take my brother and I to the Ex Labour Day. There was one year we happened to be near the gate when the Labour

Day Parade arrived. I was old enough to understand that just because there was a parade didn’t mean Santa Claus was going to be bringing up the rear. But I was also young enough to wonder if Santa wasn’t involved, what was the point of having a parade.

I guess that helps explain why I never get Christmas greetings from any labour organization.

As much as I enjoy summer, and the lack of worries about getting snowed in or freezing myself numb, I do look forward to Labour Day only because it means a regular routine is about to return. Municipal councils don’t meet much during the summer. Caledon council seems to make a point of meeting during my vacation time, but I’ve already vented about that, pointlessly, I might add.

So even if I do have sympathy for what kids face this time of year, I’m glad to see the end of summer. It means we can get back to what we’re supposed to be doing.

A lot of us won’t be willing to admit it, but we all need routines in our lives, along with the occasional breaks.

My life oftens seems to be one big routine. True, it involves a lot of work, but that’s the kind of person I am.

I enjoy having a certain amount of down time, even if it’s not as much as most people get. But I can only be still for so long. I usually get up at 7 every morning, whether I have to or not. Even on vacation, I am usually awake by that hour, no matter what the time was when I went to bed. So I get up and find something to do, very frequently work-related. It’s quite often that Beth will get up Saturday or Sunday morning and find me writing away.

So yes, getting back to the regular working routine is something I have been looking forward to.

Of course, theres going to be a lot of stuff happening in the coming weeks, and that’s not including the start of school sport, hockey season, fairs and equestrian events (I am glad the Pan Am Games were held in the summer, because I don’t know how I would have found time to get to them if they hadn’t).

Remember, we’re in the middle of an overly-long federal election campaign, so things should be heating up on that front pretty soon.

And things should be fun at the local councils too; both Caledon and Peel. Enough down time. Bring it all on.

Bill Rea

Road safety rules have been updated as of Sept. 1

With last-minute summer activities to enjoy before summer comes to an end, I thought it was important to talk about the recent changes to Ontario's road safety rules.

Earlier this year, Bill 31 — the Making Ontario's Roads Safer Act was passed into law. As part of Bill 31, updated rules regarding road safety came into effect as of Sept. 1. These updates include increasing penalties for distracted driving and new rules to ensure the safety of cyclists.

As we all know, distracted driving is a serious safety hazard on our roads and drivers' continuance of using electronic devices while driving, in spite of regulations and public service announcements, is an ongoing problem. The Ontario Provincial Police noted that distracted driving is a factor in nearly half of traffic collisions across Ontario, and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has cited distracted driving as a contributing factor in 80 per cent of collisions and 65 per cent of near-crashes. We need to ensure our roads stay safe, and that starts with ensuring drivers understand the consequences of distracted driving. That is why penalties for distracted driving have increased. For example, distracted drivers now face a $490 set fine and a loss of three demerit points, if convicted. Drivers' who hold a G1, G2, M1 M2-L or M2-M licence will receive a 30-day suspension for a first offence and longer for subsequent convictions.

FROM QUEEN'S PARK

Sylvia Jones
MPP Dufferin-Caledon

Many communities throughout Dufferin-Caledon share the road with cycling enthusiasts. We are privileged to have many biking trails and pathways that are enjoyed by residents and visitors. Many cyclists use the roadway as a means of getting to the trails, but there are some roads in our community that are very popular routes for seasoned cyclists. Sharing the road safely with cyclists, whether you are driving in a residential area or on a rural road, is important and changes, as of Sept. 1, include an increase in the fine for "dooring" of a cyclist. If convicted, you will now face a $365 set fine and three demerit points. In addition, drivers will be required (when able to do so) to leave a one-meter distance when passing a cyclist. Failure to do so may result in a $110 fine and two demerit points. Not only do we need to ensure drivers are on the lookout for cyclists, but cyclists themselves need to take responsibility for their own safety by having the proper bicycle lights and reflectors. Failure to have these items on a bicycle will result in a set fine of $110.

In addition to tougher penalties for distracted driving and the safety of cyclists, the slow-down move-over requirement of drivers for emergency vehicles now includes tow trucks and failing to slow down and move over for a tow truck can result in a fine of $490.

Our roads are here for everyone to enjoy, whether it is a scenic drive on the Forks of the Credit Road, a trip to the cottage, or a bike ride through Hockley Valley, we all need to be aware of our surroundings and the changes that will impact both drivers and cyclists. Please take the time to review all of the changes in Bill 31 by visiting my website www.sylviajonesmpp.ca

Learn about electric vehicles Saturday in Bolton

An Electric Vehicle Showcase is taking place at the Bolton Farmers' Market this Saturday (Sept. 12).

It will run from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the public parking lot at Ann and Sterne Streets.

Attendees can learn more about electric vehicles through test drives, viewing of the electric vehicle showcase and asking questions to knowledgeable staff. This showcase is run in partnership between the Town of Caledon, Plug N' Drive and the Bolton Farmers' Market. Plug N' Drive is a non-profit organization committed to accelerating the adoption of electric cars in Ontario.

"The Town of Caledon is pleased to support National Drive Electric Week by hosting its first Electric Vehicle Day and showcase," Director of Public Works David Loveridge said. "We have recently incorporated three electric vehicles into our fleet and are thrilled to expand this interest to our community by providing free electric vehicle charging stations in Downtown Bolton and at Town Hall in Caledon East."

"We are continuing to explore options and opportunities to implement green technologies into our service delivery models, and taking part in National Drive Electric Week is part of that work," Mayor Allan Thompson added. "I'm proud that as a Town we are walking the talk with programs like the electric charging site at Town Hall, our solar projects, Partners in Project Green and our hybrid fleet program."

Late last month, the Town announced its most recent electric vehicle charging stations, located in the Town Hall parking lot. This project was funded by the revenue generated by the Town's microFIT solar projects, and the Partners in Project Green's Electric Vehicle Charging Station grant program. In addition to the electric vehicle charging stations, the Town has also placed a focus on using alternative fuel types within the municipality's fleet. The Town's bylaw officers currently drive hybrid vehicles and the Town is also integrating three additional electric vehicles to support the bylaw team.

Plug'n Drive events to date, have reached more than 45,000 people at more than 200 events, answering questions, engaging drivers and providing over 2,500 electric vehicle test drives.

National Drive Electric Week began in 2011 as a one-day event, and has since expanded to a full week of electric vehicle events worldwide. Attendance at National Drive Electric Week 2014 more than doubled that of 2013's celebration with over 90,000 people participating in 152 events in 150 cities in 39 U.S. states and in Italy, Canada and The Netherlands.

The Town has installed vehicle changing stations like this one at the municipal parking lot in Bolton.

Leaders agree more needs to be done

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Claire Hoy

In a rare spirit of non-partisanship last week, our three major party leaders all humorously agreed to stay away from Toronto Blue Jay games for the rest of the season.

When NDP Leader Thomas Mulcair went to a game Aug. 14, the powerful Jays lost 4-3 to the Yankees. (Full disclosure: your humble correspondent is an unrepentant Yankees fan.) A few weeks later Prime Minister Stephen Harper showed up and the Cleveland Indians won 4-2. Then Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau took his turn and the struggling Baltimore Orioles ended a long losing skid by trouncing the local heroes 10-2.

So all three have since tweeted that they'll stay away.

While a patch of humour in the election is certainly rare, it's perhaps even more rare to see the three leaders agreeing on anything.

That's to be expected, of course, with partisan feelings running as high as they are in the midst of a campaign.

But there was one sad event last week — depicted by the tragic picture of a little boy lying drowned upon a beach in Turkey — where you would hope they would get past their partisan instincts and recognize that they, and pretty well everybody in the universe, were heartbroken over the death of the little boy and the overall plight of those fleeing the murder and mayhem in Syria.

But that, sadly, would be too much to ask.

When it was learned the boy's family had hoped to emigrate to Canada, both Mulcair and Trudeau immediately blamed the Tories for the death of the boy, his family, and untold numbers of refugees.

In what has become an all too commonplace instinct in today's world, where people try to make every event about themselves, the opposition parties and various refugee groups immediately blamed Ottawa for "refusing" a refugee application from the boys' family.

Turns out they hadn't applied. A note on their plight had been forwarded by a brother via an NDP MP, but it wasn't refused — as early reports had it — but was sent back for more information. Not only that — and what has generally been overlooked — Turkey had refused to grant the family an exit visa, so even if Canada had approved a non-existent application, we would not have been able to rescue the boy and his family.

Yet Trudeau, pointing his fingers squarely at the Tories, quipped, you can't suddenly become compassionate in mid-campaign.

Can we get a grip here?

Think about it. Whatever your political stripe, do you really believe that Harper, Mulcair or Trudeau were not as heartbroken as anybody else when seeing the picture of that little boy lying lifeless on a beach? If you do, then you've got a problem. Yes, they're politicians. But they're also human beings

Yet, ever since the picture awakened the world to a crisis that has been unfolding for a long time now, it has become commonplace to accuse Canada of, as one column in the virulently anti-Tory Toronto Star put it, "turning their backs" on the Syrian refugees.

No doubt Canada could have done more. But to suggest we're batting below our weight class is simply not true.

The U.S., for example, under the sainted Barack Obama, has accepted just 1,800 Syrian refugees this year. Canada has accepted 2,300. The entire European Union — with much of the refugee problem right on its' own shores — had agreed only to accept 3,200 this year. (Since the picture, Austria and Germany have agreed to take more, but Hungary and Turkey are still balking.)

Worse, the oil-rich Gulf states such as Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Qatar, Kuwait and the United Arab Republic have not allowed a single Syrian refugee into their countries. Not one.

Yes, Canada can do better — and should — and all three leaders have suddenly upped their pledges to do so. (But neither the NDP or Liberals, let us remember, had much to say about this issue in the campaign until the aforementioned picture appeared.)

Harper argues — sensibly to me — that Canada's military efforts against ISIS as part of the U.S.-led coalition is a legitimate part of the campaign to assist those innocent civilians currently under siege. He also agrees with both Trudeau and Mulcair that humanitarian assistance is required, and Canada has been doing that as well.

Both the NDP and Liberals reject the military option, perhaps hoping somebody can simply sit down with the ISIS fanatics when they aren't chopping off heads, raping women, or burning people alive, and sort out their concerns over a cup of tea. Please.

BFC open house will be Sunday

The annual open house and fly-in at Brampton Flight Centre is getting close.

It is scheduled for Sept. 13 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Last year's open house was one of the facility's best, in terms of attendance, the weather, entertainment and flying. They had volunteers and staff who contributed significantly to the success.

Once again, they are looking for volunteers to help out for this year's annual event. They are hoping to introduce new and exciting activities to entice more people to attend.

Admission for visitors is $5 per person or $20 for a family (two adults and related children 13 to 18). All of the ticket sales from the event will go to support The Great War Flying Museum.

Visitors will be able to experience the sights, sounds and feel of the First World War replica fighter biplanes and triplanes flying every half hour, military enactment, classic and antique aircraft, antique automobiles, motorcycles and amateur built aircraft. The open house also gives the community an opportunity to learn about the flight school programs and kids flight camps.

Activities and specials offered at the open house will include sightseeing flights for $40; Red Bird Simulator flights at $20 for 15 minutes; information about the 892 Air Cadet Squadron; airport tours; birds of prey from Bird Control Services Inc.; Clowns of California; gifts and gear at Humphrey's pilot shop; live music; an outdoor barbecue; and more.

Anyone interested in volunteering is asked to call Nanci at 905-838-1400 ext. 333 or nanci@bramfly.com

SUCCESSFUL FUNDRAISER

A Bolton family, with the help of some neighbours, held a fundraising event Monday in support of the Shoppers Drug Mart One Walk to Conquer Cancer. Nicholas Fera, who organized the fundraiser, said it was inspired by his mother Linda, who's been undergoing chemotherapy treatments at Princess Margaret Hospital. "We could give back after all the care she's been given by Princess Margaret," he remarked. The One Walk to Conquer Cancer will be Saturday in Toronto. He also said the effort was a success, raising more than $600. "It was a really good day," he said, adding some people just came to make donations, without buying anything at the garage sale. Seen here, in the lemonade stand, is Linda's niece Angelina Pileggi, 7, surrounded by neighbours Emma, 7, Sophia, 6, and Isaiah Pugliano, 4, along with Linda, nephew Lao Chiaromonte, 10 and Nicholas.

Still no West Nile Virus pools found in Caledon

The last week of August saw four more pools in Peel Region test positive for West Nile Virus (WNV), but they were all in Brampton.

Peel Public Health reported that brought the total for the year to 14 pools in the region, with 11 of them in Brampton and three in Mississauga. There have been no positive pools reported in Caledon yet this year.

WNV is spread through the bite of an infected mosquito. Everyone who is outside during the warmer months is at risk and should take steps to prevent being bitten by mosquitoes.

Most people who catch West Nile virus will experience fever, head and body aches, a mild rash and swollen lymph glands. More serious symptoms include encephalitis (swelling of the brain), difficulty swallowing and confusion. Adults 50 years of age and older and people with underlying medical conditions and/or weaker immune systems are at greater risk.

The adult mosquito surveillance program started June 15. Adult mosquitoes will continue to be collected weekly from traps at 31 fixed locations throughout Peel until late September. To date, 768 mosquito batches have been tested.

There are no human cases of WNV reported in Peel.

The larviciding program started June 1 and will continue until Sept. 30. Larviciding involves applying environmentally friendly products to reduce mosquito larvae living in stagnant water. The products are applied to municipal catch basins and selected sites on public property.

The third round of roadside catch basin larviciding is being conducted, and is indicated by a white dot on the catch basin grate.

Larviciding of catch basins in the green spaces of parks is complete. The treatment of surface water sites on public lands is ongoing.

To date, there have been 63 WNV-positive mosquito batches in Ontario, including the 14 in Peel. There have been 13 in Windsor-Essex, 11 in Toronto, four in Halton, three each in Hamilton, Ottawa, Niagara and York, and one each in Brant County, Chatham-Kent, Eastern Ontario, Haliburton-Kawartha-Pine Ridge, Lambton, Hastings and Prince Edward, Middlesex-London, Simcoe Muskoka and Waterloo.

There have been eight reported WNV human cases; two each from Toronto and Niagara and one each from Chatham-Kent, eastern Ontario, Waterloo and Windsor-Essex.

To date, there have been two positive mosquito batches reported outside of Ontario: one each in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

There are 303 human cases of WNV in the United States so far, including 57 in California, 45 in Arizona and 35 in Texas.

People with regular gutters have no time to BBQ.

Town set for Mayor's Fall Seniors Forum

Mayor Allan Thompson, along with members of Caledon council, invite the senior community to attend the Mayors' first Fall Seniors Forum.

It will be Sept. 16, from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Caledon Community Complex.

"Our inaugural theme is 'Government and You: Building a Healthy Caledon Together'," Thompson said. "I'm excited to come together with our senior community to share information and exchange ideas on how we can create an inclusive, accessible and energized adult 55-plus community in Caledon. We've had a great response already and I hope to see more registrants in the days to come."

The forum will be hosted by the Town, with presentations from Thompson, the Parks and Recreation and Library teams. Peel Region will also present information on their services that will be of interest to the 55-plus population. Importantly, Thompson will touch on the Adult 55-Plus Strategic Plan, that is nearing completion for the Town, outlining positive steps being proposed to create an inclusive community for seniors. This is an opportunity to learn about the plan and share input on the goals, recommendations and deliverables before a final recommendation goes to council.

The second half of the forum will be a chance to network with peers, mix and mingle and visit with presenters.

Those interested in participating are asked to register. That can be done online at www.caledon.ca/seniorsforum, by email at mayor@caledon.ca, in person by visiting a branch of the Caledon Public Library or Town Hall (6311 Old Church Rd. in Caledon East) or by phone at 905-584-2272, ext. 4156

Help celebrate 180th anniversary of Belfountain Church Sept. 20

Belfountain Village Church will celebrate its 180th anniversary Sept. 20.

Service starts at 9:30 a.m. with a barbeque and refreshments following.

Everyone is welcome.

Since the arrival of the first settler in 1825, Belfountain, surrounded by the scenic beauty of Caledon Hills, has become one of Ontario's offerings to the jaded spirits of its urban population. And the beautiful stone church, situated in the centre of the village at 17258 Old Main St., epitomizes the serenity to which the modern day world aspires. The stone building is an English gothic-style structure with an appended bell tower, typical of churches built during that period in the British Isles.

The actual congregation was formed in 1835 and the church existed and grew in the village for 50 years before the building was erected. It is recorded that Mrs. George Trimble (Maria Longstreet,) mother of the late J.R. Trimble and grandmother of Roy Trimble, Belfountain, and his brother John of Orangetown, was baptized in the new facility Nov. 10, 1889.

Reid Hall, the new addition, was constructed in 1985. It was architecturally designed to complement the classic style of the stone building and is a meeting place for Sunday school, Bible studies, congregation and community events. Each autumn, the Church grounds continue to provide space for a great time of fun and celebration during the annual Salamander Festival.

The Church is interdenominational. A true community church, it attracts people from many diverse backgrounds and seeks to minister to the needs of all people within the community. With a new Pastor and the foundation and vision conceived by the founders of this church so long ago, they are moving forward to offer the timeless message of God's love.

Terry Fox run will be Sept. 20

The Rotary Club of Palgrave will be holding its annual Terry Fox run Sept. 20. The community is invited to Stationlands Park on Brawton Drive at Regional Road 50 to take part in the event to raise money for cancer research. Palgrave participants raised $10,492 last year, an important part of the $12 million dollars raised across Ontario. Since 2000, the community has raised $120,955 for the Terry Fox Foundation for cancer research. The run will start at 9 a.m., but there will be a free breakfast, served by Rotarians, starting at 8. Participants have the opportunity to run, walk or bike for up to 10 kilometres along the Caledon trail. The Palgrave firefighters and the OPP will be there to assist as well. Donations and pledges can be made online at www.terryfox.org/Run (run site number 2164). Pledge sheets are also available at various stores and locations in the Palgrave, Caledon East and surrounding areas. Bring pledge sheets (including on-line ones) to the event. Registration will start at 8 a.m. For more information, contact Tom Fuller at 905-880-3774 or tom.fuller55@gmail.com

Councillors Rob Mezzapelli and Annette Groves joined Bolton Kinsmen Steve Vickers, Robert Ward, Jim Eberly and Joe Luschak in promoting the upcoming Terry Fox Run.

Kinsmen organize 35th Bolton Run

The 35th annual Terry Fox Run will be held in Bolton Sept. 20. The Kinsmen Club of Bolton has been busy getting everything in order for another successful run. Close to 100 runners, raising $12,000, participated last year and the goal for this year is to match and improve last year's efforts. The meeting place for all participants will be at the Bolton Kinsmen Centre at 35 Chapel St. After a brief ceremony, the Run will officially start at 9 a.m. This year, a one-kilometre run route along the Humber River will be set up. After the runners finish their run, hamburgers, hot dogs and pop will be served. Check out www.terryfox.org for pledge forms or contact John Stegeman at boltonkin@gmail.com for more information or to purchase a Terry Fox T-shirt before the run. The Terry Fox Foundation's mission is to maintain the vision and principles of Terry Fox while raising money for innovative cancer research through the annual runs. In 1980, Terry Fox was a young man with cancer who wanted to make a contribution to the fight against the disease. One year later, Terry had touched the collective heart of all Canadians and today is one or the country's heroes. Terry's Marathon of Hope was the start of a dream that eventually evolved a successful partnership between The Terry Fox Foundation and the National Cancer Institute of Canada.

Police reminding drivers to watch out for students

With another school year started, there is no more important time than

Brampton man killed on Innis Lake Road

A 62-year-old man from Brampton is dead after a collision between a car and a cyclist early Tuesday morning. Caledon OPP reports they were called to the scene on Innis Lake Road, between King Street and Castlederg Sideroad shortly before 6 a.m. The cyclist was pronounced dead at the scene. He has been identified as Harjinder Singh Braich. The investigation is continuing.

now for officers within the Central Region of the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) to urge drivers to slow down and to watch for school buses and walking students in an effort to keep children safe. Police would like to take this time to remind motorists to pay close attention when meeting or following a school bus. Motorists in both directions must stop when approaching a stopped school bus with its stop arm extended and flashing red lights and cannot start moving until the red lights have stopped flashing and the stop arm has been retracted. Patience on the part of drivers is encouraged, as many young children will be taking the bus for the first time. This means they might require extra time boarding and departing the bus until they are familiar with the routine. Many communities in the region have children that walk to school. “Parents are encouraged to remind their children how to walk to and from school safely,” Acting Chief Superintendent Rose DiMarco said. “It is imperative for drivers to be cautious of increased pedestrian traffic in school zones . . . throughout the school year.” Police also remind motorists traveling through school zones to be extra vigilant and mindful that the school crossing guard will return to the areas for those students who require the assistance in heavy traffic areas. Officers will be paying special attention to school zones in their patrol areas and will closely be watching to make sure that every child has the opportunity to safely arrive at school and home each day.

While executing the warrant, officers located stolen lottery tickets, stolen cigarettes, a small quantity of marijuana plants, a pellet gun and cash registers. A 22-year-old man with no fixed address was arrested and charged with 12 counts of break and enter, 16 counts of breach of probation, nine counts of breach of recognizance, producing a Schedule I substance and possession of property obtained by crime. Another Caledon man, 19, was charged with 12 counts of break and enter, producing a Schedule I substance and possession of property obtained by crime.

Rehabilitation plan for Alton Mill is done

At long last, and after several years of work, the Master Plan for the Alton Millpond's rehabilitation is complete. A public open house is planned for tonight (Sept. 10) to reveal the plan. It will be at the Alton Mill Arts Centre. There

Buzzfest returns to Terra Cotta

Terra Cotta Country Store owners Judy Vella and Bob McCloskey are delighted to be hosting Buzzfest, an outdoor art and gourmet food show, on their store property for the third consecutive year. It will be Sept. 26 and 27.

Last year's event welcomed 2,000 visitors who were able to lunch and shop in a garden transformed into a living gallery where art and food harmoniously converged.

The name Buzzfest was chosen to pay homage to the importance of bees to the ecosystem. In keeping with this environmental focus, the 30 hand-picked artisans participating in Buzzfest are producing their own work with an emphasis on locally sourced raw materials and upcycling. An exception to this is the presence of Casa Relief, who represents artisans from the developing world under the fair trade banner. Returning to Buzzfest for their third year are Caledon's own Edna and Tony Fernandez of Edna's Pickles with their exotic Indian relishes and chutneys, Brampton's Radouan Abou-Faysal with his flavours of Lebanon and local glass artist Skytree Smith. Rebecca Landman of Landman Gardens and Bakery is also returning, promoting her strong farm-to-table philosophy. Many new artists will join Buzzfest this year, including Dolores Smith from Olivar Corp, representing world-class olive oils, and Karyn Climans from Tail Wags Helmet Covers, whose creative work endorses safe, healthy activity for all ages. Patti Rooke will be on site with her classic clothing and accessory line using natural and recycled materials. Sara Milley from Parkadilly can be seen making use of recycled materials for her uniquely framed wire art.

Live musical performances throughout the weekend will animate the event and anyone wishing to offer up their body as a natural canvas can enjoy complimentary face painting or a henna experience. New this year will be complimentary yoga classes from Banyan Tree Yoga Therapy. Vella and McCloskey encourage all visitors to bring their appetites and indulge not only in the many gourmet tastings of the weekend, but also to dine on a delicious, fresh, locally-sourced lunch provided by caterers Lavender Blue.

Buzzfest runs from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days on the banks of the Credit River in Terra Cotta. For a complete list of this year's artisans and foodies attending Buzzfest, visit www.terracottacountrys-tore.ca the Bolton rally. There was himself, his wife Mariette and the two young daughters of friends. "There should be a mob here," he declared. "I'm not pleased with what Kathleen Wynne is doing on this sex-ed thing," he added. "I just hate what they're doing." Jones wasn't upset at the protests outside both her offices (she said about half a dozen people were at the constituency office in Orangeville).

"I've said from the beginning that parents need to be part of the consultations," she said, adding she's been collecting comments from parents in the riding and forwarding them to Education Minister Liz Sandals. "It's actually not legislation," Jones added. "It's not regulation. It's curriculum changing. There are no votes. There's no debate." She added all parents can do it make their concerns known to the minister, and she's been working to facilitate that.

public. The Master Plan is the result of several years of committee work, fundraising, studies and hard work by a team of professional consultants to develop a plan for how to rehabilitate this important feature in Alton. There is still much more work to be done, but the Master Plan is a big step forward towards realizing a vision incorporating ecological stewardship, enhancement of the

Shaw's Creek watershed, recreation and environmental education, public art and development of a long-term approach for the ownership, maintenance and management of the millpond and related structures. 7 Things You Must Know Before Putting Your Home Up for Sale in Fall 2015

DUFFERIN-PEEL - A new report has just been released which reveals 7 costly mistakes that most homeowners make when selling their home, and a 9 Step System that can help you sell your home fast and for the most amount of money. This industry report shows clearly how the traditional ways of selling homes have become increasingly less and less effective in today's market. The fact of the matter is that fully three quarters of homesellers don't get what they want for their homes and become disillusioned and - worse - financially disadvantaged when they put their homes on the market. As this report uncovers, most homesellers make 7 deadly mistakes that cost them literally thousands of dollars. The good news is that each and every one of these mistakes is entirely preventable. In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free special report entitled "The 9 Step System to Get Your Home Sold Fast and For Top Dollar". Notice of Intention to Designate

TAKE NOTICE that the Council for The Corporation of the Town of Caledon intends to designate the following property as being of cultural heritage value or interest under Section 29 of the Ontario Heritage Act, R.S.O. 1990, Chapter O.18:

GRAHAM-ROBINSON HOUSE

Proposed Legal Description: Part Lot 2, Concession 7 (Albion); Town of Caledon; in the Regional Municipality of Peel (also known as part of proposed Block 16 on approved draft plan of subdivision 21T-12006C)

The Graham-Robinson House is a 1 ½ storey, single detached, solid brick residence clad in dichromatic (red and buff (yellow)) brick with a gable roof, a centre gable and a one storey tail wing. The structure is a well preserved vernacular interpretation of Gothic Revival styling, commonly referred to as the "Ontario Cottage", constructed in the late 1860s for William Graham or his son-in-law Robert Robinson.

William Graham was a prominent area resident who distinguished himself as a farmer, storekeeper and postmaster for the hamlet of Tormore, developer of a saw and grist mill in Vaughan Township, magistrate for Peel and York Counties, and founder of the True Blue Masonic Lodge in Bolton. Robert Robinson was a farmer and veterinary surgeon who was among the first to graduate from the Ontario Veterinary College. The Graham/Robinson families owned the property from 1840 to 1947.

The Graham-Robinson house is currently located at Part Lot 1, Concession 7 (Albion), designated as Parts 1 and 3, on Plan 43R-33446, and municipally known as 12130 Albion-Vaughan Road. The Graham-Robinson house is expected to be relocated to the above-noted location, legally described as Part Lot 2, Concession 7 (Albion), in the fall/winter of 2015.

Further information respecting the proposed designation is available from the Heritage Resource Office at the Town.

A notice of objection to the designation, setting out the reason for the objection and all relevant facts, may be served to the Town Clerk within 30 days after the date of publication of this notice of intention.

Couple looks for sites that inspired Group of Seven

By Bill Rea

The famed Group of Seven helped capture much of the beauty of the Canadian landscape, drawing their inspiration from many locations.

Jim and Sue Waddington of Hamilton have spent about 40 years crisscrossing the country to locate and photograph the actual landscapes painted by the artists. They recently outlined some of their accomplishments to an audience at Melville White Church near Belfountain.

The event was hosted by the Belfountain Heritage Society.

Mr. Waddington did most of the presentation, commenting they have done several different versions of it. He entitles it In the Footsteps of the Group of Seven.

He said they took it on, as a hobby, about 40 years ago, trying to find places that inspired the seven artists, as well as Tom Thomson, who helped form the group, but who died before it got going.

He had a number of anecdotes about their travels.

They were inspired to find a scene painted by Frederick Varley called Evening in Georgian Bay. It was of an island, of which there are about 30,000 there, but they were able to find and photograph the spot. Other examples he cited included a streetscape scene in Kleinburg painted by A. J. Casson, as well as a blacksmith's forge in Elora, also painted by Casson (Waddington said the forge is now a Shoppers Drug Mart).

"This hobby of ours is a two-person hobby," he said, adding his wife brings her organizational skills to the effort. He also said they both enjoy orienteering and canoeing, which has come in handy when they have to go into the wilderness looking for various scenes.

She also hooks rugs, and Waddington said she created a rug depicting a scene in Killarney Provincial Park that was painted by A.Y. Jackson.

Changing scenery over the years has sometimes complicated their efforts. Waddington recalled taking their children on a trek to find a scene painted by Jackson on Nellie Lake (he said his wife had wondered if such a place actually existed). They were able to find the spot where Jackson did the painting, but in his time, the area had been logged out. The tress had returned by the time the Waddingtons were there.

"We thought that was so much fun, we wanted to find more of them," he said.

They contacted the McMichael Gallery in Kleinburg for suggestions on where they could look, but they weren't able to offer much help, so they had to find other ways to assist their search.

He said Jackson and Franklin Carmichael liked to climb to out-of-the-way places to paint.

He observed that five or six paintings by Jackson, including one called Northern Lake, had the same hill in the background. Another painting was called Grace Lake Algoma 1939.

Waddington observed that one of the best works at the McMichael Gallery is Thomson's Woodland Waterfall. He said most of Thomson's work shows a lot of sky, but there is none seen in this creation. He also said they had a hint of where it was, so they walked along a portage trail, followed the sounds of a waterfall and found it. He explained the trail had been hot and filled with bugs, but things cooled off when they reached the falls. He commented that might have been what attracted Thomson.

It wasn't just scenes in Ontario that attracted the group of Seven. "It turns out they painted everywhere in Canada," Waddington observed.

He said Jackson once got the government to let him ride along on a supply ship that was equipping an RCMP facility in the Arctic, and painted a scene called Pond Inlet Baffin Shore. He added Lawren Harris went up there with Jackson three years later.

Some of the scenes where the group painted have been changed over the years. Waddington cited pictures of a rock Carmichael sat on painting scenes at Grace Lake, commenting the rock was gone when they went to the site in 2001. They found it at the bottom of the nearby cliff, and figured young men had rolled it over the edge. He was able to get some people to help him get it back up the hill.

The Group of Seven also painted scenes in Caledon and the surrounding area.

Waddington said Thomson painted scenes around Forks of the Credit, and one of Casson's paintings of the area hangs at the Art Gallery of Ontario.

Waddington said they started this hobby in 1977, but didn't tell anyone what they were up to at the time.

"We just didn't think anyone was interested," he explained.

Federal campaign expected to start heating up

By Bill Rea

With Labour Day in the past and youngsters back at school, it's expected that the federal election campaign is going to increase its pace.

"I think the real serious part is just starting," Dufferin-Caledon's Conservative incumbent David Tilson said this week.

Although there has been some activity among the four declared candidates seeking to represent the riding in the House of Commons, they also seem to have been biding their time until after the summer vacation break.

"We're starting up," commented New Democrat Rehya Yazbek, who commented the plan of her campaign all along has been to really get started around Labour Day.

"We're off to the races," she declared. "The signs are going up."

Yazbek said she's been detecting a mood for change, commenting she's been getting warm reception in traditionally Conservative areas.

"I feel like there's a big change," she observed. "I think change is in the air. People are looking for that change."

Yazbek added she's done a lot for the party in previous campaigns, largely helping NDP incumbents in other ridings (she was the NDP candidate in Dufferin-Caledon in last year's provincial election). But this time, she's working on generating a riding association here.

"We're not the big parties with the big money," Green party candidate Nancy Erkar commented. "We have a good group of volunteers."

She also said things have been rather slow on the election trail up until now, with her campaign trying to use money and resources wisely.

"We're just really getting launched locally," she remarked.

Erekar has few problems with the reception she's been receiving.

"People always like the Green party because they know it's about the future and their kids," she remarked. "This could be the election we elect a Green MP. It's looking pretty good."

Things have been busy on Ed Crewson's

Liberal campaign.

"Every day, we're knocking on doors and attending events," he said, adding he too is detecting a mood for change. "Many people we talked to are looking for someone other than Stephen Harper to be Prime Minister," he remarked, adding he has been hearing a lot of people say, "Anybody but Harper."

Crewson also maintained he's got the best chance to take the riding away from the Conservatives, citing his 26 years in public service. He said the problem with Harper is the trust factor, over matters like the scandal involving Senator Mike Duffy, which has implicated the Prime Minister's Office.

"No one knows who to believe," he remarked. "It's just the whole trust issue."

There are also lots of people bringing up the economy, Crewson said.

"Harper only seems to be offering more of the same," he commented, adding people seem to be looking more toward Justin Trudeau. "A lot of people seem to be saying, 'He's a fresh face.'"

Crewson agreed the Conservative attack ads against Trudeau, stating, "He's just not ready," have been "very effective."

"My response to that is Justin is ready and he's got a good team of candidates behind him," he remarked. "He's got a great team of experienced people. "The Liberal team is experienced and knows what to do and will do a good job."

Tilson pointed out campaigns normally last about 36 days.

"Thirty-six days are about to begin," he observed Tuesday. "The campaign has been sleepy up until now."

"Campaigns are always challenging," he said, "but we're looking forward to it."

Tilson said he's been receiving a good reception so far on the hustings.

"People seem to be appreciative of the work that I've done in the riding," he said.

Tilson also said voters haven't appeared to be in an election mood up to now, seeming to have been thinking more of the summer.

"Now I think people are going to start getting interested in what the issues are," he observed. "Now I think the campaign is starting."

Prime Minister Harper visits King for announcement

By Mark Pavilons

Conservative supporters were primed recently, welcoming Prime Minister Stephen Harper to King Township.

Harper visited WaterStone Estate and Farms to announce tax relief for adoptive families. He also lent his support to York-Simcoe MP and House Leader Peter Van Loan.

Van Loan stressed Harper has led a government that has fostered the lowest federal tax burden in half a century, resulting in one of the best middle classes in the world. The Harper government is committed to tackling crime and ensuring citizen safety, and Van Loan said Canada now boast the lowest crime rate in years.

"He leads Canada on the world stage — putting freedom, democracy, human rights and the rule of law as the cornerstone principles for which Canada stands," Van Loan said. "The result? A recent massive global survey showing Canada to be the most respected country in the world."

"He leads a government committed to helping Canadian families get ahead and build a brighter future," Van Loan added.

Harper, he said, "stands up for the hard-working people of this part of Canada, who want the freedom to succeed, and to build a brighter future for their families."

The Prime Minister pointed out that Van Loan is a "key member of cabinet and the team" and has held many prominent positions in government.

Continuing with the government's move to cut taxes and increase the benefits to every family in Canada, comes the support for adoptive families.

He announced that a re-elected Conservative government would help make it more affordable for Canadian parents to adopt children by significantly increasing the value of the Adoption Expense Tax Credit and making it fully refundable.

"Our Conservative government believes that there is no higher calling than that of raising a child, and no greater reward," Harper said. "We have a proven record of helping make life more affordable for Canadian families, particularly when it comes to managing some of the additional costs borne by adoptive parents."

The Adoption Expense Tax Credit is a 15 per cent non-refundable tax credit designed to defray the costs associated with adoption. The Harper government enhanced the credit in 2013 to make more expenses eligible and, in 2014, increased the maximum amount of the credit to $15,000, indexed to inflation. A re-elected Conservative government will increase the value of the Adoption Expense Tax Credit further, raising the maximum amount to $20,000, and make the credit fully refundable.

"Every year, thousands of Canadian families are transformed as they bring adopted children into their hearts and lives," Harper said. "We recognize that adoption costs can be high and, in some cases, prohibitive for families. That's why a re-elected Conservative government will increase the support available to these caring Canadians."

Prime Minister Stephen Harper made a brief stop in King Township recently while on the campaign trail. He made an announcement about increased support and funding for adoptive families. He was joined by Essex MP Jeff Watson and his adoptive daughter.

and Tax-Free Savings Accounts, among others.

"All Canadian families with children aged 17 and under, including those who adopt, have benefitted under our low-tax plan," Harper commented. "We will continue our proven record of helping Canadian families in ways that tangibly improve their lives."

Joining Harper was Essex MP Jeff Watson, who, along with his wife Sarah, adopted their sixth child, Beatrice.

"Canada needs more Jeffs and Sarahs," Harper said, stressing they intend to cut backlogs and wait times for adoptive families.

When asked about programs designed to boost agriculture, agri-tourism and the equine industry, Harper said being in King, it's easy to see the potential of these industries.

His government is encouraging tourism here from the U.S. and generally, they are supporting Canadian agriculture. He did admit that the equine industry has some unique challenges and issues.

Golden Hawk Daniel Cafagna battles for the puck with an Alliston player. The Hawks beat the Hornets 5-3 in their final pre-season game last week.

Hawks end pre-season with win

By Jake Courtepatte

A strong showing by a team veteran led the Caledon Golden Hawks to a pre-season record of 1-1, defeating the league champion Alliston Hornets on the road last week.

Matt Magliozzi, who put up his first goal in a Golden Hawks uniform a week earlier, notched the first goal of the game just two minutes in.

But it was a natural hat trick from Daniel Cafagna that gave the Hawks a dominating lead, when last year's leading scorer for the team added three unanswered goals before the end of the period.

Alliston answered with three of their own in the middle frame, breaking the shutout just 13 seconds into the period. A late goal by newcomer Brett Barry in the dying seconds once again opened a two-goal lead heading to the third.

Neither side mounted much offence in the final 20 minutes, handing the Hawks their first win for the year by a score of 5-3.

Sam Procopio, between the pipes for a good portion of last regular season's success, turned away a whopping 45 shots for the victory.

Cafagna and Magliozzi led the offensive charge in pre-season action, each putting up three points over the two-game series. Magliozzi joins the Hawks after a brief stint with the Brampton Bombers of the Junior B Greater Ontario Hockey League last season.

A slow start prevented a comeback in the Hawks' only other game of the pre-season, a 4-3 loss at the hands of the Hornets in late August.

Caledon opens the regular season at their home rink of Caledon East Arena next Friday (Sept. 18), hosting the Erin Shamrocks. Puck drop is at 8:30 p.m.

Highland Powerlifting to host annual competition Sept. 12

The Highland Powerlifting Club will again host the Orangeville Open Powerlifting Championships Sept. 12.

It will be at the Athlete Institute, a world-class training facility at the intersection of Highway 9 and Heart Lake Road.

This is the second year for this event, and for the first time, it will include separate three-lift and a bench press only competitions. These championships are sanctioned by the Ontario Powerlifting Association and more than 40 men and women, ranging from teenagers to older than 60 years of age, will compete for best lifter honours across 11 weight categories.

The 2014 event was a tremendous success, with many lifters setting new provincial records in front of an enthusiastic, standing-room-only audience.

Lifting will commence at 9 a.m. and the public is encouraged to watch and cheer on the competitors.

Powerlifting is a sport that tests total body strength. Athletes compete in three separate lifting events to achieve a combined three-lift total.

The squat requires the lifter to first stand with a weighted barbell across his/her shoulders, then squat down until the hips are below the tops of the knees before standing back up. In the bench press, the lifter lays on a bench and lowers a weighted barbell to the chest and holds it until the referee gives the command to press it back up to arm's length. For the deadlift, competitors simply bend over and grip a weighted barbell, which is resting on the floor, and lift it until they stand completely upright with their shoulders back.

All lifts must comply with a strict set of rules and at least two out of three judges must agree that the lift has been properly executed for it to be successful. Competitors are given three attempts to register their highest successful lift in each event.

In the bench press only event, a competitor's best of the three attempts determines his/her total. In the three-lift event, the best squat, bench press and deadlift attempts are added together to record a three-lift total. Final results are determined by ranking the total scores of each competitor from highest to lowest in each weight division.

This event would not be possible without the support Highland Powerlifting has received from its sponsors, including The Athlete Institute; Pop-eye's Supplements Orangeville; Orangeville Equipment Rentals; Hyde-Whipp Heating and Air Conditioning; Eramosa Physiotherapy Associates; Financial Drawing Board Inc.; All Pro Roofing; iProRealty – Gord Purdy; Blamo Designs; and Adrenaline Personal Training

For more information about the Highland Powerlifting Club, contact James Newton at jnewton19@hotmail.com or visit the club's Facebook profile page to view competition and training photos and videos.

Non-contact league offers safe alternative for minor hockey players

By Jake Courtepatte

With the popularity of minor hockey across Ontario, sometimes lost among the forms, releases and politics of the game is the athlete's basic desire to just play hockey.

Enter the Ontario Rep Hockey League, a league outside the umbrella of the monopoly Ontario Minor Hockey Association. The non-contact circuit expanded to the Caledon area last season with the addition of the Peel Predators hockey club, catering to competitive players at the peewee, bantam and midget level, looking for inter-town action without the checking.

"Until last year, there was nothing a parent could do if they were unhappy with the CMHA," said Bill O'Neil, head coach of the Bantam Predators.

The Predators are marketed as a "no politics" organization, allowing for fair and safe play for any player who wishes to join. Their mission statement is to "offer safe, fun and competitive youth rep hockey."

"We wanted to get away from all of the politics that have always plagued minor hockey," said O'Neil.

Among the "politics" he alluded to is the overzealous parent. A key component of the league is limiting the amount of negative yelling at players on the ice, with convenors on hand to keep those parents in check.

"One of the things we try to do is create not only a safe atmosphere for kids, but a fun atmosphere," said league operator Peter Cardo.

Maintained by the Canadian Independent Hockey Federation, the ORHL has been in operation for three years and now maintains a 10-team roster, including Burlington, Cambridge, London and Toronto.

According to O'Neil, development is the main focus for the Predators' organization.

Aside from the game schedule, each team receives 20 full-ice practices created by certified hockey professionals, as well as an equal number of off-ice training sessions.

The Bantams kick off Sept. 18 in Burlington, and can look forward to facing off against teams from all across North America in early December at an international tournament in Rochester, New York.

If there is any other selling point needed for parents, the league has a policy to only hold games on weekends, leaving weeknights open for their child to hit the books if needed.

"This will allow all of our players to manage and maintain their very important school workload," said O'Neil.

Annual Caledon Pit Run goes this Saturday

Change up your regular jogging route with a route through the scenic trails of an active aggregate pit.

Whether you are a jogger, runner or walker, local construction partners Lafarge and Aeon invite the community to their fourth annual Caledon Pit Run this Saturday (Sept. 12).

The idea behind the annual run has continued to be the same year after year, to create a fun event that neighbours of the company can look forward to running together each year, and encourage families to stay active, while promoting and supporting a local charity.

The event will run from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The five-kilometre trail run and walk and the Kid's one-kilometre run allows participants of all ages and experience levels to enjoy the run.

Sign up today by registering online (www.caledonpitrun.ca) to run or walk the 5K or 1K routes, or just stop by to enjoy the open house featuring guided bus tours of the pit, a rock truck ride, plenty of kids activities (including the amazing Earth Rangers wild life demonstration) and a food truck. Other organizations in the community will be represented as well.

This year, all of all proceeds collected will go directly to Caledon's Bethell Hospice Foundation (www.bethellhospice.org). In 2016, Bethell Hospice (originally Hospice Caledon) will celebrate its 25th year of providing community-based palliative care and compassionate support to families struggling with a life-changing illness. The Foundation must raise almost $1,000,000 each year to cover operating costs and keep the doors of the Hospice open to serve the community.

The Caledon Main Pit is a property that spans over three concessions. It was originally owned by Conn Smythe, who began extracting gravel in the early 1950s. At that time, young Toronto Maple Leaf hockey players used to spend their summers working in the pit to earn extra income.

The products produced at the Caledon Main Pit include stone used for the production of asphalt for road paving, sand used to make concrete, granular products used in road base construction and sand fill. These products are used for road and building construction throughout the Greater Toronto Area.

The event will take place at 18000 Willoughby Rd. For more information on the 2015 Caledon Pit Run, visit www.caledon-pitrun.ca

Caledon Run Festival set for Sept. 27

For nearly a decade, C3 Canadian Cross Training Club has run the very popular Caledon Run Festival.

The yearly event has a five-kilometre run and walk, and the highlight of the day, the free Kids 1-Mile Run.

This year's event is set for Sept. 27 at the Caledon Community Complex soccer fields (next to Town Hall in Caledon East).

The Caledon Run Festival is partnering with Caledon Parks and Recreation this year to add in the first Wellness Fair as well. The event will have free sports expo booths, an opportunity for all clubs and sports and health professionals in the area to set up a free booth and to meet families who want to be more active and healthy.

The day will begin with the Benson Steel 5km Fun Run at 1 pm. At 1:03 p.m., the Royal Containers 5km Family Walk will take off. Finally at 2 p.m. will be the Free Kinetico Kids 1 Mile Fun Run or Walk. Organizers are trying to top their 1,300 kids who set a national record in 2013.

"To allow 1,200 or 1,300 kids of any age a chance to get a free T-shirt, free finishers' medal and a chance to meet the top pro athletes in the world is an incredible gift from C3, the Town of Caledon and C3 sponsors Kinetico, Royal Containers and Benson Steel," observed race director Barrie Shepley. "We are so excited that Recreation Director Laura Johnston and her staff are partnering with the Run Festival to add in the first ever Caledon Wellness Fair."

The two organizations' major goal is to get as many families, community sports groups and wellness organizations out for a free day of demonstrations, give-aways and a chance to meet top coaches, instructors and athletes. Caledon's Andrew Yorke will be at the Festival just one week after he races at the World Triathlon Championships.

"I have been at the Caledon Run Festival many times and its always a highlight for me," he said.

While there is no cost to join the Free 1-Mile Run, organizers need everyone to pre-register so they can plan for shirts and food. Those who are interested in the Fun 5km Run or Walk, must also pre-register. Those interested in having a free booth at the sports expo (all community sports teams, fitness clubs and wellness specialists are welcome) should email Erin.Burger@caledon.ca to reserve booth space. Registration and more details are at www.c3online.ca
