Town wants work on GTA West Corridor to resume

By Bill Rea

Municipalities like Caledon have already done a lot of work involving the GTA West Corridor Environmental Assessment (EA), and Town councillors want that work to be completed.

The Planning and Development Committee of council Tuesday passed a motion asking Transportation Minister Steven Del Duca to resume and complete the study immediately. As well, Mayor Allan Thompson will be seeking a meeting with Del Duca to discuss the importance of the GTA West Corridor, and to express the Town's dismay at the province's repeated failure to deliver required infrastructure to Caledon and to implement the growth plan for the Greater Golden Horseshoe.

The province announced last month that it would be suspending its work on the environmental assessment.

The motion, which was made at committee by Thompson, noted the Corridor was proposed in 2006 as a conceptual goods movement corridor in the growth plan for the Greater Golden Horseshoe. The Ministry of Transportation (MTO) started the EA the following year, and that study has concluded a 400-series highway will be needed there.

The motion stated the Town has incorporated the study into its planning, including the matters involving the Coleraine West employment area in Bolton.

It also stated the town has withheld approved developments in the EA study area at the request of MTO.

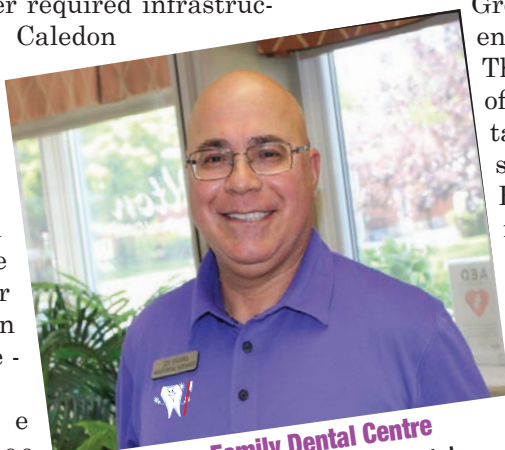

Thompson told his colleagues Tuesday that a staff report on this matter is due to go before Peel Regional council today (Thursday), and it contains a request that the study resume immediately.

"The money's been spent," he said. "Let's finish it."

Thompson likened stopping the study now to taking a college course, then not writing the final exam.

Councillor Annette Groves made an attempt to tack issues involving the Highway 427 extension onto the motion, but Thompson said that should involve a separate motion.

Groves commented that if the Province does not continue work on the Corridor, it will need to come up with other options, possibly including extending the 427 north to Highway 9.

Residents want to be in on Badlands plan

By Bill Rea

Parking is going to continue to be an issue when it comes to developing a master plan for the Cheltenham Badlands.

About 60 people were on hand for a meeting on the matter Monday, hosted by the Ontario Heritage Trust (OHT), which owns the property, along with Dillon Consulting.

The meeting included an update on the work that has been done so far, and it was also an effort to gain public input.

“You all have a lot of wisdom in this room,” facilitator Karla Kolli remarked.

The striking landscape of the Badlands, located on the south side of Olde Base Line Road, east of Creditview Road, is one of Ontario’s geological treasures and one of the best examples of badland topography in the province. The exposed bedrock at the Badlands is Queenston shale, and this iron-rich material was deposited more than 445 million years ago.

Due to removal of vegetation during land clearing and livestock grazing in the early 1900s, the shale has eroded into a series of hummocks and gullies, producing the distinctive landscape.

Today, the Badlands is recognized as a provincially significant Area of Natural and Scientific Interest (ANSI).

The 36.6-hectare property was acquired in 2002 by OHT, and is managed by the Bruce Trail Conservancy (BTC).

Sean Fraser, director of heritage programs and operations for OHT, told the meeting that a management team has been formed. Councillor Johanna Downey is on it, as well as representation from other agencies. He added there have been calls to have the public more engaged in the process.

Fraser said plans are in the works for a residents’ forum on the matter, probably in March. He added they would like to hold it near the site, if possible (Monday’s meeting was at the Caledon Community Complex in Caledon East).

“We haven’t done a great job of engaging with the residents,” he remarked.

The Region announced plans a couple of years ago to put in a parking lot at the northeast corner of the property, and it sparked considerable controversy. One woman wanted to hear justification for such an idea, arguing it would have a significant impact in the site.

Fraser said the parking lot matter is to be the subject of a Niagara Escarpment Commission hearing next month.

One woman was not pleased with the proposed location for the parking lot.

“You really need to get your hair around that,” she said.

Fraser said the location was determined after consultation with the management team, and involved the Town, Region and the Niagara Escarpment Commission (NEC). He couldn’t say if that would be the only parking area on the site.

Councillor Barb Shaughnessy wondered if the lot will be staffed. “It really can’t be managed unless the management team actually has a responsible person on site,” she commented.

There were also concerns expressed about cars parking on Olde Base Line. The Region banned parking and stopping in the area of the property last year.

Caroline Marshall of Dillon Consulting told the meeting the 36.6 hectare property is within the escarpment protection area of the Niagara Escarpment Plan, as well as being an escarpment access park within the Niagara Escarpment Parks and Open Space System (NEPOSS).

She explained access parks provide opportunities for public access through such facilities as the Bruce Trail.

Monday’s public meeting was the second one of the study process, and it comes as the inventory and analysis stage is being completed. Marshall said the first public meeting was held in October, and two more are planned in the process.

She also said a number of techniques are being used in the public consultation process, including media and mailed notices, social media, a survey, etc. There have also been meetings with local interested groups, such as the Caledon Countryside Alliance. There have not been any site visits, largely because the site is closed and fenced.

Marshall said four guiding principles have been compiled for the development of the master plan: Conservation of the property’s cultural and natural heritage values; Safety for all people who visit the site; improved accessibility for those who want to get on the property; and enhancing opportunities for interpretation and public education.

Summarizing the inventory and analysis, Marshall said they are looking at the whole property, not just the actual Badlands, which takes up only part of the site. They have also looked for priority protections areas through mapping and evaluation

Christie Cestra, an associate with Dillon, said an adaptive management approach was seen as the best way to proceed. It will monitor ongoing physical, biological and social indicators.

She said there are invasive species on the property, including garlic mustard and European Buckthorn. There’s also evidence of emerald ash borer infestation, which is a worry because there are a lot of ash trees there. There will have to be management practices, which could include removal and replacement of affected trees.

In terms of managing visitors, Marshall said the plan is to have controlled access through natural areas through a system of trails and footpaths. People would also be restricted to more resilient areas, with rogue trails closed. She also said a report on these issues is coming.

Marshall also said there would be limited public access to the actual Badland features of the site, restricted to viewing. There would be problems with letting people right on the features, such as erosion, crowding and interrupting the views. One of the ideas that’s been suggested is a viewing deck or boardwalk off Olde Base Line, although she stressed nothing has been decided yet.

As well, she said they have to find ways to manage erosion runoff from the Badlands.

The plan includes developing a hierarchy of trail types and designs, which would consider their carrying capacity, as well as visual and physical impacts. They will also look into looped trails, as well as chances for interpretive and educational signage.

Several people at the meeting were interested in the impacts on local traffic. Fraser said OHT is responsible for what takes place on the property, and is limited in what it can do regarding the local traffic situation. He also said the management team does have representation from both the Town and Peel Region.

Caledon’s Director of Public Works David Loveridge said a group is currently studying transportation issues in the western part of town. It has representation from Peel, as well as Credit Valley Conservation, and is studying a number of locations, including the Badlands, Belfountain and Forks of the Credit. He also said Peel did traffic counts during the fall colours season, and will be analyzing that data.

Loveridge also said he agreed with several at the meeting that residents have to be involved in the process.

“We’ve got to bring the public back in,” he said.

A fence was erected along Old Base Line last year to keep people off the Badlands. Fraser told the meeting it was put up as an interim measure, and there are currently no plans to take it down. He said there are other ways to manage people getting on the site.

One man said he drives by the site a couple of times a day, and has not seen any signs of people jumping the fence.

“It’s really worked,” he said, although a couple of people in the room said there have been people getting over it.

Some at the meeting didn’t seem to think that would be a bad thing.

“The Badland is going to turn into greenlands if you take all the foot traffic off of it,” one person observed.

HomeJames was a big success over the holidays

By Bill Rea

The recent holiday season was a busy time in a lot of respects, and that includes for those who run the HomeJames service. Last Thursday night was a time to thank the many volunteers who helped make the service work. HomeJames is a service that helps people, their vehicles and their passengers get home safe if they've had too much to drink during holiday celebrating. Teams of volunteers are dispatched to the client's location. The team usually consists of a designated driver to drive the client's vehicle, a person to drive the shuttle vehicle and a navigator to also handle communications.

HomeJames Caledon Chairman Tayler Parnaby announced last week there were 189 people who volunteered for at least one shift during the 14 evenings that the service was operating over the holidays. And there were several people who put in extra shifts, both over the holidays and other occasions during the year when it was available. Simon Lem put in 18 shifts, Marg Jones put in 17, Jason Hunter was out 14 evenings, Jay Turrell did 12, David Borgal and Willis Coulter did 11 each and Al Squires and Harold Janes each did 10. The combined efforts of the volunteers saw 461 calls responded to, with another 1,128 passengers safely getting to their destinations. The trips covered a little more than 13,700 kilometres. The service is free, but clients often offer donations, and Parnaby said they amounted to $11,597.65. "This night is all about you," he told the volunteers gathered last week at the Royal Ambassador Event Centre, as he congratulated them on an "extraordinary year." "It's been, quite frankly, a hell of a year," Parnaby observed, pointing out the former chair Stan Janes stepped down early in 2015. There has also been a lot of re-organization in the way the program works, conducting a detailed analysis of as many rides as possible. "We know what we're dealing with," he said, adding they redefined the service area, and new computer procedures have let organizers determine what sort of demand there will be for a given night, and how many volunteers are going to be needed. Parnaby said they had been expecting about 100 calls New Year's Eve, and received 96. "We set a record," he added. "This does not happen without volunteers," commented Caledon OPP Inspector Tim Melanson, who pointed out that during those 14 evenings over the holidays, the detachment did not have to deal with any accidents involving fatalities or serious injuries. "You got the people home safe and sound." "We want Caledon to be in the forefront of being a safe community," Deputy Fire Chief Mark Wallace added. Mayor Allan Thompson, who's put in shifts for the program, said he was out New Year's Eve too. He also said he had been discussing what he was going to be doing with a woman in a bank, and tears ran down her face. "Thank you for doing that," Thompson said she told him. "My kid brother was killed at 17 by a drunk driver." "That is the message," he added.

There were a number of draw prizes available last Thursday. Marg Jones was accompanied by her son Jackson 6, as she accepted their 55-inch Samsung TV from Mayor Allan Thompson and the HomeJames mascot.

Tayler Parnaby reviewed the statistics the program compiled over the holidays.

Police warning against telephone tax scam

Caledon OPP is issuing a warning about fraudulent phone calls after they received reports from concerned residents. Fraudsters are calling homeowners and indicating that a criminal investigation has been conducted and arrest warrants are being prepared, stemming from overdue taxes owed to the government.

The fraudsters represent themselves as an agent of the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) to legitimize their attempts to get residents to send them money and gain valuable personal information in the process. Residents are also contacting police to report they have received phone calls from someone claiming to be calling from CRA and that they had forwarded a large quantity of money through a money gram after the homeowner was told they owed money and had to pay immediately. Fraudsters may also be advising homeowners that they are in receipt of income tax credits and to forward their personal banking information to claim the cash. Police are reminding all residents to be extremely vigilant when receiving phone calls or e-mails from someone claiming to be from the CRA or a police service inquiring about personal information and demanding payment on behalf of CRA.

These types of calls are designed to create anxiety and complete shock for the unsuspecting resident, resulting in personal and financial information being disclosed. Constable Brenda Evans of Caledon OPP said these calls have been frequent over the last week. She added CRA would never try to collect back taxes through such a phone solicitation. For more information on fraud, call the Canadian Anti-Fraud Centre at 1-888-495-8501 or <http://www.antifraudcentre.ca>

OPP reports motorists are still driving while impaired

OPP report that drivers are still not getting the message about drinking and driving, or driving while impaired by drugs or alcohol. During the OPP Festive RIDE program that ran from Nov. 23 to Jan. 2, OPP laid 573 charges of impaired driving around the province. Police also report that a little more than 350 people had their licences suspended following a roadside warning during the annual safety initiative that saw police officers checking vehicles at roadside stops, while checking for alcohol and drug impaired drivers. Recent statistics do indicate that the percentage of people charged with impaired driving is down slightly during the Festive RIDE program this year compared to last year, but police say the sobering fact is that impaired driving is still considered a huge threat to public safety. “Despite the high number of charges again this year, it is difficult to understand why people still choose to drink or use drugs, and then get behind the wheel to drive,” said Deputy Commissioner Brad Blair, provincial commander of traffic safety and operational support. “These statistics are alarming, and we intend to keep the pressure on drivers who refuse to consider an alternative way to get to their destination.” “The annual Festive RIDE program may be over,” he added, “but I can assure you that OPP officers will remain diligent with their focus on impaired drivers by conducting RIDE stops in various random locations every day across this province.” In 2015, OPP laid more than 6,000 alcohol and drug impaired driving charges. Police remind the public that some officers now have specialized training to identify drug-impaired drivers. They will continue their efforts to raise awareness about the dangers associated with impaired driving.

Muzzo to plead guilty in fatal accident

The fate of King Township’s Marco Muzzo will be in the hands of a judge next month as he plans to plead guilty in the charges relating to the deaths of three children and their grandfather. Brian Greenspan, Muzzo’s lawyer, has asked to return to court Feb. 4 when Muzzo will plead guilty to some of the charges. At that time, a statement of facts will also be read. Muzzo, 29, is facing 18 charges related to the fatal collision, including 12 counts of impaired driving and six counts of dangerous operation of a motor vehicle. The Sept. 27 crash resulted in the deaths Daniel, 9, Harry, 5 and Milly 2, Neville-Lake. Their grandfather Gary Neville, 65, a King resident, was also killed in the tragic accident that occurred in Vaughan.

Greenspan said his client will plead guilty to multiple charges, adding that some charges are redundant and mutually exclusive. This is not a plea bargain, Greenspan contended. Both he and the Crown will submit their arguments at the sentencing hearing, which is scheduled for Feb. 23 and 24. “This is not a plea deal. This is an acceptance of responsibility by Marco Muzzo,” Greenspan told reporters outside the courthouse, after submitting the request to the judge. “He wanted this matter to be closed as quickly as possible, and to move on with the plea and the acceptance of responsibility.” The children’s parents, Jennifer Neville-Lake and Edward Lake, have attended each of Muzzo’s court appearances.

‘Kiss the Moon, Kiss the Sun,’ Catch the Joy at Blackhorse

By Anne Ritchie

Kiss the Moon, Kiss the Sun, Blackhorse Village Players current success, pulls on the heartstrings with empathy, compassion and love.

The actors skillfully draw out the strengths and weaknesses in each character so well one can experience their heartfelt emotion as well as hear their stories.

The story centers on Robert (Roderick Cook), “slow” through a mishap that left him with the lifelong mentality of a seven-year-old. Thanks to the talents of Cook, whose facial expressions and movement say as much as his lines, we quickly discover how intuitive, honest and humorous seven-year-olds can be. Robert’s pluck and integrity see him through the most traumatic farewells and friendships and we come to love his innocence to the point of shedding a tear along with him in the most touching scene.

That scene affects his mother Clair, played by Ginny Cathcart. A seasoned performer and most welcome addition to any Blackhorse Theatre production, Cathcart’s performance includes ever-changing and very believable conversations with God, settled nicely in His heavenly home, while it’s her exceptional strength of character that inspires us to believe all will be well in this world as well.

Befriended by Clair and Robert, Holly (Elizabeth Coulter) bears the responsibilities of yet another stage of motherhood, one which has arrived most unexpectedly. Coulter sensitively portrays a character whose understanding, responses and decisions will, just as unexpectedly, change the course of Robert’s family life. Coulter takes to the role so well we too rejoice in her triumphs and are edgy with her doubts, for we have all been there in our own lives.

One such choice blooms when Mark Hayward steps into the picture of a happy, content home. He may be the man every woman loves to hate, and then again, he may be a misguided soul who has come through a messy relationship just in time to shoulder responsibility for his actions. So well is the role played, Hayward leaves the audience guessing as to what his true character may be.

The family doctor, portrayed by Jane Bolton, coolly keeps her distance from turmoil or difficulty. Even so, the role is played so completely, we can sympathize with her. The strength of Bolton’s performance is that the compassion and empathy for the overburdened doctor are caringly portrayed as well as the practicality of “institutions,” the recitation of dangers found in “operations” and the onerous weight of dealing with “hundreds” of patients.

No play is cast without the performance of a wonderful director and producer, and Cheryl and Margaret Phillips easily match talents backstage with those in the spotlights. Add to that the work of stage manager Denise Kennedy, assisted by Susan Jalbert, and you have the makings a wonderful production.

Catch Norm Foster’s Kiss the Moon, Kiss the Sun, playing until Feb. 6, and experience the joys of a life well lived. Call 905-880-5002 for ticket information.

The Blackhorse Theatre is at the corner of highway 9 and Mount Wolfe Road in Caledon.

Robert (Roderick Cook) and Holly (Elizabeth Coulter) are the most likeable of unlikely friends who meet at a bus stop in Norm Foster’s Kiss the Moon, Kiss the Sun.

Lots of casting, trawling and catching in comedy rehearsals at Grace Tipling Hall

Yes, the cast of Norm Foster’s The Great Kooshog Lake Hollis McCauley Fishing Derby is back rehearsing.

The production next month of this rollicking comedy, set in a lakeside town during its annual fishing derby, has been re-energized by the break for Christmas and the New Year.

Of course, there’s lots to do in addition to rehearsing the play. Props and costumes must be sourced and selected, lighting design and sound effects, music must all be assessed and re-assessed, and set construction must be scheduled. Community theatre demands lots of commitment from its actors, directors and crew, many working in more than one capacity.

But members of the Tipling Stage Company, Shelburne Community Theatre love the challenge. And The Great Kooshog Lake Hollis McCauley Fishing Derby is destined to be a star attraction in Shelburne this winter!

Then, in addition to all that work discussed in the previous paragraph, there are tickets to be sold. The group has help with that. Holmes Appliances and Music Shop, Shelburne IDA and Shelburne Town Hall all have tickets for sale. They are also available on line at www.tiplingstagecompany.com

Show dates are Feb. 19, 20, 26 and 27 at 8 p.m. and Feb. 21 at 2 p.m. Plan to laugh away the winter blues.

Scapinello Road Hockey Tournament will be in April

The Ray Scapinello Road Hockey Tournament is a not-for-profit youth sporting event that is held each spring in Guelph. The 12th annual Tournament will be held April 30 at the University of Guelph. This tournament is open to children from nine to 14 years of age (birth years 2002-2007) with three divisions for boys/co-ed teams and two divisions for girls teams. There is also a special needs division that is run in conjunction with the Guelph Giants Hockey Club. Proceeds from the tournament are donated to benefit youth in the Guelph area through cooperation with the Guelph

Community Foundation. Scapinello, who was born near Guelph, started the tournament as a way to give back to his community. He spent more than 30 years as a linesman in the National hockey League. He has also been active in the annual Alton Millpond Hockey Tournament. This year's "spring classic" is expected to attract 125 teams with 500 participants, as well as family, friends, and volunteers, all eager to see who will win the Scampy Cup in 2016. How to get electoral reform

It should be clear that our new federal government has a lot to deal with these days.

There is one item on the agenda that has not drawn a lot of attention yet, but it will, especially since it will have a lot of impact on the way this democracy of ours functions.

There was some mention during last fall's federal campaign that the 2015 election was going to be the last one with the current system, commonly known as "first past the post." While it did come up, it wasn't one of the main planks of the Liberal platform. No matter, it's a matter that has been a concern for some, and there are calls to have it addressed.

Late last month, there were reports that the Liberals were intending to use their majority in the House of Commons to ram changes through, without reference to the electorate. There have been charges that the Liberals are being arrogant in their approach.

Assuming the Trudeau Liberals carry through on what's been suggested, it can be demonstrated that it would be nothing new. One of the great disadvantages of electing majority governments, at either the federal or provincial level, is they sometimes get the idea that they have been granted a blank cheque to do just about anything they please.

Think of the Ontario government's plan to sell shares of Hydro One. Was that a major issue in the 2014 election? It was not.

There have been calls for a referendum on this matter. We think it's a safe bet we're not going to see one. Why won't the government hold a referendum? Premier Kathleen Wynne doesn't have to.

Think back some 28 years. The Progressive Conservative government of Brian Mulroney was returned to another majority. During that memorable campaign, which was dominated by the issue of free trade with the United States, there was no mention of bringing in a sales tax at the federal level. Yet we got one, over very loud protests. It was called the Goods and Services Tax (GST).

Do you recall a referendum on that issue? Of course not. Why? The government of the day didn't have to. In 1995, Ontario voters gave Mike Harris and his Progressive Conservatives a majority. One of the points the Tories had mentioned during the campaign was plans to hold referendums.

But late in 1996, hints were dropping that the Tories were planning to amalgamate the six municipalities that made up the Metro level of government into one city in Toronto, commonly referred to as a "megacity." And when the necessary legislation was revealed, it was made clear that there would be no referendum.

Opponents to the plan organized their own referendum, led by such community activists as former Toronto mayor John Sewell and Kathleen Wynne (yes, that Kathleen Wynne). In the end, 76.1 per cent of the Toronto residents who participated in the referendum told the Harris government to drop the idea. Harris didn't have to because he had a majority.

Thus, it's clear that we have very little reason to hope that there will be a referendum if and when Trudeau and company come up with their plans for electoral reform. That's simply the way things have gone for the last 150 years or so.

But something else that should be discussed is the simple fact that government can do things like this. Does that not point to a need for some sort of reform in the ways governments are elected in this system of ours?

How to achieve that is a major question.

The Trudeau government can come up with any idea it likes and push it through Parliament.

One disadvantage to holding a referendum is would it be a vote on reform in question, or an opinion poll on how the government is governing? (Remember the Charlottetown Accord referendum of October 1992, which degenerated to a poll on the Mulroney government).

Ontario voters were given the chance to vote on a proposal for reform, called "mixed-member proportional representation." That was tacked on as a referendum question on the ballots in the 2007 general election. The incumbent government of Dalton McGuinty wisely just put the question on the ballot, and took no definite stand on the issue. For that matter, no one did. Not surprisingly, the proposed reform was rejected.

If we're going to have electoral reform that we can all live with and embrace, there's going to have to be as faction that comes up with a workable idea and get it before the voters, through a referendum, complete with explanations as to how it would work, and promotion of the advantages. Opponents would be able to make their own case to the contrary.

It could be argued that electoral reform is too important to leave up to government.

Keon welcomed back

Having moved to the Greater Toronto Area (GTA) from Montreal in 1969, I jumped on the Leaf Nation's band wagon in 1970, mostly because of their captain, Davey Keon.

Then came the Ballard years and we all know that story. And finally, Brendan Shanahan was able to do what no one else seems to have been able to do — not just honor Dave Keon, but get him to finally feel at home here, again, finally.

So this past Saturday, while the great rivalry of the Leafs and Habs faced off at the ACC, Davey was honored with two other greats — Tim Horton and Turk Broda. So one would expect the applause for this presentation would be as loud as if the Leafs had won the cup. But sadly it wasn't. It was actually a bit lame.

And why? Because at least half the audience were taking pictures with their cell phones and not applauding.

Is this where technology has taken us? All the pictures you could want are on line and before you even got home from the game, and probably a lot better than the ones you will get from your cell phone.

I hope Dave Keon understood why the applause was not that loud. Sorry Dave, and welcome home.

It happened today

He's remembered for many things.

They include having six wives, two whom had their heads cut off; curtailing the clout the Pope had in England and other lands under his rule; obesity; a bad temper; composing music and a number of other contributions.

Ironically, he died on what would have been his father's 90th birthday.

Henry VIII died this day, Jan. 28, 1547.

Paycheques are not guaranteed

I don't think there's a sensible person out there who didn't feel for Goodwill employees over what they had to deal with last week.

It's not fun showing up for work one day and finding the doors are locked.

But unfortunately, that is also the way the real world works, sometimes.

I think it's clear the whole matter could have been handled with a lot more class, but it is also reality that adults have a bad habit of setting their class aside sometimes. What they set it aside in favour of is something of a mystery.

I know a woman who was driving to work one day about 25 years ago, listening to the 8 a.m. news on the radio. That's how she found out her company had just gone out of business and she was unemployed.

The fact is that companies, particularly those in the private sector, sometimes abruptly stop functioning, leaving the people who work for them asking a lot of questions and having no one to direct those questions to.

True, there are labour laws, which stipulate how employees are to be treated in such situations, including dealing with factors like paying them for services that have already been rendered. And there are other matters, such as severance, vacation pay, reimbursement for expenses, etc. So yeah, when an employer goes out of business, he or she is expected to do right by the people who have been working for them.

On the other hand, no matter how much money an employee is entitled to, if the bucks aren't there, they're not going to be distributed to those who are entitled to them.

That's a lesson in reality I learned the hard way a little more than 16 years ago. I had been working for a company for about five and half years. Things appeared to be solvent. Yet within 24 hours, my colleagues and I were listening to a bankruptcy trustee tell us to turn in our keys and remove all personal possessions from the office. We were all out of work.

To make matters worse, this all took place Dec. 17; like eight days before Christmas. Since that memorable day, I have never even thought of complaining about my Christmas bonus, no matter how big or small it might be. It could never compare with a pink slip.

There were a lot of warning signs that all of us who worked in that office should have picked up on. But given the right circumstances, anyone can be naïve. We all had accepted the assurances from above that everything was okay. We suddenly learned such was not the case when we realized all of our paycheques were bouncing. This was a week to the day after we had all put our cheques in the bank. The upshot, the following day, was the bankruptcy trustee, acting on behalf of our former employers, told us we had all been working for free for the last three weeks (she didn't come out and say it in those words, but that was the very clear inference).

We were still owed for three weeks salary, and some of us were owed for expenses.

Some of the senior staffers had gotten into the habit, if office supplies were needed, to go to one of the local stores, collect what was required, pay for it with our Visas and submit copies of the receipts. The usual result would be an additional cheque to cover the expense in the next pay envelope. Several of us had done that many times, in full confidence that we would be reimbursed. No sweat.

But what if there was no next pay envelope? If memory serves, that amounted to about another 85 bucks I was out.

Of course there are stipulations that creditors get some of the proceeds once the assets of the bankrupt company are calculated, but a lot depends one who stands where on the pecking order of said creditors. We were told, at the time, by the trustee that employees enjoy a rather high spot on that proverbial ladder, but not the top rung. One of the local politicians where the company had been based (he was also a lawyer by training) told me I wouldn't likely be getting a lot, but what little there might be was better than nothing, so I should take it. He was close. In fact, we were told there was going to be nothing for the ousted staff. Owing to privacy considerations, I won't elaborate. Suffice to say I got the hook, being stiffed for at least three weeks salary, etc.

Thus, I was happy to learn Friday morning that the displaced employees at Goodwill would at least be getting the paycheques they are owed. Granted, we're not talking about a lot of money here. But whatever it is they're going to receive is better than nothing. I know from experience it could be a lot less.

But my sympathy for these people can only go so far. True, they got a bum deal, but life, unfortunately, is full of them.

We who work in the private sector, as I have done throughout my entire career, must appreciate the fact that we are guaranteed nothing. Granted, hard work will always serve one well in the long run, and a strong work record will come in handy when you need it (something else I learned when I suddenly found myself unemployed many years ago), but bad things do happen. We have to be ready for them.

And maybe those who work in the public sector should take a bit if note.

It is true that governments can run into debt a lot easier than private businesses.

There is nothing wrong with being in debt. Anyone who has ever had a mortgage knows that. The crucial point is making sure there's an exit strategy from said debt. I learned the hard way some 16 years ago what can happen when there's no such strategy.

Yet it seems impossible these days for government to function without running a deficit. Justin Trudeau got elected Prime Minister with a promise to develop infrastructure that he doesn't have the money to pay for.

But even a government can run into heavy debt for only so long. People in Greece learned that little lesson a couple of years ago.

If government debt gets too high, then those employees in the public sector might find out their positions aren't as secure as they might have thought. Some of them might find themselves suddenly out of work, without the compensation they might have been expecting. That is something I know a bit about.

If these people suddenly find themselves unemployed, they might find the government hasn't got the bucks to reimburse them. Who's going to help those people out?

If someone comes up with money to help these folks out, is there any chance I'll get the three weeks pay I was stiffed out of years ago?

Protect your home from carbon monoxide

The last few weeks of winter have proven to be quite cold, which means turning our furnaces up and burning more wood to keep our homes warm.

However, this can also mean our risk of carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning can increase. Fortunately, by knowing what CO is, the health risks it poses, and what steps we can take to protect ourselves from CO poisoning, we can heat our homes safely and have peace of mind.

Sadly, each year in this country, there are Canadians who die or become sick due to CO poisoning. CO is a noxious gas and doesn't have any colour, smell, or taste, which is why it is often referred to as the "silent killer." It's present when fuels, such as propane, natural gas, gasoline, oil, coal, and wood are burned. It is also present in second-hand smoke. The gas may be found at anytime of the year in your home or cottage; however, the risk is raised in the winter months since many Canadians heat their homes using furnaces, water heaters/boilers, wood stoves, as well as other appliances which use fuel to operate. Unfortunately, if any of these appliances or devices aren't installed correctly or happen to malfunction, CO can be discharged throughout your home.

CO can also be released from vehicle exhaust, blocked chimney flues, fuel-burning cooking appliances, and charcoal grills used in a home, cottage, tent, camper, garage, or other unventilated areas.

There are many health risks associated with CO and frighteningly, it can pose a serious risk to your health before you realize its presence. The impact of CO is a reduction in your body's capacity to move oxygen in your blood. According to Health Canada, some of the very serious health risks posed by CO exposure include: at low levels, it can cause headaches, tiredness, shortness of breath and impaired motor functions (symptoms which can mimic the flu); at high levels or if someone is exposed to the gas for an extended period of time, it can produce symptoms of dizziness, chest pain, tiredness, poor vision and difficulty thinking; at very high levels, exposure can lead to convulsions, coma and death.

It is important to remember that CO can only be detected by a CO detector. There are steps you can take to protect yourself and your loved ones.

Health Canada has several safety tips. Good maintenance on fuel-burning appliances and devices is important because CO detectors may not detect low levels of CO. This maintenance should also include an inspection by a professional at least once a year. It is also important to keep in mind that during and following a snow storm, to always check exhaust vents for your dryer, furnace, wood-burning or gas stove, fireplace, and heat recovery ventilator, to ensure they are cleared of snow. Furthermore, exhaust vents and flues for all fuel-burning and propane and natural gas-powered appliances must be checked on a regular basis to safeguard against obstructions or debris which could cause a fire. Secondly, put at least one Canadian Standards Association (CSA) approved CO detector with an alarm (to allow you to hear the warning of high CO levels) in your home, in addition to a fire alarm. Furthermore, follow the manufacturer's installation, testing, use, and replacement instructions and test the detector(s) regularly. Thirdly, never use a barbecue or portable fuel-burning camping equipment inside your home, garage, vehicle, camper or tent. Do not use kerosene oil or oil space heaters or lamps in enclosed areas unless they've been specifically designed for such a purpose, and never allow people to smoke indoors. Lastly, do not idle vehicles in the garage even if the garage door is open and never operate gas-powered lawnmowers, trimmers, snow blowers, generators or other equipment in the garage, and always keep the door between your home and the garage closed.

If your CO detector does sound, leave your home immediately and rush to fresh air and once outside, call 9-1-1, your fire department or emergency services. Never try to locate the source of the CO and do not go back into your home until the problem has been resolved by a professional.

CO can pose serious health risks to all of us. However, by taking the necessary precautions, we can reduce our risk of exposure substantially and remain warm and safe throughout the winter months. For more information, please visit the Healthy Canadians website at <http://healthycanadians.gc.ca>

Province supporting Heatherlea Market in Caledon

Ontario is investing in Caledon's Heatherlea Market to expand its operations, meet consumer demand and retain jobs.

The province is providing up to $58,750 through the Local Food Fund to help Heatherlea Market on Winston Churchill Boulevard expand the farm-gate store with an in-house butcher shop with dry-aging capabilities, new cold storage equipment and the installation of new display units. Funding for the project will also assist in providing a larger selection of value-added products, such as in-house prepared meals and baked goods, and in meeting consumer demand for healthy, locally-prepared meat products while creating 24 and retaining nine jobs.

The Local Food Fund supports innovative local food projects that increase demand and sales of Ontario food, stimulate private sector investment and strengthen Ontario's agri-food sector.

Supporting a strong and innovative agri-food industry is part of the government's economic plan for Ontario. The four-part plan includes investing in people's talents and skills, making the largest investment in public infrastructure in Ontario's history, creating a dynamic, innovative environment where business thrives, and building a secure retirement savings plan.

"It is great to see Heatherlea Market increasing the awareness of and demand for food that is grown, harvested or produced locally," commented Vaughan MPP Steven Del Duca. "By supporting Ontario's agri-food sector our government is helping support farmers, strengthen rural communities and grow our economy."

"Supporting local food projects is vital to the success and continued growth of Ontario's agri-food industry," Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs Minister Jeff Leal added. "Our government's continued investments in local food projects not only supports innovation and grows our economy, but strengthens the connection between farmers, food producers and consumers."

The Local Food Fund is part of the government's broader local food strategy to promote the good things that are grown, harvested and produced across the province.

Ontario's agri-food sector contributes more than $35 billion to the province's economy and supports in excess of 781,000 jobs.

Rotary Club of Palgrave's Weekly Rotary Minute

By Joe Sheppard

Sometimes when looking for an idea, you find much more.

While researching topics to present at our Club for my weekly Rotary Minute, I came across a powerful inspirational video produced by Rotary International Clubs in Great Britain and Ireland. It is musical in nature with video images coinciding with tag lines.

I invite you to feel what each means to you:

You are in a good place. Think about it. Every day, you make a difference. You hit the targets, and sometimes they hit you. You put in the hours, yet you still make time for what's important. You do the hard yards.

You take responsibility — for the successes and, sometimes, for the failures.

You weather the storms, and enjoy the time in the sun.

So think about it.

You may not realize it, but your skills are invaluable. And, now?

Now it's time to put them to good use, to give something back. To get into a new business, the business of making a difference. The business of improving lives, the lives of those who didn't get your opportunities. The business of saving lives, and making lives worthwhile and fulfilled. The business of caring, and sharing your experience. Of restoring pride, and rediscovering dignity.

Imagine the difference your time could make. That your skills could bring to bear. Imagine a simple "thank you" was your reward. Imagine a smile was your return on investment. Imagine what a difference you could make.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Claire Hoy

While our pretty-boy Prime Minister Justin Trudeau was wowing the elites in Davos, Switzerland, hobnobbing with his fellow rich and famous beautiful people — and winning plaudits in the slaving mainstream media — not everyone at home was joining in the hero worship.

Indeed, Quebecer Yves Richard — whose wife Maude Carrier, his father-in-law and four other Quebec humanitarian workers were killed by terrorist in Burkino Faso — actually hung up on Trudeau after the prime minister had waited until three days after the attack to call him and then offered only his typical, Hallmark-style bromides.

The wanton murder of the six Quebecers came one day after another Quebecer, Tahar Amer-Ouali, was killed in a terrorist attack in the Islamic State in Jakarta, the most Canadians killed in terrorist attacks since Sept. 11, 2011 in the U.S.

"My prime minister called me and began speaking in such a canned manner, wishing me good luck, offering me his condolences and talking about them as a source of Canadian pride," Richard told Montreal radio station 98.5 FM. "That's when I told him to stop his political blabbing."

"If he's going to call me, then at least he should know who the Carriers are. It wasn't out of Canadian pride that they were doing what they were doing, but rather because they were basically good people."

So Richard, tired of listening to Trudeau's set-piece syrup, told the prime minister to go hug his wife and children and then hung up on him.

"It felt good," said Richard.

It's just another in a growing list of examples of Trudeau's apparent inability to get beyond scripted clichés and actually offer some concrete answers to such vexing problems.

It even prompted prominent Quebec columnist Lysiane Gagnon — certainly not a noted Liberal basher — to lament that Trudeau's office saw no point in changing their schedule to attend a memorial honouring the six victims. Yet the day before, Trudeau had attended a mosque in Peterborough that had been damaged by arson in the wake of the Paris Islamic terrorist attack.

To be sure, whoever torched the mosque should be brought to justice, but a) nobody died in that fire and b) the people of Peterborough showed their true colours by raising enough money to rebuild the mosque.

So it was pretty easy — and politically useful — for Trudeau to breeze into Peterborough and wring his hands about the mosque burning.

But it was far more difficult to go to Quebec and honour the six dead Canadians in light of the growing feeling that Trudeau, which means Canada in this context, isn't taking Islamic terrorism seriously enough and isn't carrying its weight in the fight against these murderous thugs.

To underscore that feeling, Camille Carrier — Richard's mother-in-law, and the mother of Maude Carrier — publicly rebuked the Trudeau government for not standing with allies such as France to fight the growing terrorist threat.

"I was ashamed before this happened, but obviously the loss of my daughter has only made me more revolted about this situation," she said. "I'm so ashamed of my own country."

Indeed, we all should be ashamed, because this whole thing played out when Canada was pointedly excluded — by design, and with justification — from a meeting of defence ministers of the coalition of countries fighting the Islamic state militants.

While the U.S. invited Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Australia and the Netherlands, to the meeting to discuss future military strategy, Canada's Defence Minister Harjit Sajjan — a decorated warrior in his own right — was left the unenviable task of trying to spin this huge international embarrassment into a minor bump along the road to Trudeau's so-called "sunny ways."

It's directly because of Trudeau's oft-repeated pledge to pull our CF-18s from combat — Sajjan, absurdly, claimed it had nothing to do with that (I mean, really?) — that the allies have sent a message to Canada to either shape up or ship out.

You would think that the slaughter of innocents in Paris would have caused Trudeau to reconsider his unrealistic views that you can somehow solve this issue mainly by hugs and kisses. But it didn't, although Trudeau keeps promising he'll soon announce our new contribution to the fight.

It's difficult to justify the death of innocent Parisians wasn't enough of a wake-up call to move the needle for Trudeau, but it's downright shameful that the subsequent murder of six Canadians — whose "crimes" involved building schools for local children — still isn't enough to nudge him away from his ill-considered and internationally humiliating stance.

Hollywood might love him. But those on the front lines against terrorism are, for the moment at least, giving a big thumbs-down.

And so they should.

Golden Hawks go without a point in crucial two games

By Jake Courtepatte

Looking to make a push for the top heading into the final week of the GMOHL season, it seems the Caledon Golden Hawks are trapped in mediocrity limbo.

After going 3-0-1 through mid-January, regulation losses came back-to-back over the weekend at the hands of opponents too close for comfort in the standings.

Also looking to improve their stock for the playoffs are the Penetang Kings, whose come-from-behind victory over Caledon Friday spoiled the Hawks' streak.

As is often the case, the high-scoring trio of Daniel Cafagna, Nicholas McNutt and Christian Mariconda combined to open the scoring, with Cafagna getting the marker late in the first. Matt Magliozzi scored a few minutes later to give Caledon a 2-0 lead after one.

Penetang beat goaltender Brendan Macham once in the second and twice in the third, throwing 41 shots at the Caledon net and holding onto a 3-2 victory.

Sunday's match up in Caledon against the red-hot Huntsville Otters was over from the start. Both Macham and Sam Procopio saw action in the net for the Golden Hawks, with Procopio coming out after the second goal in a lopsided 7-0 loss.

Macham was marked with five goals against through 36 shots.

Never able to fully recover from an 0-7 start to the season in late September and early October, the Hawks seem to at least have moved themselves into a comfortable playoff position. Two games remain on the regular season schedule, leaving the Hawks able to move up to as high as third place in the nine-team league, and as low as sixth.

Currently they sit in fifth with a 17-19-2 record, three points behind the Stayner Siskins, who as of now would be Caledon's first round match up. The season series between the two teams went 3-1-1 in Caledon's favour.

They will have their work cut out for them in Friday's final away game of the season, visiting the Alliston Hornets. Alliston has run away with the league this year, an amazing 25 points up on the second place Otters.

Fans can catch the final home game of the regular season Sunday, with a 7 p.m. puck drop against the Kings.

Introducing Caledon Hills Racing

With the 2016 cycling season just around the corner, Caledon Hills Cycling and Nordic Centre in Inglewood is announcing Caledon Hills Racing (CHR).

This is a cycling team that will soon be competing in Ontario Cup races, recreational events and charity rides throughout Headwaters and beyond.

The 16-member squad has set their sights on multiple races throughout Ontario, Quebec and the U.S., as well as supporting local races (like the Tour de Terra Cotta) and community rides, including a commitment to raise funds for Headwaters hospital at the Tour de Headwaters, slated for September.

CHR will be directed and coached by local athlete Sean Bechtel, who is nationally acclaimed for his achievements as a Canadian triathlete, including holding a spot on Canada's National Triathlon Team, Ironman competitor and representing Canada at the Pan American Games.

"Through sport, I've discovered a passion for helping others to reach their potential," he said, "so I'm thrilled to be playing a role in developing this team and these local athletes."

Although this is the team's inaugural year, they have already garnered the support of sponsors who see the merits of celebrating active living and competion in Caledon. Committed sponsors currently include Sirius XM, Calder Engineering, Colony Ford Lincoln, Creemore Springs, Digica Solutions, Dufferin Family Chiropractic, Fionn MacCool's, Peter Andrew Photography, Remax - Lee Hill and True North Marketing Communications.

"The generosity of these sponsors is an amazing testament to the health of our local community and will go a long way in ensuring that Caledon Hills Racing becomes a formidable group of competitive men, women and junior riders in the years ahead," Caledon Hills Cycling owner Don Coats commented.

Cheer them on at their first race (and the first race of the season) March 25 at the Good Friday Ontario Cup Road Race in Ancaster, hosted by the Hamilton Cycling Club.

The team currently consists of 16 riders from the Headwaters region who have ridden together through various teams and clubs. Membership is not limited and the team looks forward to growing their roster.

Tie at the top of Sunday night hockey league

The last place team held the first place club to a 5-5 draw Jan. 10. The result was a tie at the top of the standings in the Sunday Night Junior Men Hockey League standings. Inside Out Family Chiropractic Predators edged the St. Louis Bar & Grill Red Wings 2-1 to claim a share of top spot with the Mr. Handyman Moose.

Warriors 6, Wild 3
In a game that was close after one, saw the We Are Creative Warriors opened it up in the second period to secure the win over the Pommies Cider Co. Wild.

Warrior weapons were Gus Kourousis from Kevin Norris, Bogdan Rapan (unassisted), Brent Spagnol from Kourousis, Dave Gardilcic from Norris, Rapan from Kourousis, and Spagnol (unassisted). Wild wrappers were Jay Beech (unassisted), Mike Swan from Beech, and Beech from Peter Coghill.

Predators 2, Wings 1
In a nail biter, the Predators were able to net a pair in the second frame and get the win over the Wings. Predator power houses were Mike Andreoli from Mike Arnold, and Steve Hutchins from Tim Vokey. Wings' go-to guy was Victor Ranieri from Shane DeLaronde.

Penguins 3, Blades 2
In another close one, the George's Arena Sports Penguins were able to vault into fifth place by staying off the Ken's Lawn Mower Repairs Blades and net the victory. Penguin players were Alex Schittenhelm from Ron Toffin, Cory Schittenhelm from Mike Tarasco, and Toffin (unassisted). Blades bangers were Darren Levy from Jason Clark, and Shawn Simpson from Darren Jones.

Moose 5, Fire 5
To round out the night, neither team could best the other as the Moose skated to a draw with the Ainsley Fire Protection Fire. Moose marvels were Brendan Pace from Graham Bryson, Cam Coulter from Shane Marshall, Bryson (unassisted), Carlo Landolfi from Steve Brown, and Bryson from Landolfi and Pace. Fire flamers were Mike Weeda from Ryan Wood, Sandro Mignosa from Robert Silvestri, Mark Andreoli from Mignosa, Steve Whitten (unassisted), and Andreoli from Mignosa and Eamon Harper.

Jan. 3
The year 2015 ended with the Predators knocking the Moose out of the lead, but they couldn't stay on top for long. Jan. 3 saw the Predators go down to defeat, while the Moose were able to re-take the lead.

Fire 6, Penguins 4
The Ainsley Fire Protection Fire wasted no time in burning up the George's Arena Sports Penguins in a barn burner to start 2016, notching their fourth win of the campaign in the process. Mark Andreoli netted a pair with Harper, James Kennedy, Michael Horsley and Whitten adding singles. Andreoli also added two helpers, as did Mignosa with Silvestri and Wood each getting one. Penguin pushers were Kevin Christie with two and Brandon Scott and Tarasco each with singles, while Alex Schittenhelm added a pair of assists and Matt Dowdle and Mike Brioux had singles.

Moose 5, Blades 3
The Moose squad stepped up and dulled the Ken's Lawn Mower Repair Blades to get back on the winning track for 2016, and back into first place. Coulter was the Moose go-to guy with a pair, while Eric Cirone, Brad Sztorc and Marc de Abaitua added singles. Helpers were from Bryson, Landolfi and Chuck Hughes. Blades blasters were Daryll Simpson with a goal and a helper, Darren Jones with a goal and Steve Smith with the last marker.

Wings 7, Wild 1
The St. Louis Bar and Grill Red Wings squeezed the juice from Pommies Cider Co. Wild and took the game with force. Net nabbers for the Wings were Rob Thibeault and Ranieri with two each, and Derek Cleary, Daniel Hamlett and Chris Quayle with singles. Assists were from the sticks of Cleary, Mike Blackwood, Bob McHardy and Brad Wigner. The Wild's lone marksman was Beech (unassisted).

Warriors 8, Predators 4
We Are Creative Warriors showed their creative side, handing the Predators a lopsided loss. Steve Conforti was the big point getter for the Warriors with two goals and a helper, while Kourousis got a pair of goals, Jody Spagnol added goal and assist, as did his brother Brent. Nick Curro was good for three assists, and Gardilcic and Andrew Kirk each netted singles, with Rapan adding the last assist. Predator power players were Hutchins with a pair, and Mike Andreoli and Fab Iafano with singles. Help came from Iafano and John Hutchins.

SSG Gloves' Go Clean for the Green promotion manager Jennifer Ward presents Eric Lamaze with a $3,000 bonus following his win in the $35,000 Ruby et Violette WEF Challenge Cup Round II at the Winter Equestrian Festival in Wellington, FL.

Eric Lamaze goes 'Clean for the Green' and wins $3,000 SSG Gloves Bonus

Canadian Olympic Champion Eric Lamaze returned to familiar territory to win the $35,000 Ruby et Violette WEF Challenge Cup Round II, along with a $3,000 bonus in the SSG Gloves 'Go Clean for the Green' promotion, at the 2016 Winter Equestrian Festival (WEF) in Wellington, FL., last Thursday. During the 2015 Winter Equestrian Festival, Lamaze collected a total of $15,000 in bonus money by wearing his SSG Digital style riding gloves to five WEF Challenge Cup Series wins. He is now off to another promising start, piloting Rosana du Park, an 11-year-old selle francais mare owned by Artisan Farms LLC and Torrey Pines Stable, to victory over a 96-horse starting field. As the first rider back for a 20-horse jump-off, Schomberg resident Lamaze set the pace and saw his time of 35.58 seconds hold up for the win. Lamaze, who also won the same competition in 2015 riding Rosana du Park, was thrilled to win his share of the prize money, along with the $3,000 in bonus money from SSG Gloves in recognition of his loyalty to the Canadian brand.

"This is nice prize money, but with 100 horses in a class, it's nice to get an extra bonus and start the year with an extra $3,000 in this competition," said Lamaze, who is a loyal SSG Gloves supporter. "The gloves are great to wear. With the bonus, I don't know why anybody wouldn't wear them!" In addition to sponsoring the WEF Challenge Cup each Thursday throughout the 12-week Winter Equestrian Festival, SSG Gloves also offers a $1,000 bonus to the winners of the weekly Maybach — Icons of Luxury High Amateur-Owner Jumper Classic and the Sleepy P High Junior Jumper Classic competitions. The effort by SSG Gloves to support professional riders as well as amateur and junior riders is an important one, according to Lamaze. "It means a lot to us, but for the juniors and amateurs, it means that much more," Lamaze commented. "I appreciate that a sponsor, especially being a Canadian company, does that for the riders." The "Go Clean for the Green" promotion offers $60,000 in bonus money to riders throughout the 12-week WEF competition, running from Jan. 13 to April 3, in Wellington. A $3,000 bonus is offered each week to the winner of the WEF Challenge Cup if they are wearing SSG Digital style riding gloves with the horsehead logo clearly visible in all rounds of competition. In the weekly Maybach — Icons of Luxury High Amateur-Owner Jumper Classic and the Sleepy P High Junior Jumper Classic competitions, a $1,000 bonus is on offer if the winning rider is wearing SSG 'Digital' style riding gloves with the SSG Gloves horse head logo clearly visible in all rounds of competition.

MY INSURANCE BROKER CORP - Good record or high risk driver. Auto Insurance, home, commercial, life. 416-240-8888. Email: Insureme100@gmail.com.

The Van Binsbergen family would like to thank the medical and support staff at Headwaters Health Care Centre for the wonderful care they provided to Oscar periodically over the last 2½ years, the CCAC caring nurses and PWS's that made it possible for him to remain at home to the end, and especially Dr. Ken Derksen without whose support, encouragement and home visits we would not have had that precious gift of his last 12 days at home with us. Thank you to the staff at Dods and McNair Funeral Home for so professionally and sensitively arranging and guiding us through the funeral arrangements, funeral and interment. A very special thank you to the ladies of Good Friends Fellowship, our church family, who provided and served the refreshments for the fellowship following the funeral. The family was overwhelmed with the many who came to celebrate Oscar's life with us on Saturday, January 23rd. Thank you for your cards, words of kindness and support. Please accept our apologies if we were unable to personally spend time with each one of you at the funeral.
