Paving lot at Rotary Place could get more priority

By Bill Rea

Planned paving work is going to take place in the parking lot at Albion Bolton Community Centre (ABCC), although it's going to be more costly than had first been planned.

Caledon council approved the revised estimate Tuesday.

And Councillor Patti Foley was successful in getting her colleagues to give some extra priority to the paving of the lot at Rotary Place on Bolton's north hill, next to the Caledon Centre for Recreation and Wellness (CCRW).

Town staff had reported $500,000 had been budgeted for the work at ABCC. C. Valley Paving Limited had the lowest compliant tender bid to do the work last year, but it was over budget, so staff said the request for tender was cancelled. Their report also stated C. Valley has done similar projects for the Town of Aurora, as well as for Metrolinx, and the work has been deemed satisfactory.

Council accepted the staff recommendation to give the job to C. Valley, although it's cost is going to be almost $31,000 more than what had been planned. That

But in view of the shortfall, staff suggested roughly $30,000 that was earmarked for the parking lot at Rotary Place be held for the 2015 capital budget.

That did not appeal to Foley. She was able to get her fellow councillors to go along with creating a new capital project established for this year for the Rotary Place Parking Lot paving, with the $30,000 funded from the tax funded capital reserve. And if the work doesn't go ahead this year, that money will remain as a deposit for a full parking lot reconstruction in 2015.

Foley showed council pictures of the poor state of the parking lot, pointing out vulnerable seniors have to make their way across it.

"It has to be fixed," she declared, adding it should be done this year.

Public Works Director David Loveridge told acting mayor Richard Paterak that spending $30,000 this year on the lot would only amount to a short-term fix. He said there will need to be an accessibility review, as well as a look at the infrastructure on the site.

"That's not going to happen for $30,000," he said, adding they're looking at something like $200,000 to do the job properly.

Councillor Rob Mezzapelli supported Foley, and he wondered if there operating funds available to improve what's already in place. Loveridge told him they could do some filling and compacting that would provide short-term benefit.

OPP will help collect unused prescription drugs Saturday

When a physician prescribes medication for a patient, it is only intended for that person. But sometimes when prescriptions lie around unused or expired, they can end up in the hands of those they are not intended for. When expired and unused prescription medication is left unattended, it can lead to prescription drug abuse. Police agencies and health organizations are working together again this year to fight against this public health and safety issue. Caledon OPP will be participating in a province-wide initiative that will provide residents an opportunity to dispose of old and unused prescription medications. Prescription Drug Drop Off Day will be held this Saturday (May 10). Officers and volunteers will be on hand at the detachment at 15924 Innis Lake Rd. to take the medications from community members from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. The public is also reminded that they can drop off any unused medications at any time to their local pharmacist.

Man arrested for drug possession

A 20-year-old man from Erin is facing charges after a Caledon OPP officer spotted an unattended black Honda Civic April 28 at Belfountain Conservation Area. Police reported the car was noticed at about 11:30 p.m. The officer also spotted two men walking out of the conservation area. While the officer was talking to the two men about trespassing, the driver of the car took off at high speed. The officer followed and eventually stopped the car on Bush Street. Upon speaking with the driver, the officer detected a strong odour of drugs, believed to be marijuana coming from the inside of the car. As well, drug paraphernalia was found at driver's feet. The man was arrested and a search uncovered a quantity of drugs, believed to be marijuana, inside the leg of the accused's pants and inside the car. The man was charged with possession of a schedule II substance and is also facing a charge under the Trespass to Property Act.

Caledon Central’s library renamed after Alex Raeburn

By Bill Rea
The late Alex Raeburn spent much of his long life contributing to the Caledon community.
Many of those contributions were recalled last week as the library at Caledon Central Public School was renamed in his honour.
Widely known as “Caledon’s Senior Statesman,” Mr. Raeburn died in November 2012, the day after his 100th birthday. A fourth generation resident of Caledon village, he was involved in many projects in the community, including service on the local school board, a charter member of Caledon Town and Peel Regional councils and serving two terms on the Niagara Escarpment Commission.
He was part of the successful effort to get Caledon Central School built, and former Ontario premier Bill Davis (also former Minister of education) was on hand to recognize that.

“It’s not often that we recognize people who made contributions,” he commented about his friend.
“We didn’t always agree,” Davis added, but he did stress Mr. Raeburn’s great commitment to education.
“He believed in it,” he added.
“Alex was very committed to his community,” Davis declared. “This building is here because of his leadership and guidance.”
“This is an exciting change for Caledon Central Public School,” commented Peel District School Board Trustee Stan Cameron, who recalled that Mr. Raeburn secured the land for the school. He was a trustee and school board chair at a time of dramatic changes to education.

“When you met Alex, you came away with so much more than you started with,” Dufferin-Caledon MPP Sylvia Jones observed. “He was an incredible resource.”
Councillor Doug Beffort, who was also vice-principal at the school, agreed that Mr. Raeburn fought to get it built.
“We all know what Alex was like. He had a story all the time,” Beffort added. “He had more stories than Planters had peanuts.”
“He had a love of stories, a love of people, a love of nature and a love of things he did,” Beffort remarked,
Mr. Raeburn’s son John recalled his father was working at a high stress job during his time on the school board. He remembered seeing him at his drafting table working out school bus routes.

Former premier Bill Davis spoke of Alex Raeburn’s commitment to education and the community.

Alex Raeburn’s son John, sister Isabel Bospoort and daughter Lynn Baker were flanked by Joan Kadoke and Fay McCrea, the organizers of last week’s event, in front of the mural on the wall of the newly renamed library at Caledon Central Public School.

National Day of Honour is tomorrow

Tomorrow (Friday) has been proclaimed National Day of Honour in Caledon.

Town council Tuesday observed a moment of silence at their meeting before voting to proclaim the day.

Gov. Gen. David Johnston has issued the proclamation for the day, seeing it as an opportunity to celebrate the strength and resolve Canadian service personnel, as well as bringing awareness to the federal government’s efforts to mark the end of Canada’s military mission in Afghanistan.

The motion passed by council also observed there is to be a national ceremony on Parliament Hill in Ottawa with veterans of all branches of the Canadian Armed Forces, along with their families.

nounced the canonization of John Paul II and John XXIII and invited retired Pope Benedict XVI to join him on the altar of St. Peter's Square in Vatican City in Italy. It was the first time a reigning and a retired pope have celebrated mass together in public in the 2,000-year history of the church.

John Paul II was Pope from October 1978 until his death in April 2005 at the age of 84. He was the second longest-serving pope in modern history and the first non-Italian since Pope Adrian VI, who died in 1523.

The Pope John Paul II school community marked the historic occasion with a liturgy in celebration of the canonization of John Paul. In order to accommodate the entire school, as well as family and friends, the celebration was held at St. Michael Catholic Secondary School.

Bishop John Boissonneau led the liturgy with Father Larry Leger of Holy Family Church Bolton. Deacon Robert Suthers, Father Jim Roth, priest in residence at the Catholic Education Centre in Mississauga, and school superintendent Les Storey also attended the celebration.

"I am grateful for the many years St. Pope John Paul II served as our pope and for his preaching, teaching, faithfulness and for the many trips throughout the world to celebrate the good news," said Boissonneau. "Now your school is named for a saint . . . are you ever lucky to belong to Pope John Paul II School."

Boissonneau shared an important connection he has to Saint John Paul II. Along with meeting him four times, the Pope asked him to be a bishop.

"Pope John Paul II asked me to accept his call to be a bishop," he said. "I had a saint ask me to be a bishop."

Leger said the lanterns and flowers which were placed around the sacred space honouring the pontiff at the celebration are symbolic.

"Saint John Paul II, as he visited many different places, he called people to holiness," said Leger. "He reminded people that holiness is what all of us — every single one of us — is called to do. It's not something that happens with the snap of a finger. It takes time to grow. But even if it's tough, let's remember his words 'be not afraid,' a reminder that each of us is called to grow in holiness."

George Consitt, principal of Pope John Paul II, said the celebration was important to recognize the canonization, but even more important is what the students learned about Pope John Paul II.

"It was wonderful to have a celebration but as we began to plan for the celebration, it was good for all our staff and all the students to begin to think of who he was and why he would be chosen for sainthood," said Consitt. "I really wanted them to carry with them a knowledge about who he was. Everybody in the school takes great pride in the man that the school was named after and is now recognized by the church and declared by Pope Francis as being a saint."

Father Larry Leger, Deacon Robert Suthers, Bishop John Boissonneau and Father Jim Ross presided over the special service.

Beadwork assisted native economy in the past

By Bill Rea

Glass beads were introduced to North America by European settlers, but they became very useful in maintain the First Nations economy.

Native artisan and educator Naomi Smith recently addressed the annual general meeting of the Belfountain Heritage Society, sharing her love of the artistry that went into many creations, as well as facts about their economic significance.

Smith called it “one of my favourite topics.”

The colourful glass beads did not originate on these shores. Smith said they were brought over from Europe, and traded with native people.

“It’s not hard to see why they were so captivating to our ancestors,” she remarked.

She also pointed out that many of the beads from those days were very small, and they are seldom made in such sizes any more.

Smith had photographs of beaded creations dating back, it’s believed, to around the 1820s. She stressed it’s always nice to have some piece of documentation to go with a creation, so she was happy to show a picture of some work that could be verified as being made in 1837.

The use of geometric designs in such beadwork was common, but Smith pointed out they got more complicated as time went on. She showed some examples in which little pieces of silk were placed around the beads.

“This took quite a large amount of time to create,” she remarked.

This creativity became popular in the design of bags and purses, and Smith had several pictures of examples.

“If only bags could talk,” she remarked.

Smith commented that around the 1840s and ‘50s, floral designs became more common in the beadwork, and she said there was a reason for that.

Native women at the time would cater to the Victorian market and types of women who would be buying purses in those days.

Progressing into the 20th century, Smith said there would have been more use of larger beads. She explained the Edwardian tastes were a little more simple.

And it wasn’t just purses and bags that were created. Smith had pictures of calling-card cases and pin cushions, which would have played an important role in a Victorian home, as well as match holders, picture frames, etc.

There was also a tourist market for this kind of beadwork, with lots of business being conducted in such areas as Niagara Falls. But Smith said the tourist demand for this type of artistry started to slow down around the middle of the 20th century.

Smith told the audience that beads were always part of the native culture. Prior to the glass beads from Europe, people made use of beads made from shells, bones, etc.

She also pointed out beadwork has been critical to the culture of the cottage industry, as well as being a source of income. “We are traditionally a trading culture,” she remarked.

Native artisan and educator Naomi Smith recently showed some of her beadwork collection, while discussing its significance with members of the Belfountain Heritage Society.

Erin Theatre is looking for a permanent home

By Constance Scrafield

Kathryn DeLory, artistic director of Erin Theatre, also works as a theatre producer and sometime director at Rose Theatre in Brampton.

“I train, live, breathe theatre – and my garden, which I am longing to begin planting,” she commented about herself.

Into this theatre-infused life, DeLory includes Erin Theatre for the love of it. She sees the potential of it even though the theatre group currently only produces two shows per year, and one of those is a Christmas dinner theatre event. Yet, the quality of the theatre’s production would seem to demand a better budget and more shows.

The troupe recently did a production of Steel Magnolias, the famous play set in a hair dresser’s shop in Louisiana. Six ladies of very diverse personalities use the saloon as a hub to share gossip and news about their lives. It is a hilarious and witty play with a weighty ending. A play about life, its joys and its tough times.

We met with DeLory and Barb McKee for coffee and a chat recently to talk about Erin Theatre, its contribution to its community and its needs. Like any theatre managers, DeLory and McKee are longing to find a home for the theatre.

As things stand, the group must rent space for productions and store their props, sets and so forth in places from which they must be moved from time to time. Their situation brought to mind memories of a similar situation that confronted Theatre Orangeville not that long ago.

There are buildings in Erin that would suit their needs but negotiations for their use at a low rent are a thing of the future. So, Theatre Erin rents the performance space at the local community centre and presents a dinner-theatre production at David’s Restaurant.

For the most part, Erin is deemed to be a hockey town, with a parking lot outside the arena that is mostly packed as the ice time rotates among the teams that use it. A theatre might have success even so, if there were a way to let the good people of Erin know it is there.

“The hard part when you don’t have a base, they don’t know you exist,” DeLory’s commented.

“And Erin village is such a great place,” McKee added.

“A town exists by its cultural routes,” DeLory observed. “You have to rely on the largess of the municipality. They should be looking to support the not for profit organizations.”

Theatre Erin raises money for charities.

Last year, the group raised $6,000 for Bethell Hospice. This year, they donated all the proceeds of their March 26 performance to The Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF). After the show, the audience was invited to a reception where a JDRF representative hosted a Q & A about juvenile diabetes.

“There’s no way we could have (respect) in that community if we didn’t give back,” McKee said.

As any theatre should, they bring business into the community. The Red Hat matinee recently had a packed house of 185 ladies, who came to Erin for lunch and shopping, as well as to see the play.

That is the balance between cultural events and the economic benefits to a town. It is the ebb and flow of the need for entertainment and the notion that a restaurant meal is an excellent addition to the enjoying the occasion.

Last year, Theatre Erin did a production of Calendar Girls that was given nine nominations and won three awards from the Association of Community Theatres of Central Ontario (ACT-CO). DeLory has also won several awards for her direction and production over the years.

It is a small core group that makes it all happen, both on and behind the stage; the core that sticks with Theatre Erin year after year. Their enthusiasm is tremendous. Some of the actors are so good and such favourites with the audiences that DeLory takes them in her consideration when she is deciding on the next play they will perform.

“We work with a core because of the attitude – everybody does everything – the ultimate in multi-tasking,” she said. “We didn’t have an Artistic Director – there was a president and a vice president. There needs to be a mandate. The people who work behind the stage, they rely on us to make the right decisions about the material.”

After a pause, she admitted, “I wouldn’t involve myself in theatre outside my full time theatre life if I didn’t love it.”

Jones ready to defend her Dufferin-Caledon seat in next month’s election

By Bill Rea
With a June 12 Provincial election looming, Dufferin-Caledon Progressive Conservative incumbent Sylvia Jones was wasting no time hitting the hustings. Jones said she was nominated a little more than a year ago to carry the party’s colours in the coming campaign, and said she was ready to go.
“In a minority government, you never know when a government is going to fall or chose to go on its own, as it did this time,” she observed. “We were ready.”
Jones made it clear she was not impressed with the budget that was brought down last week by Finance Minister Charles Sousa, calling it reckless and saying it will drive the Province deeper into debt.
“It is remarkable that Kathleen Wynne and the Liberal government are able to both increase the deficit by over a billion dollars, while also simultaneously increasing taxes,” Jones said last Thursday after the budget had come down. “The Liberal budget introduced today takes us in the totally wrong direction where spending is skyrocketing with no regard to responsible management of taxpayer money.”

“Since the recession, government revenue has increased by $23 billion and yet we are still seeing increasing deficits,” she added. “This is evidence that the Liberals have no plan to balance the budget.”
In reading the budget, Jones said it was clear to her that the government was ready to take it into an election. NDP Leader Andrea Horwath announced Friday her party would not be supporting it, and Jones said she didn’t think the Liberals were expecting support. She thinks the budget was meant to appeal to NDP voters, as opposed to NDP MPPs.

“To me, the budget is proof that the government will willingly spend anything to get past an election,” she said.
When it comes to predicting how the election is going to work out, Jones admitted she has never been very good at calling such shots, but she plans for focus her energies on her riding.
“I believe that there is an interest and ability for people to be able to see beyond the promises and IOUs,” she remarked.

Account of Heaven to be explored at Lifetree Café

An exclusive filmed interview with Todd Burpo, author of New York Times best seller Heaven Is for Real: A Little Boy’s Astounding Story of His Trip to Heaven and Back, will be screened at Lifetree Café this coming Wednesday (May 14) from 7 to 8 p.m.
In 2003, Burpo nearly lost his four-year-old son Colton. The boy’s appendix burst, and he fought a life-threatening infection. To save Colton’s life, emergency surgery was conducted. After the surgery, Colton began telling his parents about his “visit to heaven.”
“Several months after his surgery, Colton started talking about visiting heaven during the time he hovered between life and death in the operating room,” commented Lifetree representative Craig Cable. “He knew things he couldn’t have otherwise known, described things he couldn’t have otherwise seen. As the evidence mounted, Colton’s parents had to decide: Had their son gone to heaven and returned?”
Admission to the 60-minute event will be free. Snacks and beverages will be available.
Lifetree Café is at St. James’ Anglican Church, 6025 Old Church Rd., Caledon East.
Lifetree Café is a place where people gather for conversation about life and faith in a casual coffeehouse-type setting.

REMEMBERING THOSE HURT OR KILLED ON JOB

Mezzapelli plans to seek another term on council

By Bill Rea
It’s been a learning curve, but Caledon Councillor Rob Mezzapelli has been enthused with the experiences over the last four years and wants another term as area representative for Caledon’s Ward 5 (Bolton).
Mezzapelli, who’s completing his first term after narrowly winning election in 2010, said there’s still a lot of work to be done that he wants to be part of.
“I think I’m doing a good job,” he said, adding that since his election he has become exposed to various community and volunteer groups in the area, and experienced the passion they represent.
He agreed learning the job in his first term has been a “huge” learning curve, adding he was expecting it to be demanding going in.

“It has surpassed even that,” he said, but added “it has been extremely enjoyable.”
Mezzapelli was talking confidently about his chances of re-election.
“I think I stand a very good chance,” he said. “I feel I’ve been very present and engaged in the community.”

World Lupus Day proclaimed

This coming Saturday (May 10) will be World Lupus Day in Caledon.
Caledon council proclaimed the day at their meeting Tuesday.
The body of the motion passed by council stated Lupus is an autoimmune disease that can cause severe damage to organs and tissue in the body; in some cases resulting in death. It added that the illness affects more than five million people around the world, with in excess of 100,000 being diagnosed every year. Medical research efforts to find safer and more effective treatment methods are badly underfunded.
“There is a deep, unmet need to educate and support individuals and families affected by lupus,” the motion stated.

Editorial
This Provincial election is Hudak's to lose

We agree there is a certain inherent danger in trying to predict what's going to happen in politics, if for no other reason than there are just too many variables. That's why it wasn't until we heard NDP Leader Andrea Horwath definitely say that her party wasn't going to support the budget brought down last Thursday by Finance Minister Charles Sousa that we knew for sure that there was going to be an election in the coming weeks. The budget that Sousa presented, on behalf of the Kathleen Wynne Liberals, went to some considerable lengths to try and appeal to NDP voters, and we suspect that's going to be a major focus of the coming campaign. We anticipate there are going to be a lot of questions about why the New Democrats kept proping up the scandal-plagued Liberal government, while they try to claim the Grits have adopted their ideas. With Horwath and Wynne fighting over the left wing votes, that could make things easier for Progressive Conservative Leader Tim Hudak.

But the campaign still has several weeks to go, and nothing has yet been decided. The burden right now is on Hudak to show he has a plan and vision to represent a viable alternative to roughly 11 years of Liberal government. The Tories say that plan and vision exists, so it's up to them to prove it, and sell it to the electorate. Hudak and company would do well to remember that the electorate in Ontario has shown a tendency to be forgiving when it comes to the Liberals. Remember Dalton McGuinty's pledge in 2003 not to raise taxes. The first budget after he took power included the heavy Health Care Premium, yet he was returned with another majority in 2007. It's not impossible for the voters to over look the current scandals too.

We see an opportunity there for the Tories, but it's up to them to make use of it. Of course, that's going to be among many issues we expect to be swamped with between now and election day. These campaigns tend to be emotional times, and sometimes people get a little too wrapped up in things. Get involved in the election. Attend debates. Above all, make sure you get out and vote. Don't worry, we'll remind you about that one a couple of times. But don't get carried away. Don't take it personally when someone disagrees with you, especially when that someone's a candidate. As of this writing, we are only aware of one candidate running in Dufferin-Caledon. Don't worry there will be others. And we wait for June 12.

Ritchie Bros. appreciates support at Gold Medal game

On behalf of all the staff at Ritchie Bros. Auctioneers and Dave Eccleston of BluePrint Hockey School, I just wanted to pass along our sincere thanks to all who came out early on a Sunday morning and helped make our Gold Medal celebration in our auction facility in Bolton an unbelievable success. Starting with Brad Stafford and Tim Hortons providing free Tim's coffee and donuts, to Kent Oakley, owner of Music 21, providing our amazing video wall and tech support, to James Dick Construction Limited combining with Contractors Rental Supply to get us portable message board to direct fans to our site, this was very much a community effort. Getting a big boost from Mayor Marolyn Morrison guiding us along the way really helped make it a very successful day to help out two great organizations, Caledon Community Services and The Canadian Ball Hockey Association.

Every dollar raised at the event was evenly split between the two. Our sincere appreciation goes out to all the local businesses who helped us by putting up flyers, donating gift certificates and raffle prizes, providing snacks and sending out mass emails to their contacts, all in an effort to help us raise money and put some more excitement into our event; namely Bolton Thai Cuisine, Canadian Tire, Four Corners Bakery Eatery, Pizzaville, Rexall Drug Store, St. Louis Bar and Grill, Stewart Maguire's Landing, The Toronto Maple Leafs, Zehrs.

A special thanks to the staff and volunteers of Ritchie Bros. Auctioneers, BluePrint Hockey School and Caledon Community Services for donating their time and effort selling tickets, picking up prizes and collecting canned goods etc. A big thanks as well to both the Caledon Enterprise and Caledon Citizen for helping promote our event by advertising our flyer in their papers. My apologies to anyone that I have missed. We are grateful for your efforts.

And lastly, to the fans who came out and cheered our Canadian Olympic Hockey team to victory, opened their wallets and donated to Caledon Community Services and The Canadian Ball Hockey Association. What a day it was! Thank you so much. Perhaps we will see you all again with a few more of your friends and neighbours in four years when we can do this all over again!

Over the course of 10 days to see what became from one quick email from Dave to myself and then to watch how quickly everyone pulled together as a team to put this event on, is truly indicative of what a great community we have here in Caledon and the town of Bolton. To top it off, watching Canada bring home the Gold Medal in a way that what was also very much a team effort, seems very fitting indeed.

We have to lose old friends

It's interesting how an idea can be either appealing or repellant, depending on how many details you have.

That was the case with last week's Provincial budget that was brought down by Finance Minister Charles Sousa.

Of course the whole thing quickly became academic, once NDP Leader Andrea Horwath announced Friday that her party was not going to prop the minority Liberal government up any longer

My attention was caught by plans that Sousa announced for an Ontario Pension Plan.

I will confess that my initial reaction was negative, fearing this was going to be just another cash grab on the part of the government. The plan would be to take up to 1.9 per cent of the pay of people like me, who don't have a corporate pension plans. My blood started to boil a bit when I heard that, suspecting that 1.9 per cent was going to be aimed at getting the government out of the financial pit it got itself into over gas plants, or other uses of which I wouldn't approve. And employers would be expected to match those contributions. One of the nice things about having people in government is it would be up to them to explain that one to my boss, because I certainly wouldn't be willing to take on the task.

But then I started thinking a bit, realizing this would basically be a provincial version of the Canada Pension Plan, which many of us are counting on to be there for us when we retire. It's not such a bad thing, assuming the money is in the coffers to go to the people it's intended for, like retired people.

Although I am a self-confessed workaholic, casual thoughts of retirement occasionally pop into my head. I'm now 56. In about 20 years, those casual thoughts might get kind of serious, in a casual sort of way. Thirty years from now, I might reach the stage of actual casual planning for retirement.

I have spent my entire career working in the private sector, and at my age, I'm not likely to get hired to a position that's going to put me in line for a government pension (although never say never). I have also never worked for a company with a corporate pension plan, and at this stage of my life, I'm not anxious for that to change.

I am, however, fully aware that government has to address issues of demands on the pension system, and do it pretty soon. People in my age group make up the tail end of the post-war baby boom. All those little bundles of joy like me who came into the world during the late '40s and 1950s are looking to retirement and are expecting government to be there for them. And it's not going to be a simple question as to whether or not government has the money as required. The case is government had better come up with the scratch, because it's the baby boomers who are going to be expecting it. Don't count them out!

It was the baby boomers who stood up in vast numbers against "the establishment" in the 1960s. It was the baby boomer generation who yelled "Hell no! We won't go!" when American President Lyndon Johnson suggested military service in Southeast Asia, which resulted in Johnson writing his memoirs about four years earlier than he had planned.

These young people were part of a generation that was notorious for not taking guff from their parents. And they are about to represent the largest, best-informed, best-educated and most politically savvy group of seniors in history. Don't count on them taking much guff from their kids.

Let government tell baby boomers they will not be getting the retirement benefits that they have spent their lives expecting, and I predict a hell of a lot of politicians and civil servants are going to be sent to bed without their supper.

But there is another reality. I am getting old, and I have known for many years that I would eventually get old. I have been aware of that from the time when I first entered the work force. As I alluded to in my column last week, my parents always nagged me to make sure I made my RRSP contributions, and for many, many years, I have set aside portions of every pay cheque for investments. Granted, there have been good times and bad. The markets have been doing quite well lately, meaning I smiled a lot in the last month as I opened the various quarterly statements that appeared in the mail.

I have not been looking forward to the advent of old age, but I did know it was coming and took steps to prepare for it. I will go to my grave wondering why there aren't more people like me.

True, my planning is predicated on the assumption that I will live to be an old man. Well, that's my plan

Bill Rea

My old friend

Brian Gilchrist was the reference archivist at the Peel Art Gallery Museum and Archives (PAMA). I would occasionally give him a call, partly to pick his brain about some historical information I needed. That was the official reason. The real reason was I wanted to touch base with an old friend.

Brian died last week. He was 58. I had been aware that he had been having some health issues, but things were obviously a lot worse than I had realized.

He was one of my oldest friends with whom I was still in touch. We went back to our high school days in Toronto.

Brian was two years ahead of me. But we were both very involved with the music department in the school (we were in the various choirs) and we hung around with the same crowd — I honed my euchre skills at the table at which we both sat, and my wife has benefitted at a lot of tables since then.

Like so many people going through that period of life known as adolescence, I did not make friends easily. Acceptance was something that was very precious to me, and Brian was part of that. For that, he has always had my gratitude.

Since we all had good friends in high school, all of you must have gone through the passage of time, as friends drift apart to explore their other interests. Brian's interest, of course, was history, with a specialty in genealogy (family trees). In one of those cases that will tell you just how small this world is, my late aunt (my father's sister) decided about 30 years ago to work on the Rea family tree, and signed up for a night course. Guess who the instructor was. Once he saw my aunt's maiden name, Brian immediately made the connection, much to her astonishment.

I required some help with a story I was working on last fall, and Brian was among those to whom I turned. He suggested a number of sources I could consult, several of them I had already used. Then I made the mistake of casually mentioning that I had also gone to Wikipedia. Oh man, did I ever get bawled out for that.

Our phone calls took place at intervals of a couple of months. There was always some talk about getting together some day for lunch. Brian and I never did, evidently figuring we'd do it next time.

There's a lesson there. If there's an old friend you've been putting off doing lunch with, stop putting it off, lest the next time never comes at all.

Next time for sure, my old friend.

Federal government is busy creating jobs and opportunities

Our government is focused on the priorities of Canadians, supporting jobs and economic growth.

Canadians can take pride in our country's G7-leading job creation record. Our government is working to build on that record and lay the groundwork for Canada's long-term economic prosperity, by staying on track to balance the budget in 2015. Our government is also addressing other concerns of hard-working Canadian families with measures that include important, common sense legislation to help keep our streets and communities safe. At the same time, Prime Minister Stephen Harper is leading on the world stage, supporting Canada's friends and allies, and upholding Canadian values.

The Canadian economy, with the support of our Economic Action Plan, has created more than one million net new jobs since the depth of the global recession. We are working to build on that record and support continued job creation.

Our government is also working to better connect Canadians with available jobs. We're launching the Canada Job Grant to help Canadians access skills training for available, in-demand jobs. We're continuing to invest in the training and hiring of apprentices in the skilled trades, promoting skills essential to Canada's continued economic growth. In addition, we're working to help ensure disabled Canadians have the opportunity to contribute to the Canadian economy by supporting the Ready, Willing & Able initiative.

We also understand the importance of balanced budgets to long-term prosperity. This is why we paid down debt before the global recession. While temporary deficits were necessary to stimulate the economy and support job creation, since then we have taken measures to control spending and find efficiencies in government operations. Canadians work hard to balance family budgets and expect no less from their government. We're on track to balance the budget in 2015, just as we pledged we would. We're also delivering on this commitment without cutting transfers to individuals or provinces.

Once the budget is balanced, we will build on our record of supporting families and keeping taxes low by providing more tax relief.

Our government is also working to better protect Canadians. This will build on our extensive record of delivering common sense reforms, including cracking down on organized crime and gun crime.

Now we've introduced the Tougher Penalties for Child Predators Act. It includes tougher penalties for sexual offences against children and measures to ensure that sentences for abusing multiple children must be served consecutively. It also helps ensure that spousal testimony is available in cases of child pornography and establishes a national, publicly accessible database of high-risk offenders.

We are also working to reform the way the system treats those found Not Criminally Responsible for serious criminal acts, to make the protection of society the highest priority when decisions are made regarding these offenders. Our legislation will also help ensure that victims are kept informed and allow non-communication orders to be imposed, to protect victims.

At the same time, Harper is leading on the world stage. Our government has been consistent in our support for the people of Ukraine from the beginning of the crisis. We strongly condemned Russian aggression, offered support to Ukraine, and the Prime Minister became the first G7 leader to visit Kyiv during the crisis.

This follows the Prime Minister's visit to Israel, where he delivered an historic address to Israel's Knesset and pledged, "Through fire and water, Canada will stand with you."

Our government will always stand up for Canadian values of freedom, democracy, and the rule of law, and we will always stand by Canada's friends.

We're also pursuing an ambitious trade agenda. With our recent agreements with the European Union and South Korea, our government has now tripled the number of countries that Canada has free trade agreements with from when we first came to office.

This is helping to open up access to vast new markets and gives Canadians access to more choice and better prices at home. By expanding trade, we are helping create jobs, economic growth and long-term prosperity.

Canadians can count on our government to remain focused on their priorities. Through Economic Action Plan 2014, we're delivering practical measures to support jobs and growth, including helping Canadians gain new skills and connect with available jobs. Our ambitious international trade agenda is opening up vast new markets. At the same time, we continue to build on our record of helping keep our streets and communities safe.

David Tilson commemorates the anniversary of Council of Europe

Dufferin-Caledon MP David Tilson, president of the Canada-Europe Parliamentary Association, last week rose in the House of Commons to commemorate the 65th anniversary of the founding of the Council of Europe.

"May 5th marks the 65th anniversary of the founding of the Council of Europe," he told the House. "Promoting democracy, human rights and the rule of law, as well as cooperation among its member states in the aftermath of World War II has long been its goal and each year it continues to show its strength in that regard."

"As an observer, Canada participates in its activities on a regular basis," he added. "I have just returned from leading a delegation of the Canada-Europe Parliamentary Association where Members and Senators took part in discussions on the ongoing situation in Ukraine and Russia, something I know we are all deeply concerned about."

"The Council continues to allow Canada to advance positions on key issues in international affairs," Tilson observed. "We exchange ideas on important matters in human rights, democracy and rule of law (for example, the role prostitution laws can play in addressing human trafficking)."

Well past time for a change

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Claire Hoy

And so it began. Last Friday, after years of propping up the profligate and pathetic Liberal government, NDP Leader Andrea Horwath finally discovered her spine.

"I cannot in good conscience support a government that people don't trust anymore," she said.

That long overdue decision, coupled with Conservative Leader Tim Hudak's ongoing calls for an election, left unelected Premier Kathleen Wynne little choice but to settle on June 12 as judgment day for her dispirited Liberals.

Many New Democrats, including a slew of big-name labour leaders, including Ontario Federation of Labor boss Sid Ryan, had openly called on Horwath to support the Liberal's proposed $130.4 billion spending orgy – including its $900 million tax hike – a budget which had been designed, not in the best interests of Ontarians, but in the best interest of Wynne mollifying Horwath enough to keep her job.

It should have surprised no one that Wynne and Company were attempting to use your tax dollars to keep themselves in office. After all, that's how they won the last election when then premier Dalton McGuinty (with Wynne one of his senior ministers and deputy head of the election campaign) orchestrated the $1.1 billion gas plant boondoggle specifically to buy support for the Liberals in the five area ridings near the plants. It worked then. Why not try it again?

Well, Horwath, who, as we've said, has been keeping this discredited gang in power ever since, finally came to the realization that a) - it was reflecting poorly on her, and b) - given the current Liberal unpopularity she'll probably never have a better chance to move her party past them on the political ladder.

The flip side of that calculation – and the reason so many union bosses didn't want her to act – is that an election gives the dreaded Tories, no friends of the union bosses, their best opportunity in decades to form a government.

Union bosses – much like Wynne's Liberals – are obviously more interested in protecting their own narrow interests than they are in giving Ontarians the democratic right to decide who they want to govern them. Keep in mind that Wynne has never been elected as premier, so it's about time the electorate had a say.

The union bosses – as opposed to rank and file union members, who rarely vote the same way their bosses do – claim that Hudak is "anti-union" or "Mike Harris lite," a supposedly critical reference to former Tory premier Mike Harris, the man loathed by them, and much of the mainstream media, but a man who, you may recall, was given two consecutive majority governments by the voters.

Hudak, not surprisingly, welcomed Horwath's belated discovery of her "conscience," saying, "The big government union bosses, they've been running the province now for 10 years. They support the Liberals, the NDP, they get their way."

"But that didn't help out the million people who are out of work or are struggling in a part-time job."

Both Hudak and Horwath, of course, say "it's time for a change." Hard to argue with that.

Actually, it's well past time.

In addition to the aforementioned gas plant fiasco – and the unconscionably spending record of both McGuinty and Wynne – all Ontarians will know that one look at their hydro bills (which skyrocketed thanks to Liberal reliance on unproven, unreliable and costly energy experiments, e.g. wind, etc.) to know that they're being terribly ripped off.

Is it really any wonder that so many companies have abandoned Ontario – many more than have come here – when they look at the cost of power to run their plants and compare it to any other jurisdiction? It's a built-in, made-at-home job killer, just as Wynne's proposed made-in-Ontario pension scheme and her other wild spending suggestions would be.

Now opposition political parties always say it's time for a change. Naturally, they want that change to mean their own election. Saying it, of course, doesn't always make it so.

But in this case there can be no doubt that the Liberals simply don't deserve to keep their jobs, so the electorate really should decide whether they want the Tories or the NDP to govern them.

But in politics, as in life, there are no guarantees. The Tories are clearly more fiscally responsible. The NDP have more faith in government's ability to run things. That's your choice.

Whatever you decide, however, there is no excuse for not taking a few minutes to trundle along to your local voting station and cast a ballot.

Don't be a slug. Take an interest. Get out and vote.

Osler's Be A Donor campaign kicks off Organ and Tissue Donation Awareness

In recognition of National Organ and Tissue Donation Awareness Week, which ran April 20 to 27, William Osler Health System (Osler) partnered with Trillium Gift of Life Network (TGLN) to launch the Be A Donor campaign.

Osler seeks to register and/or reconfirm the donation status of 500 donors by tomorrow (Friday).

According to TGLN, there are approximately 1,500 people awaiting transplants in Ontario. But only 14 per cent of Brampton residents and 15 per cent of Etobicoke residents are registered organ and tissue donors, which is well below the provincial average of 24 per cent. Osler is hoping to increase these numbers with the Be A Donor campaign.

"Our decision to participate in the Be A Donor campaign stems from our ongoing commitment to delivering patient-inspired health care," said Osler's Executive Vice President of Clinical Services and Chief Nursing Executive Joanne Flewwelling. "We have asked our staff, physicians and volunteers to consider giving their consent to being registered organ and tissue donors, because we want to give hope to those on the transplant waiting list. The process only takes two minutes."

To raise awareness of the campaign, Osler hosted a kickoff event April 23 at Brampton Civic Hospital with representatives from TGLN and special guest speaker Jennifer Monteith, who shared her inspiring story with the crowd. In January of 2010, she received a new heart after coping with congestive heart failure for nearly two years.

"I'm living the dream. I get a second chance at life. I get up every day in gratitude that someone made the decision to become an organ donor," Monteith said. "It's important to start the conversation with your family about organ donation."

To help, visit www.beadonor.ca/WilliamOsler and register as a donor or confirm that you already enrolled. Spending two minutes to visit the website could save a life.

Bolton Brewers clinch opening-day double header

By Brian Lockhart

The Bolton Brewers opened the 2014 season with back-to-back wins over the Nobleton Cornhuskers Saturday.

The doubleheader was supposed to be played in Nobleton but was changed to the Bolton diamond at North Hill Park when the Township of King withdrew all park permits due to wet conditions on the field.

"It was a slow start," said Brewers' coach Mike Wallace. "Between both teams through the first two innings, there was 12 strike-outs. In the fourth we got two runs. Greg Keenan got an RBI ground-out, then Brett Bond got an RBI ground-out and we scored two. In the fifth, Brett Bond hit a two-run home run. Greg Keenan had a two-run double."

The game got underway under cloudy skies and started to get some rain after a couple of innings, but Wallace said the playing conditions were good despite being slightly wet.

"It's actually pretty good," he said. "It wasn't too bad. The way this infield is set up, it's the best time of year for this type of infield. It's soft. When you get into June and July, it dries out and it becomes like concrete. Today the ball stays down in the infield."

In the end, the Brewers left the diamond with a 9-0 win to start the season.

None of the teams got much outdoor practice this year because inclement weather has made it pretty difficult.

"Practice has been limited because of the weather, so we're kind of thrown right into the fire of things," Wallace observed. "We had a couple of ugly swings early on, but hopefully we've got them out of the way. For us, it's just trying to get up to speed as fast as we can."

After taking a break, the squads returned for the second game of the afternoon with a 3:30 p.m. start.

Again the Brewers showed their hitting prowess and loaded the bases in both the first and second innings, although they couldn't finish it off to score.

They picked it up in the later innings and finished the game with seven runs while keeping Nobleton down to a single for the game.

The Brewers were supposed to play Creemore Sunday, but that game was postponed due to bad conditions as well.

It was a problem that went around the League with the Ivy Leafs and Lisle Astros game scheduled for Saturday also being canceled as the Lisle field had open water in the outfield.

Hopefully, there will be a few sunny days to dry out the local diamonds and get back on a regular schedule.

The Brewers are scheduled to host the Orangeville Giants this Saturday (May 10) at North Hill Park.

Game time is 4 p.m.

School board makes safety a priority for football teams

The Dufferin-Peel Catholic District School Board will host a Safe Contact Football Clinic for secondary schools this Friday and Saturday (May 9 and 10).

More than 120 coaches are expected to participate. Working in partnership with Football Canada (FC), Coaching Association of Canada (CAC), Ontario Football Alliance (OFA) and the Toronto Argonauts, this two-day event will provide all Dufferin-Peel secondary school coaches with training in FC's Safe Contact module through the National Coaching Certification Program (NCCP) in partnership with CAC.

The Safe Contact module is designed to train coaches how to properly teach their players safe tackling and blocking techniques to minimize serious head and neck injuries. Coaches will also learn how to properly fit players for equipment. Players and parents will participate in classroom information sessions and field drills led by team coaches the second day of the clinic. Coaches are able to teach players the new techniques they have learned while being observed by the clinic facilitators to ensure they are transferring what they learned in the classroom onto the field effectively. Argo players and Dufferin-Peel graduates

James Yurichuk and Johnathan Hood will join the student athletes on the field for safe tackling drills.

"Recent studies about concussions and head injuries, more specifically how they can effect youth, makes safety training a priority for our sports teams," said Tim Lariviere, principal and organizer of the clinic. "This training clinic will provide our coaches and athletes with the skills and techniques to play safe and responsibly on the field."

"Football is a collision sport, we cannot eliminate all injuries, but we can minimize the risk by educating our coaches how to properly teach safe tackling and blocking techniques that keep the head out of contact," said OFA Technical Director Chris Patton. "The Dufferin-Peel Catholic School Board is ahead of the pack by providing this valuable training for their coaches and players."

The instructional clinic for coaches only will be Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Blessed Trinity Catholic Centre for Learning, 2495 Credit Valley Rd., Mississauga. The field clinic for coaches, athletes and parents will be Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Loyola Catholic Secondary School, 4010 Sladeview Cres., Mississauga.

For more information about Safe Contact training, visit www.footballcanada.com

Brampton Invitational golf tournament to raise funds 'fore' Osler

Business professionals, local dignitaries and local health care supporters are being asked to dust off their golf clubs and book their spot for William Osler Health System Foundation's annual Osler Open golf tournament in support of Brampton Civic Hospital and the new Peel Memorial Centre for Integrated Health and Wellness.

This year's event, the Osler Open: Brampton Invitational, will take place at The Brampton Golf Club June 9.

Encore presenting sponsors, CCV Insurance and Friends hope the event will be even more successful than last year's tournament, setting their sights on raising $175,000 to support the redevelopment of Peel Memorial and fund critical equipment and technology for Brampton Civic.

According to Robert Lewis of CCV Insurance and Financial, sponsoring the event is great for health care and even better for business.

"With ground-breaking on the site of the new Peel Memorial only a couple of months away, there's an opportunity for every corporation and organization associated with this tournament to show its support of our Brampton hospitals," observed Lewis, who also sits on the Osler Foundation's Board of Directors. "We encourage new groups to get involved, have fun, network and improve health care, all while participating in one great golf tournament."

Caledon cider firm expanding tree give-aways at LCBO outlets

By Tabitha Wells

When you think about a modern day Johnny Appleseed, the first thing that comes to mind likely wouldn't be the producer of an alcoholic beverage.

But that's exactly what one would consider Nick Sutcliffe and his wife Lindsay, the Caledon-based owners of Pommies Dry Cider and Southern Cliff Brands.

Their brand of cider — a beverage from apple juice produced like a wine but drunk like a beer — is still fairly new to the area, but their campaign methods and love for local partnerships has helped the product take off.

"Alcohol companies generally give stuff away to promote their products, but it's usually stuff that goes into a draw and doesn't really have any benefit to everyone," explained Sutcliffe. "So we thought let's give something away because everyone usually does, but let's do it a little differently."

When they developed the giveaway campaign, they wanted to do something that would have a higher impact, not just on the consumers of their product, but on the world around them. The idea was presented to give away apple trees, and LCBO came on board with the project.

The event was launched last year at four LCBO's in Ontario, including Orangeville. Out of the participating locations, the Orangeville branch had the greatest success, despite a few potential bumps along the way.

"The event in Orangeville was the home run of the four stores that we did last year," Sutcliffe said. "It was during a snow-storm and the store had no power as we pulled up. Literally 15 minutes before we were going to start, the power came back on in the store and we ran out of trees in about half an hour. It was unbelievable!"

He added that the advantage of living so close was that they were able to drive back home, pick up more trees and come back to keep the promotion going.

"The support that we've had from people in the community, out and about, and in bars and restaurants has been absolutely fantastic," he said. "We love the fact that we're here and we love the fact that people are drinking so much of the Pommies. They've been really supportive and it's a lot of fun."

Part of what Sutcliffe believes has made their cider such a hit is that it is unique to many of the other ciders that are out there. While it's not a complex cider, it's balanced in both its flavour and presentation. One reviewer Sutcliffe spoke with called it the Goldilocks of ciders.

"I asked him to clarify what he meant and he said that it was because it's not too dry, not too sweet and not too bubbly — just the perfect balance," he explained.

This year, the Pommies apple tree giveaway will be expanding to include more LCBO. It will be at the Bolton LCBO at 30 McEwan Dr. East May 17 from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

"We are all about putting trees in the ground and knowing where our food comes from," said Sutcliffe. "This campaign takes local to a whole new level, literally into your backyard."

Because of their Caledon roots, the Sutcliffe's believe in having a strong, local presence and keeping the product they use to produce their ciders from local producers as well. Their cider is served in local restaurants such as the Mill Creek Pub and the Barley Vine Rail Co.

"We make it a large point in everything we do to really be a big part of the community," Sutcliffe said. "In Orangeville we took part in the 150th birthday celebrations last year and we work with the owners of local restaurants, and we really pride ourselves on the fact that we really have good relationships with all of them."

Even the apples they use for their cider are 100 per cent local, Ontario apples to help give back to the community that is helping them thrive. Because of that, they have high hopes that the giveaway in Orangeville will once again be a huge hit and provide more apple trees in the community.

"Last year's event was just a great example of how the community has gotten behind us," Sutcliffe said. "The fact that we were actually putting apple trees in the ground was just spectacular and it was a whole lot of fun. Orangeville is near and dear to us, and when we decided to do it again we said we had to do it in Orangeville."

For more information on Pommies Cider or to find out about other Apple Tree Giveaway locations visit www.pommies-dry.com

In loving memory of a dear son-in-law, brother-in-law & uncle

Memories are like threads of gold
They never tarnish or grow old
As you were you will always be!
Treasured forever in our memory

Loved & missed by
Mom & Family

JONES, Bill
May 3, 2004

In loving memory of a dear husband
Days have grown to months
Months have turned to years
A special person, a special face
Someone I love and can't replace
Never selfish, always kind and loving
These are the memories he left me
No longer in my life to share
But in my heart he is always there.

Love always
Marg

JONES, Bill

In loving memory of a great Dad and Grandfather

He had a sense of humour and a smiling face
A helping hand in time of need on that you could rely
His cheerful happy ways that won so many friends
We cannot see him or touch him
But tucked safely in our hearts
We have our love for him, his love for us will never let us part.

Greatly missed by
Your Family

McKENNA, Martin
In memory of my dear son who passed away suddenly on May 9th, 1987.

You will always be in our hearts & memories.
Much loved and sadly missed

Love
Mom

McKIBBON, Alice
In loving memory of my Mom who passed away on March 9, 1999.

Love
Mas

MOUNTAIN, Stan
May 31, 1924 - May 11, 2013

Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for love to reach,
Sweet to remember him who once was here,
And who, though absent is just as dear.

In loving Memory,
Phyllis and Family

Healthy LIFESTYLE

A perfect cruise through Europe for everyone

River Cruising has become a very popular travel experience. Many of my clients are curious about it and wonder if it is right for them. While there are many ways to travel through Europe and Russia nothing compares to the luxury, comfort and convenience of checking into your River Cruise ship and having it carry you through the interior of Europe. Bringing you directly day by day into the heart of European cities, towns and villages without having to pack and unpack. Upon arrival, you walk off at your leisure and explore vineyards, country sides, museums and gardens in beautiful destinations like France, Germany, Portugal, Russia, Austria, Budapest and The Netherlands.

Never wait in long lines to get on or off the ship, never tender into port and never experience rough water or motion sickness. All ages enjoy River Cruising.

It is perfect for active travelers. Onboard your ship, there are complimentary bicycles and Nordic walking sticks. Explore on your own at your own active pace. Some itineraries allow passengers to explore the area by cycling on to the next destination to rejoin fellow passengers and their ship and continue their River Cruise. You can also keep fit in the onboard fitness room and pool.

It is perfect for families. Those clients who wish to share the experience with their younger family members can enjoy certain itineraries with family-friendly dates, pricing and special children's activities, meals and special shore excursions tailored specifically for the family. On certain itineraries and travel dates in 2014 young travelers (between ages 4-18) save 50% off cruise only fare when accompanied by an adult.

It is perfect for solo travelers. Uniworld Boutique River Cruise Collection waives single supplements on select departures. With relaxed open seating in the dining room, guests can dine where and with whom they wish. This is the perfect opportunity to build new and exciting friendships with people who share your interests.

It is perfect for gentle walkers. Guests who prefer a more relaxed pace and would like to have more time to linger, can join a slower-paced group with its own English-speaking local guide. Or stay onboard the ship and enjoy the view from the sundeck, spa or pool.

It is perfect for foodies. The focus is on using the freshest ingredients from local farmers markets. Local produce is chosen and brought on board fresh to be used in the preparation of meals. Master chefs and Sommeliers design the wine programs and menus to compliment the local region.

It is perfect for exotic travelers. With river cruise itineraries in China, Vietnam and Cambodia, travel to the exotic destinations of your dreams.

Is River Cruising right for you? Please call to arrange for a one on one consultation with your local River Cruise Specialist, Naomi Rogers. I am passionate about travel and truly care that your travel experience is perfect for you. You will appreciate having a local professional working on your behalf from the moment you start planning right up until you arrive back home, thrilled and enriched by all you have experienced.
