Members of the world famous Wallendas were performing on the high wire last week as the Shrine Circus Spectac! 2015 stopped in Caledon at the Brampton Fairgrounds. Romulus Cortes let the way, followed by Rick Wallenda, as they supported Sharlie Wallenda on this pyramid. All three got across safely.

'Traditional circus' stops in Caledon

By Bill Rea

The circus came to town last week, to the delight of many.

The Brampton Fairgrounds in Caledon was one of the stops for Shrine Circus Spectac! 2015, with many of the thrilling performances which one would normally expect at a circus, from stunts to popcorn to elephant rides.

"This is a traditional circus," commented Cathy Sproule, marketing and media director for the circus.

She also said it's a show run by families with families, including the world famous Wallendas and the Flying Cortes family. She added it's run in the 252-year-old tradition of the Zerbini Family Circus, complete with a genuine big top, that held 2,600 people.

"It's a beautiful circus tent," she remarked, adding it took two days to erect, with performers lending a hand, along with some local help.

"It's really a family show," she added. "It's families performing for families." It's a matter of camaraderie, as far as Ring Master Richard Curtis is concerned.

Having served in the Marines during the Gulf War, he knows something about it when he refers to a "band of brothers." Curtis's wife comes from nine generations of circus performers, and his three children, Lincoln, Harley and Jordan, were all performing in the show, running the Globe of Death.

"It's a huge family affair," he said, adding there are families from all over the world. He cited the Wallenda and Cortes families, which are both new to the show this year. "We're extremely excited to have them."

Animals are a big part of a circus, and in this case, they included two Asian elephants; Marie and Shelley. Sproule said Marie weighs in at about 9,500 pounds while

Shelley is a bit more petite, at 8,500 pounds. She added they both put away about 400

Marguerite and George Munro

George and Marguerite Munro mark 50 years of marriage

By Bill Rea

It was a time to celebrate 50 years of marriage Sunday.

Local couple George and Marguerite Munro were joined by family and friends at St. James' Anglican Church in Caledon East to mark their 50th wedding anniversary.

The actual day was Friday, as they were wed July 17, 1965 at Bolton United Church. Mrs. Munro was from Bolton while her husband was from Caledon East.

They recalled there was rain that day, but things improved.

"When we came out of the church, the sun was shining beautifully," she said.

The Munros had three sons (two are still living), and they have three step-grandchildren and three step-great-grandchildren.

Mr. Munro worked at Northern Telecom, while his wife worked for the Town of Caledon 18 years, at the Caledon Community Complex.

When asked what the secret is for staying married 50 years, Mr. Munro jokingly replied "I was away a lot."

"Laughter, lots of laughter, You have to have a great sense of humour."

Think twice before you decide to drink and boat this season

By Ian Gilson
Canadian Safe Boating Council

Drinking and boating continues to be a factor in approximately 40 per cent of boating-related fatalities.

An IPSOS-REID study commissioned by the Canadian Safe Boating Council and conducted in 2014 cited some disturbing perceptions among boaters who drink and boat, at least occasionally. These included perceptions that it's not dangerous to drink and boat; drinking while boating is just part of the overall relaxing experience; and the chances of getting caught are extremely remote.

The first two of these suggest that we as boaters need to be better educated on the dangers of drinking and boating.

It's been proven that the combination of sun, wind and rocking motion of the boat significantly increases the intoxicating effects of alcohol. Not only are one's senses dulled but so is their ability to safely operate a boat. Reduced inhibitions often also lead to people taking risks that they wouldn't normally engage in, like operating their boat at speeds unsafe for the conditions or letting passengers sit on the bow of the boat with their legs hanging over the edge while the boat is in motion. It's all too often forgotten as well that, we as boat operators, are responsible for the safety of everyone on board. A good question to ask yourself is how you would feel if someone you love was hurt or killed as a result of your boating while impaired.

With respect to the chances of getting caught drinking and boating being extremely remote, the probabilities in 2015 have increased significantly based on two initiatives that will be in full swing this season.

The first is called Operation Dry Water, which was initiated by the Canadian Safe Boating Council in 2013 and has progressively gained momentum to the point where it should be in full swing across Canada this upcoming season. It runs during the August long weekend and involves police agencies making increased vessel checks to both educate boaters on the dangers of drinking and boating and to enforce their local laws relating to the practice.

The second is called Help Us Catch Impaired Boaters – Dial 9-1-1. It was introduced in 2014 across most of Canada, again by the Canadian Safe Boating Council, and eagerly received by police and 9-1-1 agencies alike. The intent of the initiative is to both act as a preventive influence and to empower everyone on the water to report instances of suspected impaired boating.

Make this season one in which you'll decide to leave your beer on the pier for when you return. It will not only be nice and cold but it'll go well with your stories of your trophy catch or breathtaking scenery.

On hand for the recent presentation were Senior Manager at CSA Group Daniel Langlois, Gillian Boyd of Town of Caledon Fire and Emergency Services, Mitchell Devins-Cann, Emma Brown, Mark Wallace of Town of Caledon Fire and Emergency Services and Ontario Fire Marshal and Chief of Management of the Office of the Fire Marshal and Emergency Management Ted Wieclawek.

Two local teens receive Fire Safety Action Award

Emma Brown and Mitchell Devins-Cann, both teenagers from Bolton, received the 2014 Fire Safety Action Award from the Office of the Fire Marshal recently.

The annual action award recognizes people aged 16 and younger who have demonstrated fire or carbon monoxide safety knowledge by taking appropriate action to prevent or mitigate a potential fire or carbon monoxide incident.

A year ago, Emma and Mitchell were in the vicinity of a De Rose Avenue home when they heard a rustling crackling noise. Upon investigating, they noticed the fire and smoke and immediately sprang into action to get help and save the occupants of the home.

Emma immediately called 9-1-1, while Mitchell ran to the front door and alerted the family. Mitchell did not stop there; he ran upstairs to assist the family in rescuing their son. Emma stayed on the phone and continually updated the 9-1-1 communications operator with information. Once everyone was out of the house and safe, Emma's caring actions continued as she comforted the family.

Emma and Mitchell remained calm throughout the incident, even with the presence of fire developing at the side of the house and smoke entering the garage. They both demonstrated fire safety knowledge by taking appropriate actions to mitigate a hostile fire situation.

Although the damage to the home was minimal, everyone survived to tell about it, thanks to the heroic efforts of Mitchell and Emma.

Police thank the school crossing guards

Caledon OPP has issued a statement, expressing thanks for the services of school crossing guards in the community.

From early September to late June, there is that undistinguished person that is out on the streets during the school year connecting with the youth of the community and trying to make a difference.

This person is the school crossing guard. People making their way around their community will either see them at their posts or will have to stop for pedestrians being assisted by the local guard. They are out there every weekday at morning arrivals, lunch time hours and afternoon departures (except on snow days) near the local schools, either elementary or secondary. Be it a man or a woman standing in all kinds of weather, they are out there making sure that children get on their way to school or home safely.

Police remind motorists travelling through school zones to be extra vigilant and mindful of, not only the school buses, but those students that walk to and from their schools who require the assistance of the guard. School zones normally have a reduced speed limit as well.

Crewson promises 'real change' at campaign office opening

By Bill Rea

If there is a need for "real change," then that's what Ed Crewson says he and the Liberals are offering.

Crewson made the observation several times last weekend, addressing supporters at the opening of his campaign office in Orangeville.

He is the Liberal candidate in Dufferin-Caledon in the next federal election, which is expected in October.

"We are here today because we know that real change is necessary here in Dufferin-Caledon and in Canada," Crewson told the crowd of supporters.

Crewson praised the dedication shown by his campaign team, adding they have been listening to thousands of residents of the riding who have been calling for change because they believe the current government, under Prime Minister Stephen Harper, is not working for them.

"The Harper government is broken," he declared. "It can no longer be trusted to care for the rest of us, who are working hard to pay taxes."

He also said he believes in the future and that he can make a difference in making it better.

"This is my home," he commented. "It's where Wendy and I chose to build our business, raise our family and serve our community."

Crewson added times have not always been easy, but they have always been driven by their love of each other, the community and the people they have served.

Over 30 years of running a business and 26 years in municipal leadership (he's the former mayor of Shelburne and also served as Warden of Dufferin County), Crewson said he has always passionately advocated for the people he has served. "I have made a difference in the lives of the people I've served," he declared.

Crewson stressed the need for better health care services, especially mental health. He said the only way to bring that about is to elect an MP who's committed to real change. "I know we deserve better than what we're getting right now," he said.

He also pointed to the need to help young people who are struggling to pay for post-secondary education, or to find their first job. They need help, and she said the only way to get that is to elect an MP committed to enacting real change.

"Seniors and veterans need all the support we can give them," Crewson added.

"We know that our environment needs to be protected from those who would exploit and despoil it," he said, adding that protection can only come from electing an MP who will bring about real change.

Crewson also charged that people work hard to pay their bills and taxes, while watching the Harper government waste money advertising action plans that may or may not exist, or on the Senate.

"We know that the Harper government really only cares about providing tax breaks to those who are already affluent," he said, adding the government cuts essential services to those who need them.

"I have proven myself as a fiscally responsible, socially progressive leader," he concluded. "I believe it is time and I am the candidate for real change in Dufferin-Caledon."

Dufferin-Caledon Liberal candidate Ed Crewson received some help from Dufferin County Warden Warren Maycock and Orangeville Mayor Jeremy Williams when he opened his campaign office last weekend.

Rehya Yazbek running for NDP in Dufferin-Caledon

Federal New Democrats in Dufferin-Caledon have nominated Rehya Yazbek to be their candidate in the upcoming federal election.

"A mother of three, Rehya knows firsthand the pressures that middle-class families are facing from juggling work and home life to making ends meet," said NDP Leader Tom Mulcair. "Rehya's been an advocate for her community for many years, and I know she'd be a strong voice in Dufferin-Caledon."

A working mom, with 20 years experience in the retail food sector, Yazbek currently works on staff for the United Food and Commercial Workers union and lives with her family outside Inglewood, where her husband runs a small business, repairing specialized auto components.

Yazbek has been active in a number of organizations ranging from Amnesty International to her daughter's Girl Guide troop, where she was beloved as Sunshine Owl.

She carried the NDP colours in Dufferin-Caledon in last year's provincial election, finishing fourth.

Rehya Yazbek

"Many of the people I represent work in part-time and precarious work," she said. "They're working harder and harder but can't get ahead. Stephen Harper's plan just isn't working and that's why need change. Tom Mulcair has a plan to help small businesses grow, create good jobs in our community and middle-class."

Change to hours at Caledon CRC

Caledon Community Recycling Centre (CRC) is now offering an earlier opening time.

The up-to-date hours of operation are Mondays to Saturdays from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

"Now that there are consistent opening hours at the Region's six CRCs, using CRC services will be more convenient for residents," Manager of Waste Operations Larry Conrad remarked. "We will be able to communicate facility closures and holiday hours more efficiently and since CRC employees are already on-site managing ongoing facility maintenance, there is no additional cost to open earlier."

Caledon CRC is one of six such facilities in Peel Region that provide residents with an opportunity to conveniently drop off reusable goods, recyclables, excess garbage and hazardous waste for proper and safe disposal. Disposal fees apply to some items. Yard waste drop off is always free at the Bolton and Caledon CRCs.

The Region provides waste management services in Caledon, as well as Brampton and Mississauga. For more information on these programs, call the Region at 905-791-9499 or 905-584-2216, or visit peelregion.ca/waste

Circuses have been coming under lot of criticism from animal rights groups, but Curtis said there's another side to the issue. Marie and Shelley are well-cared for and content, and he said they will likely live into their 90s. In the wild, the life expectancy of such creatures might be 18 to 20 years, considering the menaces of predators, poachers and loss of habitat.

Sproule said the tour of the circus started in May in Alberta, and it's been making its way across the country, including local stops in such places as Milton and Markham. The tour is slated to conclude next month in Ottawa. In all, they will have put on 121 performances.

Rosie MacLennan leads sweep in trampoline

By Jake Courtepatte

Early last week, Rosie MacLennan wasn't sure if she would be competing in the Pan Am Games.

The 26-year-old from King City suffered a mild concussion while training on the trampoline about three weeks ago, putting her in danger of failing to defend her gold medal from the 2011 Games in Guadalajara.

"Every day there was a decision," the 2013 world champion said. "I had timelines of when I had to do my routines and I met all those every day. We wanted to make sure we weren't putting my safety at risk. So every day I was getting assessed and made sure I didn't have any more symptoms."

But this Sunday, the five-foot-two MacLennan reigned supreme on the trampoline once again, capturing Pan Am gold in front of a large crowd at Toronto Coliseum, known outside of the Games as the Ricoh Centre.

Hers was the most difficult routine among all the competitors, scoring 53.560 en route to her gold medal.

"I'm ecstatic," MacLennan told the Sentinel. "Competing in front of a home crowd is just so different, so much better. Having the support behind you makes a world of difference, and when you win, the cheering is that much better."

Her lapse in training was evident in the qualification rounds on Saturday, struggling her way to a sixth-place finish.

Few athletes have gotten as much press as MacLennan leading up to and during the 2015 Pan Am Games, entering as both the reigning Pan Am and Olympic champion. MacLennan won Canada's only gold in the 2012 Olympics in London.

She says the expectations put on her were "motivating."

"The expectations on me have always been high since London," said MacLennan. "They don't really bother me though, it just motivates me to be better."

MacLennan's mentor Karen Cockburn, eight years her elder, took the bronze medal. She was the eighth and final athlete to compete in the final, and when the Stouffville native completed her third-place routine, MacLennan could barely contain her excitement.

"We've talked about it before, but nothing really matches that experience," said MacLennan. "It was really amazing. I don't think there's anything that could top that."

MacLennan's winning performance wasn't even her best effort. Her injury prevented her from doing her three triple somersault routine that won her the 2014 World Championships, the first women in history to do so.

Still, her second-best was good enough to once again prove that she is the best in the world.

"I went with what was comfortable and it worked out. I was confident with my routine, and I think that probably had a big impact on how I performed."

The win was part of a gold medal sweep for Canada, in which Keegan Soehn of Red Deer, Alberta, was the champion in the men's event.

Jason Burnett of Nobleton finished just off the podium in fourth place.

Rosie MacLennan of King City was in gold-medal form with this routine.

Canada takes individual silver and team bronze in eventing

Canadians were able to pick up some more equestrian medals Sunday at the Pan Am Games at the OLG Caledon Equestrian Park in Palgrave, but not the colour they were hoping for.

The team took the bronze medal, and defending Pan Am champion Jessica Phoenix, 31, of Cannington, Ontario collected silver in the individual competition. The United States took both gold medals.

Caledon Mayor Allan Thompson was on hand to present the medals for both competitions, along with Town of Mono Mayor Laura Ryan.

Eventing consists of three phases: Dressage, cross-country and show jumping. The Canadian team included Phoenix, Colleen Loach of Dunham, Quebec, Waylon Roberts of Port Perry and Kathryn Robinson of Kettering, in England (her mother maintains a home in Bracebridge).

All four athletes presented their mounts at the horse inspection last Thursday. Team alternate Selena O'Hanlon, 34, of Kingston also presented her mount, Foxwood High, a 12-year-old bay Canadian Sport Horse gelding sired by Rio Bronco W and owned by John and Judy Rumble, in the event that she was called upon. All of the Canadian horses were accepted.

"The main goal is to win a team gold medal and, absolutely, if we can defend that individual gold, I would be ready for it!" said Phoenix prior to the competition. "The team members that we have with us on this trip are phenomenal riders on excellent horses. I hope our whole team has their best performances."

"I have never been so proud to call myself a Canadian," she added. "From the athlete village in downtown Toronto to the opening ceremonies to the competition grounds at Caledon to the cross-country course, everything is absolutely top-notch. It's by far the best Pan Am Games that I have ever been to as far as venue and how they are treating the horses and the athletes. I am extremely proud to be Canadian!"

The team was in second place after the dressage phase Friday, close behind the Americans. Brazil was in third, followed by Guatemala, Argentina, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico, Uruguay and Venezuela.

Robinson was leading the way for Canada, sitting in second position behind Ruy Fonseca of Brazil and Marilyn Little of the U.S.

The team completed three clear rounds Saturday in the cross-country component, as they held onto third place.

Held at the Pan Am Cross-Country Center at Will O'Wind Farm in Mono, The U.S. remained at the top of the leaderboard, with Brazil moving into second. Canada went to third after losing the score of Robinson, who was second following dressage.

Individually, Phoenix was poised to defend her gold medal from the 2011 Pan American Games in Guadalajara, as she was sitting third, separated by one show jumping rail from the leaders, Fonseca and Little.

As the last rider to compete cross-country for Canada, Phoenix had a sea of fans cheering her around the course, designed by Wayne Copping of Australia. Many rushed to the final fence to help bring her home; a loud cheer went up as she crossed the finish line with no penalties riding Pavarotti, a 13-year-old bay Westphalian gelding owned by Don J. Good of New Hamburg.

"Canadians are the most amazing fans in the world!" said Phoenix. "To have the Pan Am Games in our own backyard is incredible, and to have everyone here supporting us has just been overwhelming."

The third and final phase of eventing competition saw the Canadian team maintain its overnight position to claim the team bronze. Brazil took the silver.

Phoenix, who was sitting in third position individually coming into the final phase of competition, produced a clear show jumping round with Pavarotti to put the pressure on the two riders ahead of her. Marilyn Little of the U.S. produced a clear round with RF Scandalous, but when a rail fell at the final fence for leader Ruy Fonseca of Brazil riding Tom Bombadill Too, it catapulted Little to the individual gold, while Phoenix moved up to claim the individual silver.

"I felt extremely thankful to be sitting on Pavarotti today," said Phoenix. "He was absolutely amazing and I just loved every single moment!"

"It was so awesome to be able to do that in front of the home crowd," said Phoenix. "To be able to do this in our backyard, with all of our family and friends around, and to have all of the Canadians cheering has just been amazing! It was one of the most amazing feelings in my life."

"I am so thankful to be here with our teammates, our coaches and our support staff that is here with us," she added. "My groom, Sandra Andresen, did an amazing job with Pavarotti this whole weekend. We've had such a good, strong team. I will certainly take away a lot of memories from this experience."

Loach also delivered a clear show jumping round for Canada riding Qorry Blue d'Argouges, an 11-year-old grey selle francais gelding sired by Mr. Blue. In her major games debut, Loach finished eighth individually.

"My horse was amazing, he tried his heart out for me," said Loach, 32, of the horse owned by 2014 Alltech FEI World Equestrian Games competitor Peter Barry. "He is super generous, and a very careful jumper. I'm a lucky girl to ride him."

"It means a lot. It's a dream come true," Loach said, of winning a medal in her first major games appearance. "The team is great, we get along really well, and it's been a super atmosphere. I couldn't have asked for a better experience."

As the youngest member of the team, Roberts moved up from 34th position following dressage to 17th with a clear performance over Saturday's cross-country phase. Sunday, Roberts made it all the way to the end of the course before dropping a rail at the final fence with Bill Owen, an 11-year-old bay Canadian Sport Horse gelding sired by Money Talks and owned in partnership with Kelly Plitz. Roberts finished 17th individually in his second Pan American Games appearance.

"To be able to come home for the Pan American Games and represent Canada on the team has been wonderful," said Roberts, 26. "I've been coming to the Caledon Equestrian Park for 15 years, and it's great to see all the familiar faces and everybody rooting for the Canadians."

Given his background in jumping, Roberts has been a frequent visitor to the Park over the years, and was impressed by its expansive renovation for the Pan Am Games, saying, "It is going to leave a really great legacy here in Caledon and it's going to bring a lot more young people into the sport. With the indoor arena, we are going to be able to have horse shows all year round!"

The fourth member of the Canadian team, Robinson, 29, was eliminated during Saturday's cross-country competition and therefore not eligible to compete in the final phase of show jumping with Let It Bee, her 14-year-old dark bay German-bred gelding. As the three best scores from the four-member team are counted toward the final score, Robinson's teammates rallied to claim the bronze medal.

The Canadian Eventing Team was supported at the TORONTO 2015 Pan American Games by Technical Advisor and chef d'equipe Clayton Fredericks, Team Manager Fleur Tipton, Team Veterinarian Dr. Christiana Ober, Stable Manager Max Corcoran, Team Farrier Andy Vergut and Therapist Usha Knabe.

Kathryn Robinson, Jessica Phoenix, Colleen Loach and Waylon Roberts won the team bronze for Canada in eventing.

Summer is an ideal time to have Krown Rust Control apply rust protection to your vehicle or fleet. First of all, you have a large amount of corrosive salt residue hiding in metal pinch seams and weld points from last winter. High humidity is ever-present in our Ontario summers and is a catalyst for the corrosion process. It's also important to know that the rate at which steel rusts doubles for every 10 degrees above zero Celsius. Consequently, one should never underestimate the importance of rust proofing in the summer.

Annually certified technicians at Krown Rust Control apply an environmentally friendly, solvent-free formula that dispels moisture from metal or painted surfaces, and sets up a corrosion resistant barrier. Krown's low viscosity formulation is capable of penetrating hard to reach areas that effect the vehicle's structural integrity such as metal folds, seams, and spot welds. It also helps to lubricate fasteners, brake cables and power window and door mechanisms.

Krown is the only national rust program endorsed by CAA, and the APA, a non-profit auto industry watchdog.

Ask about Krown's line of paint polish and protection products, cleaning products, Salt Eliminator, plus Krown aerosol spray products for home use. Other services include interior shampoo, fabric guard, and engine shampoo. They offer a full line of WeatherTech accessories, including floor mats, floor liners, cargo liners, bug deflectors, mud flaps, wind and rain deflectors, Clearcover license plate frames, and car care products.

Founded in 1986, Krown Rust Control has become Canada's #1 rust control organization. Krown is a Canadian company that is an Owner-Dealer co-operative, with over 230 associate dealers across Canada. Krown in Bolton is operated by dealer Rod Gibson.

Avoid the fall rush and call Krown today for your appointment. Ask about their corporately backed national warranty program and Locked-in Pricing Policy. A mobile spray service is available for fleets.

Wanted: an alternative to impasses

So here we are in the middle of July, 10 months after negotiations began toward hammering out collective agreements with Ontario's teachers, and what has been accomplished?

Nothing.

And even that is an overly generous appraisal of the current situation.

Thanks to legislation enacted last year that was to have provided a means of achieving such contracts without resorting to strikes, lockouts or government legislation imposing a settlement, collective bargaining has taken place at both the provincial and local school board levels. But there has not been a single agreement reached anywhere. Worse yet, there are no current negotiations and only the possibility of an attempt at conciliation in the weeks leading up to September's scheduled school openings.

For reasons never adequately explained, the provincial talks that ought to be merely between the Ministry of Education and the various unions seem to have been dominated by a third party, representatives of the school boards.

Whatever the case, the public has been told precious little as to what has been discussed, with the school boards' representatives claiming that changes one of the unions is demanding would cost $3.2 billion and the union claiming they haven't even got around to making their salary demands.

Equally mystifying is the recent ability of the Upper Grand District School Board to pass a 2015-16 budget that's both balanced and compliant with provincial instructions in the absence of any labour agreements.

Meanwhile, the Liberal government says it has no money to spend on better salaries and benefits and that is clearly an under-statement of its situation, with experts warning that it cannot keep its promise to produce a balanced budget by 2018 and its credit rating being downgraded last week.

In the circumstances, it's hardly appropriate for Premier Kathleen Wynne and Education Minister Liz Sandals to continue their hands-off approach. What's clearly needed now is a major change in tactics, starting with a firm commitment from Queen's Park that a province-wide teachers' strike will simply not be permitted.

Any worthwhile action plan should involve a commitment to achieve a contract covering salaries, benefits and class sizes no later than mid-August.

This could happen in one of two ways, either by naming an arbitrator or by opening up the negotiations to the public through use of the Internet, thus allowing parents and other taxpayers to understand what the issues are and express their opinions as to who was right, and if necessary making the talks non-stop until a deal is reached.

Granted, we know of no precedent for such an alternative. But the possibility didn't exist in pre-Web days, and in this case every Ontarian, as a taxpayer, has a direct interest in the proceedings. And although such open hearings would involve added costs, we suppose those could be offset by permitting some commercials.

We submit that the option's advantages would far outweigh any disadvantages.

For one thing, all the negotiators would be on their best behaviour, be they politicians, civil servants or union representatives.

For another, it would be virtually impossible for one party to misrepresent the positions taken by the other party or parties, since everything would be on the public record.

Ideally, such talks would start with opening statements as to the parties' objectives. The government's would hopefully be a commitment to maintain educational standards while keeping costs under control. It shouldn't take a rocket scientist to determine that at a time of diminishing enrolments the overall budget need not grow in order to provide teachers with salaries that keep pace with today's modest inflation.

Once agreement is reached at the provincial level, the legislature should be recalled to pass a law giving negotiators at the school-board level 90 days to reach local agreements on non-monetary issues or have those issues resolved through arbitration.

No fun having two names

No one ever told me covering the equestrian events at the Pan Am Games was going to cause me so many complications, not to mention frustration.

The fun started a couple of months ago, when I got word that they were going to need a suitable photograph of me; comparable to passport pictures. They also had to be submitted in a certain way and in proper formats dealing with size, etc. I submitted several pictures, and got a series of rejections, for various different reasons. But I was eventually able to come up with something satisfactory.

About a month ago, I received a package of material from the Games organizers, containing a card with my picture on it, and directions to go to a facility to get the actual badge that I would have to wear around my neck. There was also mention of vest that would have to be worn by anyone interested in taking pictures of the competitions, but more about that later.

The place to go to was on Yonge Street in North York, so I grabbed the documentation I would need, hopped into my car and headed south.

I was asked to produce photo ID, so I handed the lady on the other side of the table my driver's licence. She studied it carefully, then went and consulted someone else. By that point, I knew there was some problem.

My first name is William, and I have a birth certificate to prove it. But like so many people with that name, I have gone by Bill most of my life, including my professional life. Very few people call me by my real given name.

I applied for accreditation as Bill Rea, and I evidently passed the security check. But the people at the media centre told me there had been no such check conducted on a William Rea. One of the officials took the card with my picture on it and tore it up, telling me another check would have to be conducted. He said it would take a couple of days.

I started wondering. Had none of these Pan Am officials ever heard of Bill Clinton (or William Jefferson Clinton, as he was referred to when he was being sworn in as President of the United States)?

This all happened July 2, which was a Thursday. This fellow gave me a phone number of a Help Desk, and suggested I call the following Monday. By then, he said things might be sorted out.

I have been on this planet long enough to know such issues are part of life. My getting mad was going to accomplish nothing, so I accepted the situation as gracefully as I could.

Little did I realize the turns this narrative was going to take.

I dutifully called the Help Desk Monday. Actually, I called a couple of times, and each time, I was told to call back later. So I called a couple of times Tuesday, and Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

One of Friday's calls was really interesting because the person I talked to delved into the matter a bit more, and told me the documentation for the new security check had been submitted the previous day, like one whole week after I had been told it would.

I finally let my impatience start to show. I do have to say that the people I encountered every time I called the Help Desk were, without exception, very polite, and very understanding when I let my frustration get the better of me.

I spent the weekend and all day Monday making repeated calls and going through this foolishness.

Finally, at 9 Monday evening, I got a call on my cell phone.

"You're good to go," the woman on the other end said.

I made a quick trip back to North York the following morning and had my badge after about a half-hour wait. It said "Bill" on the front and "William" on the reverse. I didn't bother asking. Oh yeah, I remembered to ask about the vest I would need, and was told it would be issued at the venue.

Good timing too. I had already missed the team dressage competition, but I had time to get to the individual show.

I arrived at the equestrian park in Palgrave and walked into the media centre, expecting to be issued with my vest. But life is never that simple, is it?

The lady who greeted me told me I was not allowed to photograph things without my vest, and I told her that I had been told that was where I was to be issued my vest. Such was not the case, and I was evidently not the first person who had been told that. I was further told that another trip to Toronto was in my immediate future, this time to the CNE grounds.

Controlling my temper suddenly became a lot more difficult.

But since the staff the office had obviously dealt with this situation before, they got to work trying to fix me up with something. I just sat at a table, pondering how I was going to explain all this to my wife.

At that point, Venue Photo Manager Grant Black got in the act, and I have to say he's got probably the best PR skills I've ever encountered. He was able to fix me up with a temporary vest, stipulating I had to return it when I was done for the day — actually, owing to the heat of last Tuesday, it was a very long and tiring day. I also had a lot of work waiting for me in the office. But I also decided it was probably best to get the trip to the CNE out of the way that evening, and start dealing with any problems that might develop from that.

Of course, there was a major pile-up last Tuesday evening that closed several southbound lanes on Highway 427. But I know Toronto well enough to get around that. Parking at the CNE grounds presented no problem, provided one was okay with parting with $30 (I wasn't). But I know some of the streets in the area, and was able to park for just $2. It did mean a five-minute walk with my weary legs to get through the Princes' Gates, and I did it, all the time wondering what new mess was going to be handed me. After the experiences I had been through, I think I could be forgiven for being a little cynical.

I finally found the main media centre and was starting to explain what I was after to the person behind the first desk I came to, when someone hollered "Bill!" (not "William," but "Bill").

I suddenly realized that Grant Black gets around as much as I do. He got me my vest in a matter of minutes.

How different would my last couple of weeks have been if someone had realized that Bill is a short version of William. Pity Bill Shakespeare's not around to write a play about it.

And if any of you think I'm exaggerating about this, I'm not. You can trust me. I've passed two security checks in the last month.

Federal government working on growing Canada's tourism sector

Canada is a top tourist destination. This is due to our country's rich natural heritage, vibrant cities and unique festivals, which offer visitors a world-class tourism experience. Our government is proud to promote tourism in Canada and support the continued growth of Canada's tourism sector, an important contributor to the Canadian economy. It is an $88.5-billion industry, employing more than 600,000 Canadians in every region of the country. And, Economic Action Plan 2015 takes important steps to grow the tourism industry.

Destination Canada (formerly the Canadian Tourism Commission) has a strong record of promoting tourism in Canada to visitors from all around the world. The budget provides Destination Canada additional support to launch a new marketing campaign, in partnership with the tourism industry that will promote Canada to travellers from the United States. This campaign is expected to attract American visitors to destinations across Canada, helping promote economic activity in the tourism sector.

To help facilitate the ease of access and movement for travellers, Economic Action Plan 2015 expands the Electronic Travel Authorization eligibility for low-risk travellers from countries like Brazil and Mexico, where a visa is required for citizens travelling to Canada. This will help make Canada a more attractive destination for personal and business travel. It also allows more resources to be focused on high-risk travellers.

These measures build on important gains under our government that help ease travel and grow tourism in Canada, like the agreement reached with China to give Canada Approved Destination Status for Chinese tourists. Since then, Chinese tourism to Canada has significantly increased, helping support jobs and growth across the country.

The Budget also introduces Canada 150. As we near 2017, the 150th anniversary of Confederation, Canada 150 will help celebrate this landmark occasion, by providing $210 million over four years to support activities, events and celebrations across Canada. This includes support for local community events, as well as Canada Day celebrations in the National Capital Region and other major cities.

In addition, Economic Action Plan 2015 delivers significant support to Canada's small business community. It includes measures like reducing the small business tax rate to 9 per cent by 2019, providing relief on EI premiums paid in 2015 and 2016 and improving access to financing through the Canada Small Business Financing Program. These measures are helping the many small businesses in Canada's tourism sector grow and create jobs.

Our government is proud to help showcase Canada's rich natural and cultural heritage. We are strengthening Canada's tourism sector, helping grow the industry and creating jobs in every region of the country.

Is the licence plate on your car peeling off?

Many of us spend a lot of time in our cars – both for work and for recreation. This summer, as I drive throughout Dufferin-Caledon, I am seeing more and more vehicles with peeling or bubbling licence plates. Originally, I thought it was a case of wear and tear from our many gravel roads and weather, but now I am learning there is more to the story of peeling licence plates.

FROM QUEEN'S PARK

Sylvia Jones
MPP Dufferin-Caledon

If you have noticed your licence plate starting to bubble or peel off it could be due to a manufacturing defect that was first discovered almost three years ago. The government has known since September 2012 there were problems with peeling paint on licence plates, yet it has done nothing to resolve the manufacturing defect. Trilcor Correctional Industries produces the licence plates through an adult offender work program at the Central East Correctional Centre in Lindsay.

As the car owner, you will be held liable if your licence plate is unreadable, and will be obligated to replace your damaged licence plates. Also, if you are charged with having an illegible licence plates, it will result in a $110 fine. Approximately 18,000 licence plates are brought in to Service Ontario a year because they are damaged.

My Progressive Conservative colleague from Perth-Wellington, MPP Randy Petape, who is the critic to the Minister of Government and Consumer Services, has sent a letter to the Minister highlighting the problem and asking that the issue be resolved immediately. The Ministry has known about these peeling plates for three years and has yet to resolve it. In the meantime, drivers will be held responsible if their licence plates are peeling and unreadable, for a design defect the government should be resolving with the manufacturer.

If your licence plate has begun to bubble, peel off, fade or is experiencing wear and tear, you can have them replaced free of charge as long as the plates are less than five years old.

Take the damaged plates to a Service Ontario centre and bring a piece of identification (i.e. driver's licence), proof of car insurance, and your vehicle permit. If your licence plates are older than five years it will cost $29 to have them replaced. I would also like to know if you have had to replace your plates already or if you have any problems replacing your plates so that I can work with my colleague and the Minister to get the root issue solved; having licence plates that hold up to the wear and tear we put on our vehicles.

Premiers side-stepping responsibility

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Claire Hoy

Since the beginning of time – perhaps even before that – politicians at one level of government love to blame politicians at another level for any problems they have.

That way, so the thinking goes, they can sidestep the issue of personal responsibility (a very unpopular notion these days, alas) and, like the old TV comedian, claim, "The devil made me do it."

The "devil" in this case, of course, is Prime Minister Stephen Harper who, to the absolute surprise of nobody, was subjected to the customary verbal abuse last week when Canada's premiers met for their annual gabfest.

Back in the days when Ontario really was the engine of the Canadian economy – as opposed to the perpetual whiner it is today – your correspondent spent many hours covering these events. Then, of course, they were simply called the annual Premier's Conference, as opposed to the current, absurdly grand title of the Council of the Federation.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the premiers, with as much fanfare as they could muster, announced an agreement on future energy strategy which New Brunswick Premier Brian Gallant called a "monumental document."

The late American novelist Emerson Hough, in his book "54-40 or Fight," could have been writing about the premiers (obviously he wasn't) when we wrote of two leading politicians of the 19th century: "Each having thus delivered himself of words which meant nothing, both now seated themselves and proceeded to look mighty grave."

While the premiers – especially Ontario's Kathleen Wynne – railed on about the significance of this non-binding document, the fact is their pledge to cut back on greenhouse gases actually takes effect in 2050. That's right folks, 35 years from now, when all of the current crop of premiers will be but a vague memory for those who are still around to care about it.

With the notable exception of Saskatchewan Premier Brad Wall – who had the audacity to defend the oil industry, the most important industry in this country – the premiers spent their time dumping on both Big Oil and Harper, as if they were responsible for the fiscal mess most of these premiers find themselves facing.

Again, why take responsibility for your incompetence, when you can spread the blame upwards?

In an essay earlier last week in the National Post, William Robson, president and CEO of the C.D. Howe Institute, put the economic state of the federation into some perspective. (Spoiler alert for readers: Robson actually depends upon proven facts as opposed to partisan rhetoric for his arguments.)

Here's some of what he wrote:

"Federal support for other governments' infrastructure has risen five-fold in the past decade, and now stands at $5 billion. The Canada Health Transfer has been rising 6 per cent annually, and the Canada Social Transfer 3 per cent annually; they now stand at $32 and $13 billion, respectively. Equalization and territorial government supports now amount to $20 billion.

"Add about $20 billion in miscellaneous smaller grants to local, territorial, and provincial governments, and Ottawa's transfers will surpass $90 billion this year. They have grown 50 per cent in the past decade – faster than the economy, and faster than total government budgets at either level. One-third of every dollar the feds raise now flows out in intergovernmental transfers. And more than one-fifth of every dollar of provincial revenue now comes from Ottawa."

There's more, but you get the point.

While Wynne, for example, loves to blame Harper for pretty much everything, her government – and the McGuinty government preceding it (in which Wynne was a senior minister) – has arguably the worst record in the country of fiscal incompetence.

Just to put that into understandable terms, everybody knows that California has such a debt load that it is flirting with the possibility of bankruptcy.

What most people likely don't know is that on a per capita basis, California's gross debt at the end of fiscal 2012 was $3,844, about one-fifth the per capita debt that the Liberals have piled onto the backs of Ontario taxpayers, much of it flowing from their ill-conceived alternative energy plans, plans which a) haven't produced much usable energy, but b) have saddled generations of Ontarians yet to come with enormous debts.

Indeed, on the aforementioned per capita basis, Alberta was the only province in Canada with less debt than California, and since the oil industry has contracted the last couple of years, Alberta may soon be worse off than California as well.

The point here is that while the premiers are constantly nagging Ottawa for more, they are doing little to reign in their own excesses. As for Ottawa, love them or hate them, they have actually been fiscally responsible under Harper.

In purely political terms, politicians who promise the world are more popular than those who try to be responsible. But there you have it.

The employees of William Osler Health System have announced their pledge of $1 million to support hospital redevelopment initiatives at Osler's three hospital sites. Their pledge will be matched by Orlando Corporation's $15 Million Matching Challenge, resulting in $2 million raised for redevelopment, Osler's largest staff contribution to date.

Osler employees pledge $1 million to support hospital redevelopment

The employees of William Osler Health System are giving back to the communities where they live and work through Osler Foundation's Employee Giving Campaign.

During Osler's annual general meeting June 22, Osler employees announced their pledge of $1 million to support hospital redevelopment initiatives at the three hospital sites. Their pledge will be matched by Orlando Corporation's $15 Million Matching Challenge, resulting in $2 million raised for redevelopment, Osler's largest staff contribution to date.

"Congratulations and thank you to Osler's staff for accepting this challenge," said Kelly Falzon, co-chair of the William Osler Employee Giving Committee. "Our staff's commitment and passion for helping others is unwavering. The standard of giving by Osler employees has raised the bar, and will continue to influence so many others here and throughout our Osler communities. I'm proud of the generosity of our employees – it is truly a reflection of our commitment to serving our patients with best-in-class programs and clinical services."

With the tremendous ongoing and future expansion and redevelopment of Osler's hospitals requiring unprecedented support from the entire community, Osler employees have expressed a desire to do their part by contributing to the hospitals' redevelopment projects. Government funding covers the operational costs of the hospitals, however, the entire cost of equipment as well as 10 per cent of construction costs must be raised in the community. Proceeds from the employee pledge will fund redevelopment projects and the latest generation of medical technology and diagnostic equipment needs across all three sites.

"On behalf of Osler employees, I'm honoured and privileged to be a part of this wonderful announcement," said Andrew Asa, co-chair of the committee. "As an employee, I see first-hand the incredible work and dedication from individuals working together at all levels and across so many departments. With this group employee pledge, regardless of the size of the gift each individual is able to give, once again we're collectively making a difference in the care of our patients. I'm proud to be a part of the $1 million pledge and the largest staff donation in our history."

Dodgers preparing for first playoff appearance

By Jake Courtepatte

For the first time in their four-year history, the senior Bolton Dodgers have booked their ticket to the North Dufferin Baseball League playoffs.

"They deserve it this year," said long-time coach Mark Kellett. "They've worked hard as a team and it's good to see them finally build up to that level."

It was a narrow miss last year, earning a loss in the final week of play to miss the playoffs by four points. They ultimately ended up in 11th place.

This time around, the Dodgers are a touch over .500 and are sitting in a comfortable sixth position, though the race is tight between sixth and eight.

Pitcher Shawn English attributed a good portion of the team's success to their newfound knack for power hitting. Newcomer Colin McKeen, once manning the hot corner for the University of West Alabama Tigers, has been a large part of that success.

"He's amazing to watch," said English. "Having him in the lineup not only produces us runs, but it's also a confidence booster to the rest of the team."

McKeen had the Dodgers' only multi-base hit in their solo game last week, a 6-4 loss to the Creemore Braves. Up 4-3 in the top of the seventh inning, starting pitcher Ron DiPalma ran out of gas, allowing three straight to cross the plate before getting the yank.

However, Bolton's pitchers have shown the ability to successfully pitch deep into games this season. The team has gone to only five different pitchers all year, with veterans like DiPalma, English and Tysen Hansen often going six or seven innings in a game.

"We've made the right changes and figured everything out this year," said English. "We look good."

The Dodgers demonstrated a couple of weeks ago that fatigue was not a factor in their late-season push, as they picked up three wins in just over twenty-four hours early last week.

Following four straight losses late last month, they were looking to get back above .500, a level they sat at comfortably for most of the season.

A double-header in Clearview last Sunday held a ton of implications for both sides, as the Dodgers and Orioles had been battling for middle ground in standings all season.

A sweep of the series through a combination of work at the plate and on the mound put the Dodgers back in comfortable playoff position.

The second game of the series saw some of Bolton's best hitters do what they do best, including Jon Bloomfield going three-for-three with a double, cashing in twice. Power-hitter Michael Gemmiti had two hits of his own, including a double.

On the mound, Damian Allison did almost six innings of work, allowing just five hits. Shawn Hansen came in relief, cruising to a 7-5 victory for the Dodgers.

The Angus Black Sox, winners of just three games all season, were the Dodgers' final victims of the week last Monday, as Bolton won their third game in a row 5-2.

The previous week was a rough one for the Dodgers.

After a strong showing in the latter half of June, in which the Dodgers won five of six games, they struggled offensively, putting up only six runs over three straight losses.

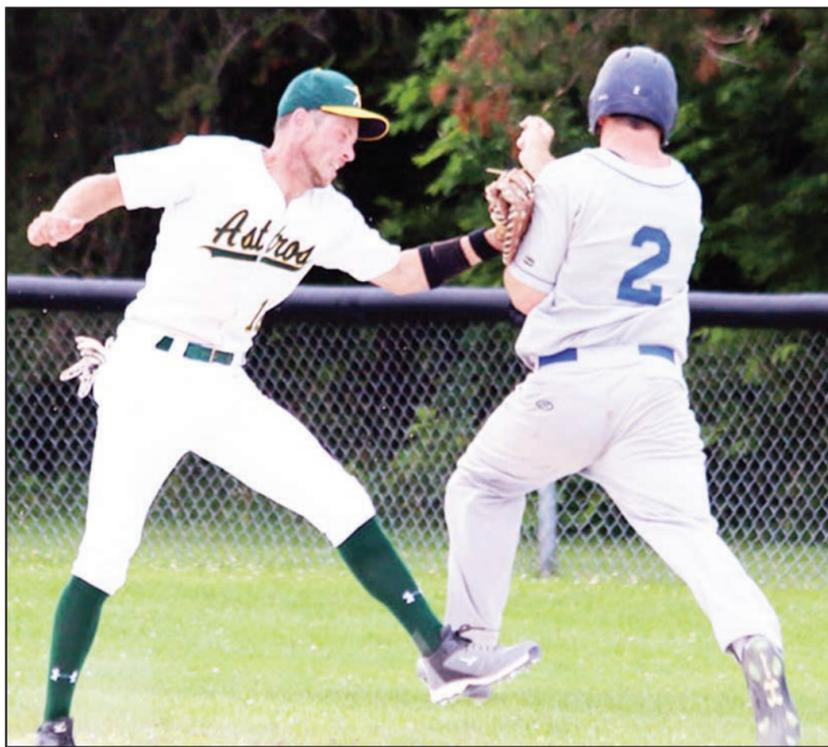

They were in a hole early visiting the New Lowell Knights July 2, as both Chris Greer and Sean Connor of the Knights landed on base with the first two at-bats of the game. Both would come around to score, after a single by Todd Patton.

Dodger starting pitcher Tysen Hansen then settled in nicely, giving up only one run through the next three innings. In the top half of the innings, however, the Dodgers struggled. Perennial long-ball hitter Gemmiti had Bolton's only multi-base hit of the game, with the Dodgers recording their first and only run of the game in the fifth when Nick Taconga came in to score.

Hansen was pulled after one out in the bottom of the fourth, after giving up five runs on seven hits. Ron Dipalma took control the rest of the way pitching shut-out ball for a final score of 5-1 for New Lowell.

A certainly excusable defeat at the hands of the league's top team, it was

Local hoopster to represent Ontario at U17 National Championships

The old adage that the road to success is paved with unexpected twists, turns and occasional heartaches has proven true for local basketball star Mikaela Dodig.

She has been on an unrelenting quest for a much-coveted spot on Team Ontario's basketball U17 roster.

Mikaela received the good news that she will wear the Ontario jersey this summer after a long weekend of tryouts at the newly constructed Toronto Pan-Am facility in February. She is spending June and July at training camps in preparation to represent the province in top-level U.S.-based tournaments and at the National Championships in Edmonton at the end of July. In addition to the training schedule, the U17 team also participated at the prestigious SLAM Challenge in Montreal at the end of June which saw them compete against older CÉGEP and college-aged teams from Quebec, and others from Ontario and the Maritimes.

The Grade 12 student at Bill Crothers Secondary School in Unionville is entering her ninth year of competitive basketball. She took up the sport at seven as a member of the then newly-founded Caledon Cougars Basketball Association. From the first day, Mikaela worked feverishly to hone her skill sets and develop a passion for the game while competing against bigger and older players at the highest level of club basketball. She continues to find ways to excel on the court through her composure, vast knowledge of the game, stellar defence and hustle, and through an array of offensive weapons which contribute not only to team success, but assist in helping her teammates improve their game.

Mikaela's perseverance through the disappointment of coming up just short of making the team on three prior occasions is a testament to her work ethic and commitment to her on-court development.

Her first attempt at making Team Ontario as a U15 player was fraught with difficulty before it began, having contracted a viral infection the night before tryouts. Mikaela was among the very last cuts the next year prior to her selection as an alternate on the U17 team last summer. A rigorous and self-imposed training schedule consisting of many early mornings and late nights on the court and in the weight room, coupled with her ever-present positive outlook played a big part in helping her achieve a long-term goal.

The entire Caledon Cougars family looks forward to tracking Mikaela and her Team Ontario teammates as they aim to bring the National Championship back to Ontario this summer.

The Caledon Cougars are continuing their tradition of excellence this season with the midget girls winning a provincial D1 championship and all six girls' teams finishing in the top eight in the province. Several boys' teams also finished several divisions higher than last season and continue to demonstrate growth and improvement. The club operates winter competitive travel and house league teams, summer recreational and elite camps, summer AAU travel teams and player development opportunities for boys and girls aged six to 19.

Brewers score big over Martingrove

By Jake Courtepatte

A big fourth inning was all the Bolton Brewers needed to earn their second win in a row in the Greater Toronto Baseball League.

After edging the Newmarket Hawks 6-5 at home last Thursday, they were back at it again one week later hosting the Martingrove Sox. Starting pitcher Zack Riddell, a highly-touted prospect coming out of the junior ranks last season, earned the call to the mound and put together yet another impressive performance.

The young righty stayed in the game for six innings, allowing only three hits and shutting out the Sox. Trent Barwick cleaned up the final inning, striking out the side to end the game. It was the Brewers' first shutout game of the season.

The win was Riddell's second of the year, giving him a 2-2 record. His ability to paint the corners was evident, as it has been all year, striking out 11 in his performance. He currently sits third in the GTBL in strikeouts this season.

At the plate, Bolton exploded with offense in the fourth inning, scoring seven runs in what would end a 7-0 victory. Brett Chater, Mike Wallace, Eric Cirone, John Hutchinson, Matt Blacklaws, Shawn Chalmers and Brendan Lyons all crossed the plate in the inning.

Now with a record of 4-13, the Brewers are desperately looking to claw back into the playoff picture. They are back at it again this week, hosting the league-leading East York Bulldogs in a doubleheader Saturday. First pitch is at 2 p.m. at North Hill Park.

Final home game tonight

back-to-back losses in last Sunday's doubleheader with the Lisle Astros that was the true upset of the week. The Astros entered Sunday with only one win on the season, which they earned all the way back in May.

They tripled their point production on the season in one day, holding the Dodgers to five runs in 3-1 and 7-4 victories. The pitching was certainly not to blame in the first game, as Dodgers veteran Shawn English went the distance giving up only three runs and six hits, striking out three.

At the plate, the Dodgers were held off the scoresheet until the sixth inning, failing to rally for a comeback when Hansen scored their only run of the game.

With six innings of work already under his belt that day, it was English's tired arm that gave way for the Astros to also take the second game. After six strong innings by Allison, giving up only three hits, the teams were deadlocked at 4-4 heading into the final inning.

English entered the game in relief for the seventh, giving up three runs for a 7-4 loss.

Colin McKeen had perhaps the only solid day at the plate for the Dodgers, going two-forthree and crossing the plate twice in the final game. He had also hit a single the day before, in the NDBL's annual All-Star game.

If you want to get a look at the team before they make their inaugural playoff run, you can catch their final home game of the regular season tonight (Thursday) at North Hill Park. First pitch is at 8:45p.m.

A doubleheader in Orangeville Sunday with the Giants caps off the season.
