Security at Town Hall raised in Council debate

By Bill Rea

The door at Town Hall that was locked as part of the Service Caledon arrangement has been unlocked, and it's going to stay that way.

Caledon Council Tuesday night ratified the decision made two weeks ago at committee, although it took a considerable amount of sometimes heated debate before the decision was reached, and it wasn't unanimous. Councillors Johanna Downey and Jennifer Innis opposed the majority.

Possible security concerns came up in the discussion.

The door separating the entrance area and cafeteria at Town Hall from the Emil Kolb

Atrium, which leads to the rest of the building, including various departments, the Town Council Chambers and the Mayor's Office, was closed and locked earlier this year. The door had been closed as part of the new Service Caledon initiative.

The Service Caledon counter is just inside the main door at Town Hall, and people entering the building were being greeted by staff at the counter, and asked if they needed assistance. Those who said they knew where they were going are allowed to pass through the door, while those who were not sure were offered further help. The aim of the program was to aid people from their first point of contact in the facility, but some councillors raised concerns that it gave the impression that Town Hall is closed to the public. This was despite assurances from Town staff that was not the case.

"Town Hall remains a building open to the public and access to Council/committee meetings is not affected," stated a staff report that went to committee two weeks ago.

Although the committee decisions had not yet been ratified, the door was unlocked the day after it was made.

But that caused concern for Caledon OPP Inspector Ryan Carothers. The detachment commander told Council Tuesday night he had been at Town Hall for a meeting early in January and was pleased to see the locked door, considering it an enhancement to the "security of the facility." He was in the building again in the last two weeks and noticed the door was unlocked, and started asking around.

He pointed out Town Hall is connected to the Ontario Court of Justice next door, and part of his job is to ensure security at that facility.

Carothers said there is an obligation to protect the public, asking why wait for something to happen. He added it's up to

Progressive Conservatives work to get over week of turmoil

By Bill Rea

Last week was not an easy time for Ontario's Progressive Conservatives. In fact, Dufferin-Caledon MPP Sylvia Jones confirmed Saturday she was glad the week was over.

Things got rough for the party last Wednesday night, in the face of reports of allegations of sexual misconduct that had been launched against party Leader Patrick Brown.

That was followed a couple of days later when Party President Rick Dykstra resigned. Brown, at first, had asserted he would not resign, but changed his mind early the following morning and announced he was leaving his position, and Jones announced she concurred with the decision. "In the interest of the Ontario PC Party, we unanimously agree that Mr. Brown cannot continue serving as the Leader," Jones said in a statement she jointly released with fellow deputy PC Leader Steve Clark last Thursday morning. It was reported that two women had alleged serious sexual misconduct. One of the alleged incidents took more than 10 years ago, and the other apparently was more recent.

According to media reports, one of the women, who was in her teens and still in high school at the time, said that while Brown was a Barrie city councillor he asked her to perform oral sex on him. The other woman said she served in Brown's constituency office while he was an MP. She said Brown tried to aggressively kiss her without permission while she was drunk.

Brown initially "categorically" denied the allegations, but issued a statement a couple of hours later announcing he was stepping down.

"Mr. Brown is entitled to a legal defence and due process, but he cannot lead us into an election as a result of these allegations," the statement from Jones and Clark added. "The Ontario PC Party unequivocally upholds the principle that a safe and respectful society is what we expect and deserve. We need to move forward to eradicate sexual violence and harassment across the province."

"We were shocked," Jones told a press conference that she and Clark held early last Thursday afternoon, as she asserted that allegations such as this must be taken seriously.

"These women deserve to be heard," she declared.

Jones said Saturday there was a conference call last Wednesday night involving Brown and several members of the Tory Caucus.

"I have not spoken to him since," she said.

She also said all the Caucus members involved in the call agreed that Jones and Clark had to go to Queen's Park the following day and face the media.

She thought that media conference did generally go well,

"We needed to show that we were united behind the need for Mr. Brown to resign," she said. "It wasn't a pleasant situation."

"I'm not sure how much more quickly we could have reacted," Jones said, pointing out they held the conference call that had called for the resignation that night.

"At the end of the conference call, there was no doubt what had to happen," she added. "Mr. Brown had to stepdown."

Jones also maintained that Brown has been treated fairly in this situation. She said politicians and public figures must be held to a higher standard of behaviour. "That has happened," she said.

Nipissing MPP Vic Fedeli was unanimously named interim leader Friday, and the party is planning to go through a process to pick a new leader before the general election, planned for June.

Jones said the new permanent leader will be in place by the end of March.

While Fedeli was eligible to seek the position, he announced Tuesday he will not be running. According to published reports, he is more interested in looking to "root out any rot" in the party.

Jones is also eligible to seek the leadership, but she asserted Saturday she will not.

"I love what I do as a Member representing Dufferin-Caledon," she commented, adding she's worked for two party leaders and has seen the commitments that take away from their time in the community. She said she doesn't want her attention diverted like that.

Jones also said she's confident the party has a chance to recover in time for the coming election. She expects people will take an added interest in what the party is offering as an alternative.

Jones also believes the party has a chance of forming the next government, "if we do it right, if we stay united."

"If people are willing to move together as a team and present themselves as a team, then we win," she added.

Dufferin-Caledon Progressive Conservative Riding Association President Wayne Innis said he had mixed feeling about this affair, pointing out there were many ways for the party to proceed to pick a new leader.

"They picked a way, and I hope it all works out," he said Monday.

Innis also expressed the feeling that Caucus acted hastily in forcing Brown out, believing it would have been better to step back and wait a day or two.

"It seems to be the way of the new world," he added.

"There's no doubt I was clearly shocked to hear these very serious allegations," commented Bob Gordanier, who will be the Liberal candidate in Dufferin-Caledon in the coming election, adding he was glad to see the PCs took action.

"What is there to say?" observed Dufferin-Caledon Green Party candidate Laura Campbell.

She said it was unfortunate the party didn't do a better job of vetting its leader, although she thought there's still a lot of time to find a new one.

Session coming on getting EI

What are people to do when they find they need Employment Insurance (EI)?

Those who have questions about EI will want to take in a presentation Jobs Caledon at Caledon Community Services (CCS) is hosting. It's going to be entitled What To Do When you Need EI!, with special guest Service Canada's Milan Aryal. It will be this coming Wednesday (Feb. 7) from 10 a.m. to noon.

This workshop will help job seekers and citizens understand the types of employment insurance, how to avoid EI fraud, rights and responsibilities, and other government of Canada services.

With more than 13 years of experience serving as an EI call centre agent, a citizen services officer, and now as a community outreach and liaison services officer, Aryal offers valuable information to help people learn how to access the services they need.

"Service Canada provides a wide range of federal programs and services to seniors, workers, newcomers, youth and persons with disabilities," Aryal said. "Learning about these services is helpful for anyone."

150 years of library service marked in Caledon

By Bill Rea

There has been some form of library service available in what is today known as Caledon continuously for 150 years, and a year of celebrating has started.

It began Saturday, as the Albi-on-Bolton branch hosted a kickoff event, as well as Family Literacy Day celebrations.

“I think you’d all agree that we’ve held up pretty well for our age,” Chief Librarian and CEO Colleen Lipp joked.

She added there have two constants over that time. Literacy remains at the core of what a library does, along with the support of life-long learning. She observed social media is often the first source of information and “fake news,” but she pointed out “a library can help you find the right answer.”

The other constant is libraries always represent equal access.

“We are the people’s university,” she declared, adding the growth of the internet has increased that access.

Library access in this area started in 1868 when the Bolton Mechanics Institute opened. Lipp thought people in 1868 would have been astonished with the way things have progressed since then, and she also thought they would have been pleased.

“It’s really a non-stop celebration,” she added.

Janet Manning, chair of the Caledon Public Library Board, observed that the milestone speaks to the support the library has received over the years.

“The library’s the place to be, and all for free,” she remarked, also looking to the future. “We look forward to the changes the next few years will bring for Caledon.”

Manning also expressed thanks to Lipp and her staff for the work they did for the celebration, and for the events that will be taking place in the coming year.

Mayor Allan Thompson offered his congratulations for “150 years of opening the world to people.”

“One hundred and fifty years later, you’re still opening the world to everybody,” he added.

“Thanks you for the job you’ve done over the last 150 years,” he added. “The biggest law of nature is adapting to change, and the library’s done that.”

Megan Renkema, manager of information services for Caledon Public Library, handing out copies of Bellevue Square by Toronto author Michael Redhill, which will be the subject of One Book One Caledon. She is seen presenting Dufferin-Caledon MP David Tilson with his copy.

“The one thing that’s not changed is the constant need to change,” Lipp added.

Dufferin-Caledon MPP Sylvia Jones, mother of two, said it used to be a big family outing to go to the library, explore and follow their passions. “I have a special love for libraries,” she said, as she stressed the need to address changing needs and wants in the community.

The occasion also saw the launch of the One Book One Caledon campaign.

Manager of Information Services Megan Renkema unveiled the book that will be read throughout the community; Bellevue Square, by Toronto resident Michael Redhill. The book is about a woman in Toronto who has a doppelgänger (a double) and she becomes obsessed with finding her.

Renkema handed out copies of the book to dignitaries who were on hand Saturday, urging them to read it and then pass it on.

“The books are not theirs to keep,” she said. “Let’s get as many people as we can participating in this shared reading experience.”

Every child has a future waiting to emerge. A passion ready to ignite. We offer the possibilities that make it happen. A place where they are known, supported and inspired. Track shoes, theatrical costumes, or robotics code? A song, a goal, or a speech? With us, students discover themselves. They find big, dreamy answers to the most important question of all:

Prevent accidents and reduce frustration with safety and winter driving etiquette tips

Winter driving is well underway, with unpredictable weather, slippery, daunting roads and slow, frustrating drives. Canadian Automobile Association South Central Ontario (CAA SCO) is asking motorists to bring their “Eh! Game” for the rest of the winter season, when it comes to the behaviours and attitudes that help make roads safer.

“As drivers, we often assume that we are doing all we can to be courteous and safe on the road, yet the perception that other drivers are not following suit, seems to persist,” Kaitlynn Furse, manager of public relations, for CAA SCO, commented. “As Canadians, tackling winter driving means being considerate, practising safety and patience, and treating fellow drivers as we each need to be treated on the road.”

CAA SCO shares the following “Eh! Game” winter driving etiquette tips:

- Remove snow and ice: Always thoroughly clean your vehicle to avoid ice hazards and blowing snow that can reduce visibility and safety for other drivers.
- “No, please, after you!”: Allow others to change lanes ahead of you. Letting a fellow driver to merge can help the flow of traffic for everyone on a cold and stressful winter day.

- Protect others’ personal space: Leave plenty of space between you and the vehicle ahead to give you time to react to any changes in traffic flow, such as unexpected, quick stops and movements.
- Adjust to Canadian winter drive time: Leave extra time to get to destinations safely by planning ahead when poor weather is expected. Checking weather reports and readjusting morning routines and evening commutes to avoid being rushed leads to better overall driving behaviour.
- The rearview window wave: Extend a friendly gesture to others to express gratitude for their acts of courtesy and then pay it forward.
- Respect Old Man Winter: Always stay focused and drive accordingly. That may mean adjusting your speed when necessary. Focus on driving to avoid being surprised by changes in another driver’s movements or road or traffic conditions.

Toronto Police Sergeant Brett Moore observed the posted speed limit doesn’t apply to winter weather, and that motorists should drive according to conditions.

“When you don’t leave enough space and distance in front of your car, and you lose traction, there’s no worse feeling in the world then when you know you can’t control your vehicle, and that’s when you’re a danger to everybody else,” he said.

OPP Sergeant Kerry Schmidt said that people who are driving and see flashing lights on the road, must slow down and move over.

“When you are passing that area, there may be people walking about, there may be debris on the ground, and it may be extra slippery,” Schmidt observed. “So please slow down, drive safely, be aware of your surroundings, and remember your actions will ensure that all emergency workers will be able to get home safely.”

CAA SCO recently conducted a survey of members that looked at the perceptions and behaviours of drivers during the winter. Some key findings include:

- Members on average grade themselves with an A- for their winter driving abilities and grade others with a C+.
- Top weather conditions that worry members the most are freezing rain (94 per cent), black ice (94 per cent), blizzards (87 per cent) and more than a few inches of snow (68 per cent).
- Two-thirds of members surveyed have winter tires for their vehicle, while 82 per cent of those who do not have winter tires have no intention of purchasing them.
- Fifty-six per cent have winter safety kits in their cars.

Excessive speeding carries some heavy penalties

A 41-year-old man from Scarborough is facing stunt-driving charges after Caledon OPP clocked a minivan going 153 km-h in a posted 80 zone last Tuesday.

Police report an officer from the Traffic Unit was conducting radar enforcement on Highway 10, near Highpoint Sideroad at about 5:30 p.m and spotted a grey 2007 Honda Odyssey going excessively fast.

Upon pulling the vehicle over, the officer discovered eight occupants inside the minivan. The man was charged with racing a motor vehicle. He received a seven-day licence suspension and his vehicle was seized for seven days as a result of the stunt driving charge.

Police stated officers throughout the province are confronted every day with drivers who put their safety and the safety of their passengers at risk, not to mention other innocent motorists and road users. Caledon OPP would like to remind motorists that an essential part of the enforcement job is to save lives and reduce injuries on roadways.

What are the penalties from driving 50 km-h over the speed limit?

The pre-conviction sanctions include an immediate seven-day licence suspension and seven-day vehicle impoundment.

Upon conviction, a driver faces a fine of between $2,000 and $10,000, six demerit points, up to six months jail, and up to a two-year licence suspension for the first offence. The penalty for a second offence could include a licence suspension of up to 10 years within 10 years of first conviction.

Highlights during Black History Month

These exhibitions are running until Apr. 15.

Black Enslavement in Upper Canada — Most people don’t realize that black enslavement existed here in Canada, but it did from the 1600s until it was abolished in 1834. This exhibition, presented in partnership with the Archives of Ontario, explores some untold stories that are important to understanding not just of the past, but also of today.

The Black Community in Peel in the Late 19th Century — This small exhibition shares some of the results of our ongoing research into the history of black residents of Peel in the 1800s. To date, research has tended to raise more questions than answers. But they are essential questions to ask, to better understand local history and communities.

Buddy Holly Dance Party coming to the Orangeville Opera House

By Constance Scrafield

Said Bill Culp of his upcoming show at the Orangeville Opera House, “This is more than just a concert. Buddy Holly has been one of our best and long running shows. It is the 1959 date of the Buddy Holly final concert. Jeff Giles starred in the official Buddy Holly movie.”

Buddy Holly’s Rockin’ Dance Party is coming to the Opera House for a matinee performance Feb. 4 at 3 p.m.

“In this show, (Jeff Giles as) Buddy performs all the big Buddy hits,” Culp added. “We also took music from the big bopper ‘50s songs. There’s audience interaction — fun — musically reminiscent.”

Buddy brings his band too: Bruce Tour-nay on piano, Kim Lade on bass, Gary Co-zocar — they put on a good show.

“There are several elements why these shows are so popular,” Culp said about the enduring success of these shows. “This is great music with certain characteristics that you don’t hear in modern day: melody and passion. These shows are a pretty easy way to have an affordable entertainment.”

He talked about the romance of the shows, their historical ties and “there’s an element of nostalgia. We mention that in our shows as well — the music and the stories about a bygone era. A certain amount of young people come out with their families to expose their kids to hear the music they liked in their youth.”

“I’ve been doing this my whole life,” he continued. “My first gig was when I was seven years. I was in a talent contest at the local high school and I won $2 first prize, singing a duet with my cousin. We sang Raindrops Keep Falling on my Head, dressed up as cowboys.”

“My grandfather played the guitar and harmonica,” he added. “I remember many nights around the camp fire — my uncles played too.”

Growing up in a little town, wanting something to do, “I signed for guitar lessons. My parents made me pay for the first 10.”

“In high school, I formed a punk rock band, we called the Problem Children,” he recalled. “We went on to make several albums — toured all over the world. They stayed together for well over 10 years.”

In college, he joined a rock band, Ricky and Rubbles.

“They had costumes, choreography, rockabilly, everything,” he said. “I met them in college and joined the band. When Ricky left, I became the front man.”

“My career took off from there as a full-time musician,” he continued. “I did theatre as well — community theatre. Then I did movie voice overs.”

“My productions all combine acting with the music,” Culp observed. “My production company really specializes in doing these kind of shows. So, we make sure we do a good job — nice scripts — usually, perform the songs very true to their form. It’s a lot of work, but I think audiences know quality of the shows they’re going to.”

“People should come and see Buddy Holly — they’re going to get a great show — high energy, fun and thoroughly entertaining!” he declared.

Buddy Holly’s Rockin’ Dance Party is Feb. 4 at 3 p.m. at the Opera House. For tickets, go to the Opera House at 87 Broadway; call 519-942-3423 or go online at www.OrangevilleTix.ca

Accessibility = Good Business

Nominations are now open for Caledon's first ever Accessibility Award for Businesses.

It is presented once a year to an organization or business in Caledon that has shown a concerted effort to improve accessibility. Improved accessibility can mean either physical alterations or new programs or features that reduce barriers and permit greater access to services for those with disabilities.

Established by the Accessibility Advisory Committee and supported by Council, the Accessibility Award recognizes an organization or business for its efforts to comply with the Integrated Accessibility Standards Regulations of the AODA. By recognizing an organization or business, the hope is for others to be encouraged to make accessibility improvements for their patrons. The Accessibility Award is presented at a meeting of Council in recognition of National Access Awareness Week. The recipients are also recognized on the Town's website and through traditional and social media announcements.

Representatives of 100 Women Who Care Caledon were at Bethell Hospice in Inglewood recently to present this cheque for $8,200, raised by the 100 Women at their last gathering in November. Kaitlan Klein, Karen McDonald and Michele Newton presented the cheque to Hospice Executive Director Nazira Jaffer, Foundation Board Chair Debbie Davis and Director of Development Jeannette Vanden Heuvel.

Bethell Hospice Foundation the latest to benefit from 100 Women Who Care

By Jasen Obermeyer

Bethell Hospice Foundation in Caledon benefitted from the efforts of 100 Women Who Care Caledon.

The women gathered for their fourth and final meeting of the year in November at Caledon Ski Club. The organization, with around 115 members, completed their first year, and successfully raised about $29,000 in just four meetings lasting a total of four hours.

Michele Newton, one of the co-founders, said the number of members and money raised surpassed her expectations.

Participants were able to nominate an organization ahead of time, with three randomly drawn. Each participant pledged $100 to contribute. The nominators were given five minutes to make their pitch to those in attendance.

Debbie Davis spoke on behalf of Bethell Hospice, which has a 10-bed residential facility in Inglewood, and provides care for people facing a life limiting illness, as well as supports for their families.

She said they are required to raise 40 per cent of their funding, roughly $1-million annually, themselves. “So we don’t have a lot of money left over at the end of the year for extra services that we would like to provide for our clients and their families,” she observed.

Davis said they would like to provide those extra services, which are focus programs for families, and art therapy, which she commented helps “stimulate the imagination to express grief in alternative ways.”

She said both programs would be available to anyone, and participants will engage in therapeutic-activity-based arts and craft projects.

“The objective is to increase their wellness and sense of well being after experiencing a loss,” she said, adding a trained art therapist would run the program.

The recent meeting raised a total of $8,200 in an hour.

The other nominees were Habitat for Humanity (HFH) and the Youthdale Riding Program.

Heather Kendall spoke for HFH, discussing how over the summer, Caledon received the first ever HFH building, which has 10 townhouses.

She said donations help maintain the building. “Families will find stability, safety, and a sense of community,” she observed.

Soaring real estate prices and serious affordable housing shortages in the GTA, mean 43 per cent of renter households spend 30 per cent of their income on rent, Kendall said. “This prevents them from building equity to buy a home in the future.”

Helen Meek-Hickey spoke on behalf of Youthdale, saying they provide therapeutic horseback riding for at risk youth from ages 12 to 21, as horses “just give back” and don’t judge the young people.

Meek-Hickey said they need donations to deal with the fees for horses, as they have eight currently, each costing approximately $10,000 a year.

She explained many of the youth come from dysfunctional homes, deal with violence, abuse and self-harm. “Their coping strategies have been to act out, run away, and shutdown,” she said. “They don’t see themselves as fitting in.”

She said they help roughly 65 to 75 youth yearly, and they find an emotional connection and partnership with the horses, to build on their confidence and success through dealing and caring for them.

Progressive Conservatives’ ‘chaos’ a blessing in disguise?

The shocking, unexpected departure of Patrick Brown as leader of Ontario’s Official Opposition party, the Progressive Conservatives, may well turn out to be a blessing in disguise.

Although in its immediate aftermath the party seemed to be in chaos, with the resignations or ouster of some top PC officials, the party does have an interim leader with all the needed credentials (including some Brown lacked) in Nipissing MPP Vic Fedeli, who until Tuesday seemed to be the one likely to lead the party into the provincial election in June.

As we see it, much will depend on both the timing and the method employed when the party goes about choosing a permanent leader.

Ideally, the leadership convention should be no later than mid-March, and the party should adopt procedures similar to those employed historically rather than the ones used when Brown upset the highly favoured Christine Elliott, widow of former federal finance minister Jim Flaherty.

Historically, party leaders were chosen at conventions by delegates selected by local riding associations — a simple process that would fit neatly in a two-month-long timetable.

In 2015, Brown won the leadership by having his campaign team sign up thousands of “instant” party members, the result being that even today a substantial portion of the reported 20,000 PC members likely have had no long-term affiliation with the party.

Fedeli, 61, obviously has a lot of support in the party caucus, his election as interim leader having been unanimous and without the usual prohibition against seeking the permanent leadership.

His remarks following his election Friday suggest that he had long been considering the position the party should take, but Tuesday he said he won’t be a candidate for permanent leader.

He stressed Friday the need for swift action.

“I am prepared to lead this Party moving forward. We need to focus immediately on Kathleen Wynne and the Liberals. There’s no time to waste,” he said.

“The days, weeks, and months ahead will not be easy. But, I’m confident that as a team we can, and will, bring the change Ontario needs, change that renews Ontario’s status as the best place in Canada to live, work and raise a family.”

No one knows how many candidates will seek to become the odds-on favourite to replace Kathleen Wynn. But one for sure is Doug Ford, brother of the late Rob Ford.

As we see it, the March convention should select both a leader and a platform for the June election. If that happens and Ford emerges as winner, there’s little doubt that we’ll see some similarities to the last U.S. presidential election.

Ford said Monday he was running because “I can’t watch the party I love fall into the hands of the elites,” adding: “The elites have shut the door on the grassroots, the foundation of our party. Our party cannot go without a tested leader in this crucial time. If we lose this election, I don’t know how the average people in Ontario will recover.”

The former Toronto city councillor and mayoralty candidate said he would give a voice to people who have been ignored and are “suffocating” under “high taxes and big government.”

In view of the fact the Liberals have been in power for 14 years and are back in office at Ottawa, the Tories will be heavy favourites to win a substantial majority of seats. However, a lot will depend on how far right-of-centre both the party and its leaders are seen to be.

It would certainly be both interesting and unprecedented if the winner turned out to be Christine Elliott or Caroline Mulroney, daughter of former prime minister Brian Mulroney, and all three major parties in Ontario had women at the helm.

Some retirement project

I admit this effort is almost desperate. I have to write about something in this space this week, and I refuse to give any more ink than necessary to the political turmoil that seems to be all over us. So there’s going to be no more mention in this piece about Patrick Brown or Premier Kathleen Wynne’s recent cabinet shuffle, which I essentially took to mean we’re going to have to wait even longer to find out what’s going on with the GTA West Corridor (not surprised). I could mention Donald Trump. I just did, and that’s one mention too many.

But one news item that caught my attention in the last couple of days was the announcement that Elton John will be launching his Farewell Yellow Brick Road tour. It’s going to be his last tour, and will take three years and include some 300 concerts. Not a bad pre-retirement project. Good for him!

I don’t think there’s any doubt it will be a success. The man has been doing these things for some 50 years, and he has a lot to show for it. He’s also 70 (I was a bit surprised when I read how old he was — I had assumed he was younger), meaning he’s entitled to retire if he wants to and focus on other things. He can presumably afford it. He has obviously made a lot of money over the years, and unlike a lot of people in his situation, it looks like he’s been able to hold on to a lot of it. And one would expect that 300 concerts over the next three years will mean a lot more money coming his way. It’s almost like a retirement bonus. Good for him!

The man has an enormous fan base, which he has built up over five decades. Although I have always liked several of his songs, I have never been a major fan of his. But the same can be said for any other musician.

I do love music, and have since my youth. But it’s the individual piece that attracts me, not so much the person who’s responsible for it, or who performs it. Thus, when it comes to my favourite musicians, composers, performers, etc., my list is pretty eclectic. The Beatles are well represented, naturally, as is Cat Stevens, Gordon Lightfoot and a few others. Starland Vocal Band is also on the list (I’ve always enjoyed listening to Afternoon Delight), and Don McLean’s American Pie will never leave it. And yes, Elton John has a few offerings on my favourite play list.

I just read over that last paragraph, and realized I’ve really been showing my age. Well, if Elton John’s entitled to, then so am I.

And like all people in the public eye, he’s been open to criticism over the last many years, but as the saying goes, “that is the price of fame.”

There have been times when I have thought ill of him, although the nice thing about the passage of time is it gives all a chance to rethink.

He performed at Princess Diana’s funeral in 1997, re-writing his hit Candle in the Wind, which had originally been a tribute to Marilyn Monroe, and focusing it on the late Princess.

We must all remember that feelings were running very high in those days, with some people facing threats of violence if they dared speak a negative word about Diana, and the Royal Family taking a major trashing, which I have always believed was not deserved, and I still believe it. I was in that cynical group at the time that thought Elton John was cashing in on a tragedy, while trying to make some kind of statement. I regret those thoughts today, as I have come to realize he was only trying to use his God-given talents to pay tribute to someone who was special to him.

After more than 20 years, I can admire the love and devotion that was represented by the act that was performed before the world the day of Diana’s funeral. Good for him!

So at 70, the man has found a way to keep himself busy and occupied for the next three years, doing work he obviously loves (he wouldn’t have been nearly as successful as he’s been had he not loved what he was doing). He’s going to make a lot of people happy, make some money for himself, and possibly make some history. The guy is going to go out from his career on his own terms.

Good for him!

Our Readers Write Complete EA on Corridor

The following open letter, addressed to Transportation Minister Kathryn McGarry from Dufferin-Caledon MPP Sylvia Jones, was submitted to the Citizen for publication.

As you are no doubt aware, on Nov. 27, 2017, your predecessor Steven Del Duca announced that the expert advisory panel on the GTA West Highway Corridor had submitted its report to the Ministry and that there would be an update on the future of the GTA West Corridor within 60 days.

Jan. 29 marked 63 days since your 60-day commitment. Yet there has not been any notice from your Ministry on the future of this crucial project.

Your Ministry has been studying GTA West since 2007, and according to my Freedom of Information request, has spent over $14.5 million. Despite nearly a decade of study and millions of taxpayer dollars spent, you have failed to provide the promised answer.

The Progressive Conservative Caucus and I have been steadfast that the GTA West Corridor deserves a complete environmental assessment. We recognize that landowners and municipalities have been unable to plan for years. Frankly, further delay is irresponsible and unacceptable.

I ask that you immediately resolve this broken promise, and complete the environmental assessment of the GTA West Corridor.

Sincerely,
Sylvia Jones MPP,

New restrictions on Canada Summer Jobs program

Canada Summer Jobs has largely been a successful program which supplies employers with subsidies to assist them in creating summer employment opportunities for secondary and post-secondary students.

It's a program which has benefitted thousands of young Canadians, including youth right here in Dufferin-Caledon. Unfortunately, the current Liberal government made changes to the 2018 program that now potentially excludes organizations from accessing funding.

The Canada Summer Jobs program has existed for a number of years. Funding is supplied to not-for-profit organizations, public-sector employers and small businesses with 50 or less full-time employees to provide summer job opportunities for secondary and post-secondary students. Canadian youth benefit from valuable work experience, increased skills, and money to help with their post-secondary education. The program is also intended to help communities across Canada act on local priorities. The experiences gained assist Canadian youth in making the leap from school to careers in the competitive Canadian job market. It's a program I've been supportive of and I've been fortunate enough to see, firsthand, the positive impact it has for both our community's youth and local employers.

OTTAWA JOURNAL

David Tilson
MP Dufferin-Caledon

Unfortunately, the current Liberal government changed the rules around which employers can qualify for funding to hire students for the 2018 Canada Summer Jobs program. This year's program requires organizations to sign an attestation stating that their organization's core mandate respects individual human rights in Canada, including the values underlying the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, as well as other rights, including reproductive rights and the right to be free from discrimination on the basis of sex, religion, race, national or ethnic origin, colour, mental or physical disability, sexual orientation, or gender identity or expression. This is problematic because requiring organizations to attest that this is their organization's "core mandate" would force many organizations to choose between their freedoms of belief and of expression, and being able to receive federal funding. Such a requirement discriminates against organizations based on their beliefs.

We, the Official Opposition, were deeply troubled when the current Liberal government announced the changes to the 2018 Canada Summer Jobs program. The right to freedom of belief and opinion is guaranteed by Canada's Charter of Rights and Freedoms and Canadians should be very concerned that the government of Canada is basing funding decisions on whether or not you hold a certain belief. We are concerned for the students who won't find work as a result of this decision. We are also concerned that individuals who hold private convictions may, for example, no longer be able to help care for the disabled, refugees or provide day camps for children in need.

We will continue to push for the current Liberal government to roll back these requirements and restore the Canada Summer Jobs program to its former successful state and will permit all Canadians to continue to exercise their freedom of belief and of expression without facing institutionalized discrimination by the government of Canada.

A week is a lifetime in politics

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson said, "A week is a long time in politics."

In today's world of social media, I think you could update that to add, a day is a lifetime. Last week I, together with my colleagues, learned of some very disturbing allegations about Patrick Brown.

That same evening, the PC team of Members of Provincial Parliament unanimously agreed that Brown step down immediately. It was the right thing for him to do. As I said last week, while Brown has the right to defend against these allegations (and he has said he intends to), he must do it as a private citizen, not while serving as the Leader of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party. Some have criticized our decision because Brown has not had the opportunity for due process, but I respectfully disagree.

Individuals who choose to serve, whether leading businesses, organizations or political parties, are held to a higher standard. And frankly, they should be. There are many reasons why we choose to buy from a particular business, donate to a charitable organization or vote for a political representative. Think about who you choose to do do business with, which charities you decide to donate or volunteer with.

FROM QUEEN'S PARK
Sylvia Jones
MPP Dufferin-Caledon

Are you swayed by how a business owner participates in our community? Has a particularity persuasive speech you have heard from a leader of a charity influenced your decision about giving a donation or volunteering your time? Mine has. It is no different for political representatives.

I am reminded of an answer Perrin Beatty (who served our community as the Federal Conservative Member of Parliament for 21 years) gave when asked, "How can I vote for you when I don't know how you will vote on legislation?" Twenty plus years later, I think his answer was right on. To paraphrase, what Perrin said, "I don't know all of the issues I will deal with, or will have to vote on in a term of government. Ultimately, as a voter, you have to decide which of the representatives asking for your vote most closely aligns with your values, and trust their judgement."

The Progressive Conservative Caucus asked Brown to step aside last Wednesday night so that our party could move forward and choose a leader to take us into the June general election. We have to move quickly to show that we are ready, as a united party, to show the people of Ontario we can defeat the current government with people and policies that will make Ontario stronger. I believe we have done that.

As is our responsibility, as defined by the Progressive Conservative constitution, our caucus asked Vic Fedeli to serve as the Interim Leader. It was a unanimous decision. Vic has served as the MPP for North Bay and PC Finance Critic. I am confident he will do an excellent job.

The Ontario PC Executive has a legal responsibility to choose the date and set the rules to hold a leadership race that all members of the Ontario PC Party can participate in. The constitution is very specific in the need to set a date for a leadership election no later than 18 months from a vacancy in the position. Decisions will be made in the coming days, but what we know right now, is the election for leader will happen no later than March 24.

Are the timelines tight? Absolutely, but the interest is high from the members of the party, as well as the Ontario public that we have a leader and team in place to defeat the Liberals in general election, and I intend to assist in every way possible to make that a reality.

This was not a decision the PC MPPs or I took lightly. It was a decision made in accordance with the Party's constitution and the need to ensure that the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party is ready to form government June 7, 2018.

The provincial election is coming; Are you ready?

By David Arbuckle
General Manager
Strategic Initiatives
Town of Caledon

Caledon residents and voters from across this province will be heading to the polls June 7 to decide which party will form the next government of Ontario.

Through the history of this province, the government has played an active role in transforming the climate in which local businesses must operate. Whether it is business taxes, employment wages, environmental or public health regulations or land development, previous governments have had, and future governments will have, a lot to say about how businesses do their business.

There is a commonly held expression in politics that, "Businesses don't vote. People do."

For the most part, this statement is true. But it mostly ignores the very important role that business owners can play in any particular election. So as a business owner, what can you do leading up to the provincial election?

Here are three simple steps any business can take to have impact.

1 — Learn: Knowledge is power and the first and most powerful step for any business or resident to take is education. Over the next few months, all political parties will be releasing their election platforms. In fact, the Progressive Conservatives have already released their platform, entitled the People's Guarantee.

As these platforms are released, take the time to look through them for the items that are going to have the most significant impact, either positive or negative, on your business. Also, look for those things not in their platforms that might help your business thrive in Caledon.

Business organizations, such as the Ontario Chamber of Commerce and the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, can also be an important resource in understanding the potential impact of specific platform "promises."

2 — Engage: There will be no shortage of opportunities for you to engage with Dufferin-Caledon candidates. Take the time this election period to interact with those that are seeking to represent Caledon at Queen's Park. Ask questions, seek explanations, put your ideas forward. The more candidates hear from you and your business, the more they will better understand the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead over their next four years in office as your Member of Provincial Parliament.

3 — Hold Them to Account: Election platforms should not be just promises made and then forgotten once the winning party assumes office. They should act as a road map to making Ontario and its communities better places for residents and businesses.

Staying engaged with your local MPP and highlighting the needs of your business, not just during the lead up to the election, but also during their four years in office, can go a long way toward realizing the changes you need to make your business a success.

As a Caledon business owner, your voice can be a valuable resource to help educate and influence with the goal of positively impacting your business.

Golden Hawks draw Huntsville in first round of PJHL playoffs

By Jake Courtepatte

Wrapping up their best season to date Sunday, the Caledon Golden Hawks enter the Provincial Junior Hockey League post-season with high hopes.

With eight wins in 11 games since the turn of the calendar, the junior C club made a rapid climb up the Carruthers division standings to earn a third-place finish, and a meeting with the Huntsville Otters in the best-of-seven first round series.

Both teams got a good look at each other Friday in the second-to-last game on the Caledon schedule, with the Hawks coming out on the wrong end of a 5-3 score.

Eighteen-year old Ethan Olenchuk got his second look between the pipes after a strong showing in a win over the powerhouse Alliston Hornets in his debut. The new Hawk was impressive in stopping 24 pucks, but ultimately fell short after a late-game rally was ended with an empty net goal.

Matt Magliozzi, Dante Zucarro and Sean Nottle found the back of the net for Caledon.

The final game of the season saw the return of the explosive offence that has marked Caledon's successful season, downing the Penetang Kings 8-4 to secure third place.

Zucarro had a two-goal night for the Hawks, the defenceman finding his offensive stride lately with a three-game point streak. Olenchuk returned to the net for his third straight start, chasing away 25 pucks in a winning effort, to finalize the first round date with the Otters.

The Otters, who spent the majority of the season occupying one of the bottom two spots in Carruthers division standings, won three of their final four games to move ahead of the Schomberg Cougars for sixth in the division.

The season series between the Hawks and Otters ended in a 3-2 decision for Caledon, who won the first three meetings of the season before dropping the final two.

With the first round set to kick off Sunday in Caledon East, it will mark the first time in the team's eight-year history they will hold home ice advantage. Finishing third in the division with a record of 23-17-2-0, the 2018-18 season was the most successful campaign for the franchise to date.

Sunday's game time is set for 7 p.m., before the action moves to Huntsville for game two Wednesday.

Caledon will host game three next Friday, and if necessary, will also host games five and seven.

Elsewhere around the division, the first-place Stayner Siskins will battle with the last-place Orillia Terriers, the Alliston Hornets clash with the Cougars, and Penetang will meet the Midland Flyers.

Granite glory realized on local curling sheets

By Shellee Morning
King Curling Club

The outside sheets (1 and 4) resulted in some extreme performances and high scoring games on both draws of the Wednesday league, consequently displaying some very lopsided scoreboards.

Up until this past week, Sandee Fennel; member of the league, reported that most games had been very close this season with the deciding point being left to the skills of the skips and their meticulousness shot making. Do the rocks have GPS navigating systems inside? Some may think so as a way of explaining the heavy one-sided scoring.

Sheet 4 featured the teams of Rhind and Sinclair, both of which are more than capable of winning due to the strategic play of their skips Wayne Rhind and Thomas Sinclair. Sinclair has been on the winning side of league champion earlier this season (Sunday Social League) and Rhind too has had experience with eminent championship style of play. Both know what it takes to hoist the trophy and what it means to earn the title.

Rhind tied for third and Sinclair just two points back, were about to hold nothing back in this game of match-ups. Rhind, seemingly in control with a 5-0 lead after three ends, didn't feel sorry for his opponent as with each end he applied pressure and created the most difficult of shot for Sinclair, who was scrambling to find a point. Sinclair called for his team's support to pursue points, and more than once "just missed" by mere centimeters. During the fourth, Sinclair and his team of Jim Power, Lisa Hutchinson and Roger Sinclair successfully set the house up after a rare miss by Rhind for the tricky "in-off" shot to the button for the point. The level of difficulty for this shot ranks right up there with the triples and run-backs, and Sinclair manufactured a beauty for the point. The Skipper would only be able to achieve one more for the count as Team Rhind tightened the grip and headed for the 7-2 victory.

Karl Petersen and his crew of Dean Teasdale, Lloy Bloom and Norma Jean Frans played against Fausto Mussato and his company of Shelley Courneya, Kim Koteff and Sharon Dorney on Sheet 1. Petersen collected one in the opening frame then rebounded with a steal of three in the second for the 4-0 lead. Mussato re-grouped for a single, changing the board for a 4-1 tally and remain in the hunt. Petersen would allow Mussato only one more and closed out the contest 7-2.

There would be one other lopsided draw that night between Team Schneider and Team Kolb.

The happy-go-lucky group of Kolb struggled from the get-go as Skip Jakob Schneider brilliantly guided his squad of Ginny Ross, Rick Yates and Cameron Ross towards their 8-1 triumph. Skip David Kolb and the husband and wife team of Robert and Patricia Lostracco along with Pat Earl will always be found with smiles on their faces and just plain happy for the opportunity to play. The Kolb team's upbeat personalities are always a pleasure to play with and will no doubt turn the tables in their match.
