Black History will be celebrated Friday night

By Bill Rea

Black History Month is into its last week, and it's going to be celebrated tomorrow (Friday) night.

The celebration is planned for North Peel Community Church in Sandhill, and representatives of the church where at Tuesday's Caledon Council meeting to extend invitation. The celebration will start at 7:30 p.m.

Rev. Ron Kelly acknowledge the Town had issued a Black History Month proclamation, which noted the theme of this year's observances is "Black Canadian women: Stories of strength, courage and vision."

Black History Month has been marked in Canada since 1993, which was the 200th anniversary of legislation that prohibited the importation of slaves to Upper Canada. The proclamation also noted that the United Nations proclaimed 2015 to 2024 as the Decade of People of African Descent.

"It's important to recognize that black history is Canadian history," Kelly told councillors, observing the Church has been part of the Caledon community for decades, and has partnered with the Town on various projects. He commented on the importance of reaching into the past during Black History Month, both Prime Minister Justin Trudeau and Premier Kathleen Wynne have observed there are still challenges for black people in Canada. While steps are being taken to address these issues, he said it's important to play a role in addressing them.

day during February, complete with music, food and fun. She added the young people spend time doing research and sharing the knowledge they have gained. They are also being empowered to believe that can be leaders.

The result, she said, has been success in the development of the young people, as they have actively taken part in community events. She added one member of the Church's Youth Group served as a page in the House of Commons. Kevin Junor pointed out both Prime Minister Justin Trudeau and Premier Kathleen Wynne have observed there are still challenges for black people in Canada. While steps are being taken to address these issues, he said it's important to play a role in addressing them.

people they can be successful, "and failure is not an option." Youth Leader Nicole Jeffrey said there have been events held at the church every Friday during February, complete with music, food and fun. She added the young people spend time doing research and sharing the knowledge they have gained. They are also being empowered to believe that can be leaders.

Patrick Brown has support to get leadership back

By Bill Rea

Former Ontario Progressive Conservative Leader Patrick Brown wants his old job back, and he's obviously prepared to fight for it.

Two days after filing papers to enter the leadership race and being kicked out of the PC caucus, Brown addressed a crowd of about 150 people, many of them supporters, Sunday at a banquet room in a hotel near Pearson International Airport.

"Our party is at a crossroads," Hamilton Centre PC candidate Dr. Dionne Duncan told the crowd, stating they have chosen policies that will support the middle class and cut enormous hydro bills. She added Brown is the best leader to delivery that platform to voters. "We will not abandon him right now."

Brown was forced to step down as leader last month, after media reports that two women had alleged serious sexual misconduct. Brown initially "categorically" denied the allegations, but issued a statement a couple of hours later announcing he was resigning.

In the weeks that have passed, he said he has been working hard to clear his name.

He also stressed his humility and sense of purpose for the good of the province, and that it's important the party finish what it had started, which includes defeating Premier Kathleen Wynne "and her disastrous government."

"We have been building this party together, and it is more diverse than it's ever been before," he remarked, adding the work that's been done so far has been vilified without due process.

"It's been devastating, and that's an understatement," Brown declared, adding the last couple of weeks have produced one benefit. "You learn who your true friends are."

Brown asserted the actions he's been accused of could not have happened, adding he's already taken two lie-detector tests, and passed them both.

"When truth is on your side, you have nothing to fear," he remarked.

He also defended the Tories' platform in the coming campaign, known as the People's Guarantee. He said it focuses on commitments to improve the lives of families.

"We can't fight amongst ourselves," he declared, stressing the need to fight for the people of Ontario.

"Our platform was built by you, the grass roots," Brown remarked, pointing out it calls for a 22.5 per cent cut in middle class income taxes, as well as a 75 per cent refund in child-care expenses to make it more affordable, and a trust and integrity guarantee, so all will be able to see how a Brown government does when it comes to keeping what it pledged.

Brown said he was determined to do the job he was elected to do, adding losing another election could tear the party apart. He added thousands of party members had a hand in creating the platform, pointing out they can't ditch what's been developed. He also said they can't make policy on the fly. "That is a recipe for disaster," he said.

Patrick Brown addressed his supporters in Mississauga Sunday.

Peel Public Health warns of possible measles exposures in Brampton

Peel Public Health is investigating a confirmed case of measles in an adult from Brampton who had recently travelled internationally.

And the Region has also reported a confirmed case of measles in an infant from Brampton who also recently travelled internationally.

Anyone who was on Air Canada flight 879, which departed Zurich at 6:25 a.m. and arrived at Toronto Pearson International Airport at 10:27 a.m. Feb. 12, may have been exposed to measles. No other flights or travellers at Pearson are at risk.

In the other case, health authorities are looking for anyone who was in the following places during the times listed may have been exposed to measles. The virus can only live outside the body for up to two hours, so people who visited these locations or used these services at other times are not at risk.

- Feb. 9, Sheridan College Library at the Davis Campus in Brampton from noon to 5 p.m.
- Feb. 9, Brampton Transit, Route 104 Chinguacousy Express, from 4 to 7 p.m.
- Feb. 9, Guardian Sheridan Pharmacy, 373 Steeles Ave. W, from 2 to 5:30 p.m.

Visitors to the identified locations during the times noted should do the following:

"We must deliver on the People's Guarantee so we can defeat Kathleen Wynne on June 7," he added.

"I stand for the people's guarantee, and I do so proudly," he concluded. "You created it and I embraced it."

• Check their immunization records to make sure they and their children have had two doses of the measles vaccine (MMR or MMRV). The children's immunization record (yellow card) or the family doctor can provide this information. Two doses of measles vaccine are recommended for anyone born after 1969.

• Watch for symptoms of measles for 21 days after exposure. These include a high fever; cold-like symptoms (cough/runny nose); sore eyes or sensitivity to light; small spots with a white centre on the inside of the mouth; and a red rash lasting four to seven days.

Do not go to any medical facility without calling in advance and telling them you have been in contact with someone who has measles.

Measles is a highly contagious disease that spreads easily to those who are not immune or are vulnerable. Infants under one year of age, pregnant women and people with weakened immune systems can get very ill with measles. Residents who are travelling internationally should always check their immunization status with their doctor prior to travel.

Residents should visit Peelregion.ca/health for news and alerts about measles. For more information, contact Peel Public Health at 905-799-7700.

Be careful if looking for love online, police warn

Caledon OPP and the Canadian Anti-Fraud Centre (CAFC) remind the public to be wary if they are looking for love online. In 2017, Canadian victims lost over $17 million to scammers pretending to be in love.

A romance scam involves any individual with false romantic intentions toward a victim in order to gain their trust and affection for the purpose of obtaining the victim's money or access to their bank accounts or credit cards. In some cases, the suspect will even attempt to get the victim to commit fraud on their behalf — as a money mule (accepting, then transferring money or goods) often unknowingly. Most romance scams begin via social media sites or online dating sites.

York Regional Police reports receiving three reports recently of frauds involving elements of romance scams. In these incidents, the victims reported being befriended by a man on social media and engaging in frequent conversation. The man would then claim to require financial assistance for some type of crisis or personal or business matter. Once the victim sends an initial small amount of money the suspect increases requests and increases the amounts. Once large sums of money were obtained, the victim could no longer reach the suspect.

In these scams it is important to be aware that suspects will use a number of tactics and schemes to build trust and establish relationships with the victims. These relationships often progress very quickly to an emotional point, where the victim is so invested in the relationship they feel compelled to help when the suspect begins to ask for money.

OPP said there ways for people to protect themselves or loved ones.

- Be suspicious when someone you haven't met in person professes their love to you. Ask yourself, "Would someone I've never met really declare their love after only after a few emails?"
- Be wary when someone you meet on social media wants to quickly move to a private mode of communication (email, text).
- If trying to set up an in-person meeting, be suspicious if they always have an excuse not to meet. If you do actually set up a meeting, tell family and friends when and where you're going and meet in a local, public place.
- Do not share personal (birthdate, address) or financial information with anyone you have only just met online or in person.
- Never send intimate photos or video of yourself. The scammer may try to use these to blackmail you into sending money.
- Be cautious when conversing with an individual that claims to live close to you but is working overseas.
- Never under any circumstance send money for any reason. The scammer will make it seem like an emergency, they may even express distress or anger to make you feel guilty, but do not send money.
- Should you be asked to accept money (e-transfer, cheque) or goods (usually electronics) for you to then transfer or send elsewhere, do not accept to do so. This is usually a form of money laundering which is a criminal offence.
- If you suspect a loved one may be a victim of a romance scam, based on any of the above points, explain the concerns and risks to them and help them get out of the situation.

Investigate

- Do an image search of the admirer to see if their photo has been taken from a stock photo site or someone else's online profile.
- Look for inconsistencies in their online profile versus what they tell you.
- Watch for poorly written, vague messages, sometimes even addressing you by the wrong name — often scammers are working several victims at once.
- If you have transferred money, stop the transaction if possible.

How to respond?

- If you did send money or share financial information, report it to the financial institution used, be it your bank, Western Union, MoneyGram.
- Gather all information pertaining to the situation, including the scammer's profile name, how you made contact, social media screenshots, emails, etc. and contact your local police.
- File a report with the CAFC toll-free at 1-888-495-8501 or online www.antifraudcentre.ca
- Notify the dating website or social media site where you met the scammer. Scammers usually have more than one account. Be pro-active, tell family, friends, coworkers and neighbours about your experience to warn them about romance scams.

The typical victim is between 50 and 59 years of age and 60 per cent are women. They meet the fraudster through social networking or an online forum. In 2017, 1066 scams were reported and it is estimated that only five per cent of all victims report this crime.

Police strongly suggest victims report the incident. If they've sent money or transferred money or goods on behalf of a scammer, the police and financial institutions need to be aware in order to properly investigate, recover stolen funds and/or goods if possible, and work toward preventing further criminal activity.

Reporting romance scams helps fraud authorities to warn other people about current scams, monitor trends and disrupt scams where possible.

Be safe in your search for love, look out for your friends and family, and if it sounds too good to be true, be wary.

Distracted driving charge laid

A 36-year-old man from Milton, who was giving a driving lesson, was charged with using a hand-held communication device while driving.

Caledon OPP reports an officer from the Traffic Unit was conducting distracted driving enforcement Jan. 17 early in the afternoon when he spotted a white 2013 Toyota heading south on Highway 10 approaching King Street. He noticed the driver was holding a cellular phone in his right hand while a passenger was in the front seat.

Local church preparing for reconciliation

Caledon East United Church invites the community to Making Space —Preparing Ourselves for Healing and Reconciliation.

It will be March 3, from 9 a.m. to noon, at the church at 6046 Old Church Rd.

The program will be presented by Rev. Thérèse Samuel, a United Church minister and racial justice educator. She is passionate about creating opportunities for settlers of colour and others to participate fully in reconciliation with Indigenous peoples. She engages in anti-oppression work, and seeks to foster connections across differences.

The effort has been prompted by the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada report from December 2015. Rev. Ross Leckie said all Canadians have been invited to engage in the journey ahead with indigenous, adding the report also had particular recommendations for churches in Canada.

“The outreach committee of Caledon East United Church is taking the lead on this,” he said, adding they will be offering the Kairos Blanket Exercise” in conjunction with St. James Anglican Church early in May. This is an interactive learning experience that teaches the Indigenous rights history other people are rarely taught. Developed in response to the 1996 Report of the Royal Commission on Aboriginal Peoples, which recommended education on Canadian-Indigenous history as one of the key steps to reconciliation, the Blanket Exercise covers more than 500 years of history in a 90-minute participatory workshop.

All are welcome to the March 3 event. Light refreshments will be served.

To reserve a spot (a fee of $5 per person will be collected at the door), call the church office at 905-584-9974 or e-mail caledoneastuc@on.aibn.com by March 1.

Peel working housing abuse and trafficking survivors

By Bill Rea

Peel Region is continuing its efforts to provide housing for survivors of domestic violence and human trafficking.

Regional staff recently sent a report on the matter to councillors, which was received without comment.

The report stated that the Province launched a two-year pilot program in the fall of 2016 with 22 service managers, including the Region. The aim was to provide survivors of domestic violence with a portable housing benefit.

Staff reported the program produced positive results, so it was expanded to include all communities. As well, in November, the Province announced that the housing benefit would be available to eligible survivors of human trafficking, starting April 1.

The report stated that when it comes to domestic violence, survivors on the Region’s centralized wait list get the option of receiving a portable housing benefit instead of waiting for subsidized housing unit with rent geared to income (RGI). Staff added participating in the program is voluntary, and those taking part get to keep their places on the wait list.

Staff stated 84 survivors have joined the pilot program, and 24 have left, with most of them electing to take RGI units.

The results of the pilot project indicate the portable housing benefit has advantages. It lets the victims get out of their abusive situations faster because they don’t have to wait for a vacant unit to come available.

When it comes to dealing with survivors of human trafficking, the report reminded councillors they endorsed funding last year for a two-stage housing support model, while also endorsing an expedited development application process for this sort of housing.

The report said staff have reviewed 14 Regional surplus sites that could be suitable for affordable housing. Two places in Mississauga could be suitable for transitional housing for human trafficking survivors, but the other 12 were found to be inappropriate, either because they are in rural areas, or extensive renovation work would be needed.

Staff also reported that Family Services Peel has received a little more than $302,000 in funding from the Ministry of Community and Special Services to help develop and screening tool for service providers to identify people at risk of being trafficked.

Complications in being a hitman being explored at CTHP

By Bill Rea

When some people are down on their luck, it's interesting what methods they might use to change their fortunes.

But that can get tricky when they find themselves taking on the role of professional hitmen.

That's what's happening in the Caledon Townhall Players' current offering The Accidental Hit-Man Blues, written by playwright and producer T. Gregory Argall. It explores the less than enviable lifestyle of Ron and Laura (played by Gord Gardiner and Litisha Perez). They have been struggling for about a year, reduced to living in a seedy hotel room that obviously hasn't seen a decorator in some time.

The real complications start when a hitman (Rob Argall) breaks into their room and attacks Laura, obliging Ron to kill him in self defence. He feels a little guilty about the act, but not completely.

"Once you get past the sheer terror, it's really thrilling," he tells Laura.

They then have to answer questions for two detectives, the rather ditzy Sculder (Tricia-Leigh Stone), and her evidently long-suffering partner Mully (Noah Clauser). But they are somehow able to get rid of the evidence, using some rather nifty movements to actually move the body.

"I never really understood the term 'deadweight' until we had to carry you," she tells the body as they try to get rid of it.

Being mistaken as enforcers, Laura and Ron find themselves being offered some pretty lucrative contracts to have certain people removed, and they start developing a certain empathy toward their targets. They include Mrs. Frobisher (Julie Docherty), who is told to take some of the money paid for the job and make herself scarce. Another victim is Sammy (Bryson Landriault), who talks a lot and has trouble staying on topic, much to Ron's consternation. They also have to deal with another hit man, Johnny (Travis Jones), who's less than pleased that he's got competition.

The final result is a lot of confusion, combined with frustration on the part of some of those involved.

"I think this was meant to happen," Ron tells his wife at one point. "There is no right thing, we're doing the thing with the least amount of wrong."

The play has a certain amount of off-colour language, along with some wonderful double meanings. Sammy was a ticket taker in a theatre, and got into trouble when a woman in line was a little delayed and asked for a couple of "secs."

"I'll give you all the secs you need," he said he replied in front of her boyfriend.

There's only one set in the play, namely the hotel room where Laura and Ron are living. Designed by Marg Argall and T. Gregory Argall, and built by John Rowe, Mark Chambers, and Chuck and Kim Blacklock, it does a great job of capturing the atmosphere anyone might be facing, if they've been struggling for a year. But the bad luck is overshadowed by the pithy dialogue and general confusion that makes this work worth many laughs.

The Accidental Hit-Man Blues will be performed at the Caledon Townhall Theatre tomorrow (Friday) and Saturday night.

DAREarts reports record growth for 2017

The DAREarts Foundation held its annual general meeting Jan. 9, marking the 21st year of achievement by this growing, national, youth-serving charity.

In 21 years, more than 200,000 children have been empowered by DAREarts, either directly or through a young leader. The kids rise to the challenge of discipline, action, responsibility and excellence (DARE): the values that form the framework of all DAREarts' creative workshops and leave these kids with a life path.

DAREarts Chairman Tarik Muzaffar, managing director and global head of financial institutions and global transaction banking with TD Securities, reported that, for the fiscal year that ended July 31, revenues of $1,021,073 increased 43 per cent over the previous year, while expenses were kept to $846,830. This record support allowed the charity to build sustainability within its structure and programs.

The Chairman thanked the corporate, foundation, government and individual supporters, plus directors, staff, teachers, artist-educators and 182 volunteers for their support that ranged from funding to giving personal time.

DAREarts' national supporter is Northbridge Insurance. Its lead supporters are Anne Livingston, Baton Rouge, Scotiabank, TD Bank Group, Bank of America Merrill Lynch plus the Province of Ontario government support through ONT150 — Ministry of Tourism, Culture and Sport and the Ontario Arts Council.

DAREarts Founder and President Marilyn Field detailed the charity's national impact, from Vancouver, Toronto, remote northern First Nations, Marten Falls, Webeque, Attawapiskat and Neskantaga, and from Montreal to Halifax, where DAREarts reached a total 10,053 children in underserved communities.

Looking ahead, Muzaffar and Field noted that DAREarts will continue to build sustainable capacity as the charity works towards its goal of empowering another 50,000 children through a revenue goal of $5 million by 2021.

Field shared her vision for DAREarts' third decade.

"The collective voice of our youth from all cultures will be the legacy of DAREarts," she said. "More young people will connect across Canada as they define their purpose, mobilize their passions and speak up to ignite positive change."

Committee will look at Council Code of Conduct

By Bill Rea

A committee is to be formed to look at the Code of conduct for members of Caledon Council, and it will be reporting to the councillors in office after this fall's elections.

That motion was approved recently after a lengthy and sometimes heated debate at committee.

Councillor Johanna Downey had put forth the motion calling on staff to review the Code and come up with recommendations to have its provisions "in better alignment with the expectations of overall respectful workplace conduct."

The preamble of her motion stated the current Code is general in nature, and lacks specific guidelines regarding appropriate conduct in various situations.

The motion also calls for guidelines covering such things as the use of social media, hosting and attending community meetings and relations between councillors and staff.

This came after the Town Integrity

Commissioner John E. Fleming had ruled in favour of Councillors Barb Shaughnessy and Annette Groves in light of allegations they had violated the Code.

Shaughnessy's husband Tim Forster addressed committee, agreeing there is a need to review the Code (Shaughnessy said she had nothing to do with the preparation of his remarks).

"But this is not the time or the motion to do it," he remarked, adding it was an attempt on the part of Downey to try an police behaviour beyond a councillor's control, including activity on social media.

He also said the motion was in response to Downey's disappointment at the Fleming's findings regarding Shaughnessy and Groves.

He said the Code needs to reflect balance between the freedom to communicate and diversity of opinion.

"This is not the tone of this motion," he said.

Forster also said there is a social media outlet in Caledon that is operating as a "private propaganda machine for a particular view on council."

He added one blogger has been creating posts that are defamatory to some councillors. He said it would be nice if such activity could be policed, but he didn't think that was the intent of the motion.

"My sense is that this motion's intent is to muzzle councillors," he remarked.

Forster suggested councillors concentrate on serving their constituents and not attacking each other, and let Fleming come up with recommendations on how to update the Code. He added if councillors would stop filing charges against each other, that would give him time to look at the Code.

He also said the new council will be hiring a new Integrity Commissioner, and he understood the rules will require that person to be a lawyer. He said Fleming should be able to look at it, with the recommendations being considered by the new council and a lawyer as Integrity Commissioner.

Town Clerk Carey deGorter said the role of the Integrity Commissioner is due to expand next year, but added there's nothing saying that person has to be a lawyer.

Councillor Rob Mezzapelli said he does his best to monitor his conduct with staff, his peers and the public, adding the levels councillors hold up for themselves should follow them outside the Council Chambers.

Downey denied she was dissatisfied with Fleming's ruling, adding she has great respect for him.

But she said there are technical aspects that the current Code doesn't address.

"Maybe it's just time to look at it," she said.

Mezzapelli said he supported a review, and said Forster made a good point of using Fleming as a means to conduct it.

DeGorter told him Council could ask Fleming to take on the task, but she wouldn't offer an opinion on whether that would be the best way to proceed. Fleming would have to be asked that.

Mezzapelli commented that if there is going to be a review, it has to be fulsome and effective.

Groves had problems with the intent of the motion.

"I see my name written all over it, and Councillor Shaughnessy's name written all over it, indirectly" she declared, adding the public has lost confidence in this council.

She agreed there is a need to review the Code, but added it has become the source of a lot of drama on Council, with some members using it to bully, intimidate and discredit others, and using it as a way to stop free speech.

"It's not something that I want to be governed by, she declared, adding it should be up to the next Council to review it. She put forth the motion to have the matter referred back to staff so a committee can be formed.

Downey said she was happy with that, pointing out it would accomplish what she had set out to do.

Mayor Allan Thompson agreed, pointing out there are legislative changes from the province coming down on this in the fall, and not all the implications are known.

Mezzapelli was upset at suggestions there was an attempt to muzzle free speech.

"It's a horrible statement to make and totally untrue," he declared.

DeGorter told Thompson this work won't be done by the fall, pointing out staff will be very busy running the elections.

Councillor Jennifer Innis supported the referral, stating the work to be done is important.

Innis also said she took offence at the suggestions the original motion was aimed at muzzling people.

"You don't have to be friends with everybody, but you must be kind. You must be respectful," she said is something she tells her children. "This issue is not about you."

This time, will the best one win?

The rules governing the election of the next Ontario Progressive Conservative leader are the same that led to Patrick Brown's victory in 2015.

Then, as now, Christine Elliott was the front-running candidate, but wound up in second place, after Brown's campaign team managed to sell a lot of $10 party memberships. Did the best candidate really win?

A lot else has changed in the interim. In 2015, Elliott was an MPP and Brown the Conservative MP for Barrie. Today, Elliott is no longer an MPP, having accepted the position as Ontario's Patient Ombudsman in 2016, while Brown is sitting as an independent despite his election as PC MPP for Simcoe North in a 2015 byelection, having been ejected from the PC caucus a few days ago.

Now, all Ontarians who were PC party members as of Friday (Feb. 16) will be able to cast preferential ballots containing the names of five candidates — Brown, Elliott, Doug Ford, Caroline Mulroney and Tanya Allen — although we suspect many would prefer to vote only for their favourite or perhaps list only their top three choices.

Perhaps the biggest difference between this election and the previous one is the lack of time candidates had to sign up new members. In 2015 they all had months to do it, while this time Brown had no time at all, having waited until last Friday afternoon to enter the race.

Although the other four candidates had the same couple of weeks to sign up members, only Ford objected to the Feb. 16 deadline, accusing the party of deliberately trying to thwart his leadership bid.

"They're doing this on purpose to hinder me, because out of all the candidates, they know I can sign up more people," he told the National Post. "This is about . . . the insiders and the elites trying to figure out how they're going to stop Doug Ford. The common people want me in there."

As we see it, there's little doubt that the party establishment would like to see the victory go to one of the three female candidates, perhaps seeing Ford as having a mild version of Donald Trump's populist appeal and the same tendency to have a subjective version of the truth when it suits him.

Our suspicion is that any polling of the current PC caucus would disclose a near-unanimous support for Elliott, despite her having taken the job with the Wynne government.

Now 62, the widow of former federal finance minister Jim Flaherty served as MPP for Whitby-Ajax in 2006-07 and Whitby-Oshawa from 2007 to '15 and was a PC leadership candidate in 2009 (losing to Tim Hudak) as well as in 2015.

As of this Tuesday, a seemingly well-sourced Wikipedia article shows Elliott as having been endorsed by 10 MPPs, among them Bill Walker (Bruce-Grey-Owen Sound and Jim Wilson (Simcoe-Grey), as well as by former federal Conservative leadership candidate MP Michael Chong (Wellington-Halton Hills) and two other Conservative MPs.

The same article shows Ford, 53, as having the support of just one MPP, Raymond Cho of Scarborough-Rouge River.

Brown has apparently been endorsed by two MPPs, Toby Barrett (Haldimand-Norfolk) and Ross Romano (Sault Ste. Marie) and three Conservative MPs, Ben Lobb (Huron-Bruce), Phil McColeman (Brantford-Brant) and Alex Nuttall (Barrie-Springwater-Oro-Medonte).

Mulroney, the 43-year-old lawyer and daughter of former prime minister Brian Mulroney, has been endorsed by five MPPs and eight MPs and leads the pack in terms of endorsements from PC candidates — 19 to 18 for Brown and nine for Elliott.

Allen, 37, is an obvious fringe candidate with no MPP endorsements. A member of the Campaign Life Coalition and Catholic Civil Rights League, she's a social conservative who is an outspoken opponent of the province's sex education curriculum.

So what does this all mean in terms of the candidates' leadership qualities and the party's platform in the June 7 provincial election? Only time will tell.

What to do with a snowy afternoon?

To all of you out there that really wonder what else in life could make you happier and invested in what goes on around you, are sitting around reading the newspapers, watching TV, reading blogs or shoveling snow the major part of your life these days? Is getting a coffee at the local Tim Hortons the most important outing for the day? Is the afternoon nap getting longer and more of a necessity? Are you sitting around hoping to receive a phone call from your kids or grandkids asking you to come over to babysit or just say hello and see if you are in good health? Well let me tell you what, you are missing out on a lot of good things in life that could make you happier and healthier.

Can I suggest to you that meeting with a group of friends and associates on a weekly basis? Being part of committees that are planning some events in your community, such as the upgrading of the Westview Park, the administration of a skating rink on our pond, the planning of Canada Day celebrations or organizing the community Terry Fox Run. ### It happened today

He was a successful soldier, achieving heroism for his 217-day defence of Mafeking in the South African War of 1899-1902.

He was also a pretty good artist, aided to some extent that he was ambidextrous (able to write and draw equally well with both hands). He was known to use that talent to scout enemy fortifications, using coded symbols on drawings that he was pretending to do of butterflies he had apparently studied.

In time, he wrote a book Scouting for Boys in 1908, and it resulted in Scout troops forming all over the world.

The founder of Scouting, Robert Stephenson Smyth Baden-Powell, was born this day, Feb. 22, 1857.

No easy answers

Last week's dreadful events at a Florida high school certainly were felt here.

Schools in this area were flying their flags at half-staff in tribute to the victims of the massacre.

And the real tragedy is, alas, that is all anyone can really do at a time like this.

I found it a small comfort that the person who is believed to be behind this tragedy was not killed. A suspect was taken alive and is now in custody. True, we have to work on the assumption that he allegedly is responsible for this act. Authorities in Florida are obligated to go through due process, making sure all of the suspect's rights are respected. But if it turns out he is the one who did the killings, there will be the opportunity to delve into what led to these acts, and maybe get some understanding on what can be done to avoid them in the future. Too often, we hear of incidents like this in which the shooter is either killed by the authorities, or they take their own life. It seems suicide is frequently part of the agenda of such occurrences, making it difficult to explore what prompted events.

I grant that there's a lot of wishful thinking in the words I just wrote, because there is no such thing as a simple solution to what took place last week. And I don't know to whom we can turn for guidance.

There are those who might argue this is something for government to address, presumably by passing new laws. But can that really solve anything? Just because there are laws in place doesn't mean they are going to prevent bad things from happening. It is already against the law to take guns into schools and open fire on students, yet it happens, and too frequently for anyone's comfort. We have the examples of Columbine and Sandy Hook. Last week was just the latest one, and there have been incidents in Canada too. I fear there will be more.

These incidents also always spark talk about gun control and the availability of fire arms. It would be nice if guns could be kept out of the hands of people like this, but it's not very realistic, especially in the United States.

"A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed."

I lifted that line directly from the Constitution of the United States (I even left in, against my better judgement, some capital letters I deemed inappropriate). It's the Second Amendment, and the last half represents a sentiment that many Americans adhere to.

I think a lot of people have to wonder if the framers of the Constitution and the men who wrote that amendment envisioned a situation that presented itself in Florida last week. But the fact is many people in that country cleve to the words as they are written, and they carry enough clout to keep things as they are

Besides, would controlling who can legally possess a gun make that much of a difference? It upsets me, but I believe it is reality that anyone in Canada or the United States could easily get their hands on a gun if they really wanted to. That's not the problem. It's what happens next that we have to be worried about.

The answer is not new laws or legislation. Solving this problem is much, much more complicated. There is a need to understand why people commit such acts. And there are lots of them who do. That is one of the great tragedies connected with these events; they keep happening.

There are plenty of unstable people in this world, and most of us encounter a few as we progress through life. Most are harmless, but others are not, and how are the rest of us to know what extremes one person might go to?

My reading tells me the two young men responsible for what went on a Columbine were bullied. There was a time in my youth when I was bullied a lot. The physical stuff wasn't too bad. Bruises heal. It was the constant taunting, being ostracized, having my possessions damaged or stolen, and the persistent threats that really made life miserable.

But nothing in life is permanent. Things change, as do social dynamics. In time, I found myself part of a crowd, and we had people we could taunt. High school kids like to think they are empathetic, but not many are. Besides, I had been on the receiving end of much of that garbage for years. I was entitled to have some time on the other side.

One of the targets of my group lashed out by threatening to kill me. I was not his only tormentor, but I was the object of his threats. And this guy was well known enough to the school administration. He was a loud-mouthed, ill-disciplined pot-stirrer (like a lot of other kids his age). And drugs were almost certainly playing a part too. His bombast was his undoing. Action was started, involving faculty, my parents, police, etc.

In the end, nothing came of it. Indeed, we bumped into each other a couple of years later, and the meeting was rather cordial. If memory serves, he even bummed a cigarette off me (I smoked in those days).

Those last couple of paragraphs were difficult for me to write, because I forced myself to reflect back on trying to navigate through adolescence, while crashing into people trying to do the same.

I compare what went on in Florida to what I went through.

It was this guy's mouthing off about killing me that probably worked in my favour. It's the ones who don't mouth off that we have to worry about.

Who's got a solution?

Planning a spring break getaway?

It's that time of year again, when our thoughts often shift to spring break getaways, especially following the very long and cold winter we've been experiencing this year.

For those who are planning escapes just over the border or further south to even warmer, sunnier climates, there are many things to take into consideration when planning a vacation. This can be a very busy time of year for Canadians travelling and by taking a few preparatory steps, spring break getaways can hopefully be stress-free and relaxing.

Global Affairs Canada has many helpful tips and information to guide Canadians as they plan for their spring break getaways to ensure they are prepared for anything that may arise during their travels. This includes:

- Travel advice and advisories, which are available at <https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/advisories>. They provide detailed information on the country where you're travelling. It is recommended to check this website when planning your vacation and before you leave for your travels to receive the most up-to-date safety and security information;
- Visit a health care provider or a travel health clinic preferably six weeks before your departure to ensure your vaccinations are current and to receive additional guidance on guarding against illness and injury;
- If travelling with children, ensure you read Tips for healthy travel with children (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/health-safety/children>), Children and travel (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/children/children-travel>) and Taking children on a plane (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/children/taking-children-on-a-plane>), and take a consent letter (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/children/consent-letter>), if necessary;

- Take the time to register yourself with Registration of Canadians Abroad (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/registration>), to ensure you may receive important information from government officials, should an emergency arise in your destination country;
- Obtain the best travel insurance you can purchase, as your Canadian health insurance will not cover you when travelling outside of Canada;
- Register for Travel.gc.ca's Travel Smart app, Twitter, and Facebook accounts to learn of important travel-related information and updates;
- Check your passport to ensure it is still valid and if you need to renew it, take the necessary steps by visiting <https://www.canada.ca/en/immigration-refugees-citizenship/services/canadian-passports.html> (or visit either of my constituency offices for the necessary forms) and take note of the processing times;
- Prepare a travel health kit (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/health-safety/kit>) to take with you and review other health tips (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/health-safety>), including Eat and drink safely (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/health-safety/food-water>), and Insect bite prevention (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/health-safety/insect-bite>) before your planned departure;
- Include an extra supply of your prescription and/or over-the-counter medications in your luggage in the event you are delayed in returning home. Take the time to review Travelling with medication (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/health-safety/medication>) and Travelling with a medical device (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/health-safety/medical-device>) for more information;
- Review Global Affairs Canada's page on Alcohol, drugs and travel (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/health-safety/drugs>) and ensure you know the risks;
- Prepare a travel checklist (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/publications/travellers-checklist>); and review Global Affairs Canada's publications, such as Bon Voyage, but... Essential Information for Canadian Travellers (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/publications/>)

- If travelling by plane, visit Global Affairs Canada's Air travel page (<https://travel.gc.ca/air>) for information on what you may bring on a plane, pre-boarding identification requirements, the airport screening process, etc. You may also wish to check the airport security screening wait time (<http://www.catsa.gc.ca/waittimes>) for the international airport you'll be using before leaving home;
- If you are driving to your destination, Global Affairs Canada advises to be aware that border traffic volume will be greater and, therefore, aim to avoid peak travel times. Time may be saved by reviewing the Canada to U.S. border wait times (<https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/border-times-us>) and check U.S. to Canada border wait times (<https://travel.gc.ca/returning/border-times>) when returning to Canada to make for a speedier return home.

In taking the recommended steps provided by Global Affairs Canada to prepare for travel outside of Canada, you can ensure you have the most enjoyable and stress-free spring getaway possible. Whatever your travel plans may be for spring break 2018, I wish you safe travels.

If you're planning a "staycation" and taking in the many wonderful sites and activities that can be found here at home, enjoy!

FAO shows Hydro One sale will leave Ontarians worse off

According to the independent non-partisan Financial Accountability Officer (FAO), the Liberals' partial sale of Hydro One will end up hurting Ontarians in the long run.

The FAO said that the decision will cost Ontario taxpayers billions of dollars for several reasons.

In the FAO's most recent report, titled Hydro One: Updated Financial Analysis of the Partial Sale of Hydro One, it stated that because the government is no longer receiving a dividend from Hydro One, the province will lose almost $400 million in revenue in 2018.

The government continues to claim that they would be spending the money they received from the Hydro One sale on infrastructure. The FAO in fact has said that funding projects off of the sale of Hydro One is a far more expensive approach than just borrowing the money to build infrastructure. The FAO report shows that $1.8 billion would have been saved if the government financed its infrastructure through traditional debt rather than selling off 60 per cent of Hydro One.

The FAO report also shows that the

FROM QUEEN'S PARK

Sylvia Jones
MPP Dufferin-Caledon

government has failed to keep its promise of actually spending the money from the Hydro One sale on infrastructure. Instead the government is keeping the money on its books and artificially balancing the budget during an election year. Specifically, of the $4.4 billion that they said they would spend on infrastructure, only $670 million has actually been spent.

In short, the Liberals are using the fire sale of Hydro One to make their budget look balanced ahead of the 2018 election. This is just another example of the Wynne Liberals' mismanaging the electricity file. There is no file which has been more disastrous for Ontario families and businesses. Dufferin-Caledon residents are already being hurt by skyrocketing hydro rates. This latest report is another example of Liberal hydro mistakes leaving Ontarians behind.

The FAO's report on the Hydro One sale adds to the Auditor General's report from October 2017 which showed that the government's plan to fix their hydro mistakes would cost Ontario taxpayers $4 billion more than necessary. The government had tried to hide the true cost of financing their plan to provide hydro relief, by borrowing through Ontario Power Generation, instead of through the government of Ontario's books.

In the end, the Liberals' mismanagement of the electricity system is costing Ontario taxpayers billions of dollars. Ontarians deserve better. That is why the Ontario PC Caucus and I will continue to call on the Liberal government to provide real and lasting hydro relief to Ontario families and businesses all while respecting the money of taxpayers.

"A LIFE changing experience"

by Stella Jordan-Sharp, LIFE for Youth Participant

I came into the LIFE for Youth program at a point in my life where I had become very lost.

Everyone in this program comes from different backgrounds and walks of life. Some have never had a job before, some have had trouble keeping a job and others, like me, have some job experience but can never seem to find something they truly enjoyed.

I had completed film school and had recently finished working on a television show, but I didn't feel fulfilled or satisfied as I thought I would. I felt as though what I was doing did not align with my goals, nor was I passionate about the industry. I was unemployed, had no direction and felt incredibly lost, confused and embarrassed at the state of my life.

This program teaches workplace etiquette, allows you to explore different career options and to learn more about yourself. We were given multiple educational workshops that not only allowed us to work on our goals and ambitions, but gave us a chance to work on our resume and interview skills.

I had been working towards film for the majority of my secondary and post-secondary career and realizing it wasn't what I wanted was hard to accept. Starting this program gave me peace of mind knowing there were people here to help me achieve my goals and to assist me during the transition.

So to all the potential participants of LIFE for Youth: enjoy every moment of this program! It is an absolutely amazing experience and you won't regret joining. I can never say enough about the incredible work Mary and Joanne do every day, they truly change lives.

Mary (Manager, Youth Programs) and Joanne (Field Supervisor) are two of the kindest and most supportive people you will ever meet. They are the greatest teachers and without them, I wouldn't have had the confidence and drive I do now. They provided support and made me feel welcome during the entire five months, as though I had two cheerleaders by my side.

I have found my passion in life and it's all thanks to LIFE for Youth. I will be returning to school for Holistic Nutrition and am so excited to see where this path takes me. I have nothing but endless gratitude for Mary, Joanne and the rest of the CCS team.

Throughout this journey, I have developed confidence in knowing that I can accomplish anything life throws my way.

Take charge of your life! Join this five-month program and receive a paycheck while gaining the skills and experience to land the job of your dreams. The workplace can be tough yet Life for Youth participants enjoy success again and again. Call Mary at 905-584-2300 ext. 232 to learn more and get started.

Speaker says it makes good business sense to be accessible

By Bill Rea

Complying with the Accessibility for Ontarians with Disabilities Act (AODA) is not only the law, but it makes a lot of business sense.

That was the message that Louis Di Palma of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce was pressing when he recently addressed the Morning Business Break put on by the Caledon Chamber.

Di Palma said the intent of AODA is to create an accessible Ontario by 2025. That means there are rules in place that businesses and organizations must follow to identify, prevent and remove barriers impacting on people with disabilities. This applies to all organizations and companies with one or more employees, which provide goods or services to the public or other groups. In terms of employees, it applies to those who are full-time, part-time, seasonal or on contract, but it does not apply to volunteers or deliverers. Di Palma added that doesn't include company board members.

The definition of a person with a disability is the same as the one that applies to the Ontario Human Rights Code, and it includes ones that are both visible and non-visible, and includes vision and hearing loss, brain injuries, speech impairments, diabetes, epilepsy, developmental and learning disabilities, mental health disabilities, and injuries. It also covers short and long-term, as well as permanent disabilities.

"What we sometimes see as a disability is not necessarily so," Di Palma remarked.

He also warned against prejudging, or assuming the only disabilities that need to be addressed are physical.

"Don't make assumptions," he said.

Five accessibility standards have been developed.

The first is customer service, and Di Palma said that involves being aware and making efforts to provide service to all.

He stressed if a business is on the second floor of the building, that doesn't mean an elevator has to be installed, but it means the operator has to find a way to accommodate people.

"Ninety-nine per cent of the time, you can," Di Palma said, adding if it's not possible, then there's an obligation to refer the client to an alternative business that can accommodate them.

"It's common sense," he said, although he noted sometime people get so busy that they forget that.

"This is a requirement under law," he added, pointing out people can be fined if they don't comply.

But appropriate education for business people is available, and he said that most business people just want to know what they need to do.

Another of the standards involves information and communication. He said it's important to know how to convey information, especially to those who have trouble accessing it.

Employment standards involve recruitment and job posting.

Transportation standards deal with making sure employees can get to work, such as seeing if things like public transit and taxis are available.

The fifth standard involves design of public space, which would involve things like parks and recreation facilities, etc.

People running business and organizations should be in compliance with the customer service standard, including the training of staff, providing emergency response information in accessible format when asked, providing employees with customize emergency information when required (such as knowing what to do if the building has to be evacuated), developing accessibility policies and considering accessibility issues when installing things like self-service kiosks (such as are the keypads reachable by all).

Employment standard provisions require that operations have to be aware of in the recruitment, assessment and selection process, providing accessible formats and communications supports on request and providing workplace emergency response information.

Di Palma said there are websites with information that can help in that regard.

One point he stressed is about 15 per cent of the population has some form of disability. That is a huge client base, as well as a talent pool when seeking staff.

Businesses with 20 or more staff are required to submit a compliance report to the government by the end of the year, but Di Palma said that requirement is not very onerous. He said it involves about half a dozen easy questions that pertain mainly to customer service. He added there is a hot line and website to assist if there are any problems. As well, municipalities have accessibility committees that can help.

An accessible workplace is one that utilizes everyone's skills and talents; and in which barriers to full participation are identified and removed.

Di Palma pointed out that businesses generally have a hard time finding talent. He said there are some 50,000 students in Ontario colleges and universities that have some form of disability, but that also represents a lot of talent that some businesses might have trouble accessing because of barriers they might not even be aware of.

"It's really become a business imperative," he remarked, noting business people can't ignore that 15 per cent.

Di Palma observed that Ontario is facing a labour shortage in the future. Baby boomers are retiring from the workforce, and many of those who are saying are running into accessibility issues. As people age, things like their eyesight and mobility are not what they once were. These people have to be accommodated in order to keep the experienced talent.

"It's not just a nice thing," Di Palma said. "It's a business imperative."

He also said there are advantages to hiring people with disabilities, according to several research reports.

There's data stating these people are highly motivated, with 75 per cent of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) reporting staff members with disabilities meet or exceed expectations. These people are also more likely to stay with a company longer and have better attendance records. As well, statistics indicate they are more safety conscious.

The AODA covers all aspects of the employment life cycle, including recruitment, retention and promotion. There are some who would think it's too expensive, but Di Palma said that's not so. He said it costs less than $500 to accommodate the average employee, which is a fair amount compared to what it costs to take on and train someone else.

He also said accommodation doesn't mean standards have to be lowered. It means adjustments need to be made so some people can handle the essential duties of the job.

When it comes to recruitment, Di Palma said the law requires that people are aware that accommodation is available during the interview process, and the applicant has to be consulted on appropriate accommodation.

While an employer can't ask a person seeking a job if they require accommodation, there are ways to determine if there are needs. He said it's possible to talk to a person who's been disruptive and discuss things like ethics and protocol, and it could come out that person has anger-management issues.

Di Palma said AODA doesn't require buildings to be retrofitted to remove barriers, but the Building Code deals with new constructions and renovation. If an existing building is undergoing a major renovation, the local planning department will have information on what needs to be complied with.

He also said employers are obligated to have response plans in place in the event of emergencies. For example, audible fire alarms aren't going to help a person who can't hear. Such plans for individuals can't be shared, except with those who are part of that person's support.

Steps also need to be in place for an employee returning to work, that can take many forms, such as modified work schedules, etc.

United Way invests in 12 youth-led initiatives

Twelve groups of passionate, entrepreneurial young leaders in the community, aged 14 to 24 were recently awarded Youth in Action grants worth up to $2,000.

Eight youth-led projects were awarded under the general grants stream, funded by United Way's Community Investment portfolio. Four projects were awarded under the brand new Financial Literacy grants stream, funded by United Way of Peel Region's Women United, a group of dedicated female executives in Peel Region.

"At United Way, we're focused on reducing and preventing poverty in our community — we look at the root causes of poverty and how we can intervene," United Way of Peel Region Interim President and CEO Anita Stellinga said. "Each of these diverse projects has a role in that. Whether your project is about mental health, creating networking opportunities, financial literacy or getting job-ready, you are playing a part in poverty reduction in our community."

All 12 youth-led projects will roll out in Caledon, Brampton and Mississauga over the next seven months. The initiative is led by United Way's GenNext Council, a group of dedicated young leaders in Peel.

"GenNext is excited to be a part of these incredible, youth-led projects that aim to address social issues, inspire change, and create impact in Peel Region," GenNext Council Chair Jannies Le declared.

GenNext leaders will provide mentorship to each group for the duration of the projects.

Youth in Action grants are a one-time granting opportunity focused on youth-led projects that offer creative, youth-initiated ideas to address community issues in Peel Region. Youth between the ages of 14 and 24 are eligible to apply for this grant.

Youth in Action grants were developed in 2009 by United Way's Young Leaders Council, a group of volunteers aged 20 to 35, committed to creating a legacy of volunteerism and spirited giving within Peel Region.

Home Show coming

Plan to attend this year's Caledon Home Show.

It will run April 20, 21 and 22 at the Albion-Bolton Community Centre.

Hosted by the Caledon Chamber of Commerce, organizers are planning a few changes to the 2018 edition of the show. Those attending will notice larger and more vibrant displays.

This show will bring a wide variety of products and services that people need, as well as encouragement to try local first before making that call to an out of town contractor.

"Local business want your business and this is their opportunity to show you the benefits of dealing locally," show manager Pete Whitaker observed. "Remember, shopping locally employs your friends and neighbors."

Golden Hawks come back for first round series win

By Jake Courtepatte

Chalk up another come-from-behind win for the Caledon Golden Hawks.

Just days after an overtime goal kept their season alive in the fifth game of their best-of-seven series with the Huntsville Otters, the junior C club once again got it done in extra time in the sixth outing, before winning in regulation in the do-or-die seventh game.

Returning to Huntsville in another battle for their season Friday for the sixth game, Chase Krompocker was solid in the crease for the Hawks before a shorthanded opportunity caught him off guard with just seven seconds left in the first period.

The 1-0 score held until late in the third period, when with Caledon pressuring, game five hero Marc Simonetta scored the tying goal to send it to an extra frame.

That pressure continued into the overtime period, when Christian Hauck scored on the very first shot of the period to give Caledon the win and send it to a seventh and deciding game.

Back at Caledon East Sunday, close to 300 fans packed the house to watch a Hawks' offensive clinic, throwing 64 shots on the Huntsville net in an eventual 6-4 win.

Down 2-0 after the first period of play, Jeffrey Ohashi and Simonetta each found twine to tie late in the second, though a Huntsville goal in the final minute put Caledon down 3-2 heading into the intermission.

Caledon exploded in offence in the third, scoring four times on 24 shots in the period, to put Huntsville away for good.

Landis Antonic scored twice in the third, while Michael Andrews and Hauck each added singles.

And just like that, after facing elimination three games ago, the Hawks punched their ticket to the second round for just the second time in its eight-year history, drawing the Alliston Hornets as their round two opponent.

Having not met in the postseason since the 2011-12 campaign, the playoff animosity between Caledon and Alliston will begin anew this year, though the rivalry runs deep. The Hawks were one of just two teams to beat the Hornets on multiple occasions this season, besting them twice in the new year after three losses to open the season series.

Alliston's regular season record of 31-10-0-1 was good for second overall in the eight-team Carruthers division.

The playoff series opens Friday in Alliston at the always rowdy New Tecumseh Rec Complex, before moving to Caledon East for both game two and game three.

Game two will go Saturday with a puck drop time of 6:30 p.m., while game three will go Sunday at 7 p.m.

Competing on the other side of the semifinals are the Stayner Siskins and Penetang Kings, marking the second season in a row that the top four teams remained after round one. The top-seeded Siskins had a long wait to determine their opponent after sweeping the Orillia Terriers in four games, while the Kings bested the Midland Flyers in six.

Round robins start in Sunday hockey

Regular-season results are not always reflected in the post-season.

That's being demonstrated after one night of action in the round robins of the Sunday Night Hockey League.

One point is awarded for winning a period, two points for winning the game and if a period is tied, each team gets half a point.

The Caledon Hills Brewing Co. Brewers were in sixth place in the standings at the end of the regular campaign, but they have started out at top of things in the post season with 4.5 points. The Inside Out Family Chiropractic Predators ended the season in second place, and that at least has not changed. The Ken's Lawnmower Repair Blades were on top of things at the end of the season, and they are currently in third with three points, one behind the Predators. The Mr. Handyman Ice Hogs and the Pommies Cider Co. Wild played to a tie in the first evening of action, leaving them tied for fourth with 2.5 each. The St. Louis Bar and Grill Wings have two, followed by the Glen Eagle Golf Club Griffins with one and the Ainsley Fire Protection Fire.

Blades 2, Wings 2

The first game of the evening saw neither team able to best the other, but the Blades came out with three points on the five-point system over the Wings.

Blade bin bulgers were Daryll Simpson (unassisted), and Kevin Wigner from Simpson. The Wings' whipper was Victor Ranieri with both, helped by Derek Cleary and Larry Richardson.

Brewers 4, Fire 2

In a game that was close on the score sheet, the Brewers stole 4.5 points, leaving the Fire crew with only 0.5.

Brewer bashers were Joe Doan from Bob McHardy, Jay Beech from Dave Matheson, Brandon Scott from Beech and Doan, and Doan from Kevin Bowen. The Fire's firer was Shane Ainsley with the pair, helped by Brian Dunn and Mike Andreoli.

Predators 2, Griffins 1

Another close game saw the Predators take four of five points while the Griffins were left with one.

Predator power came from Darren Jones with both goals, assisted by Kyle Bagg and Mike O'Brien. The Griffins' go-to guy was Cory Schittenhelm from Lee Maunu and Richard Archer.

Ice Hogs 3, Wild 3

The last game of the night was once again a case of neither team being able to best the other as the Wild and the Ice Hogs split the points, 2.5 each.

Handyman hammers were dropped by Brad Sztorc from Marc de Abaitua, Adam Minatel from de Abaitua, and de Abaitua from Justin de Abaitua and Steve Pinarello. Wild warriors were Shaun Heron from James Sheridan, Steve Whitten (unassisted), and Whitten from Gary Morris.

Young Mayfield rugby players heading to Wales

By Bill Rea

There's a tradition that sees rugby players at Mayfield Secondary School take trips to the British Isles every other year, and that's going to continue come March break.

Dave and Leslie MacGregor of Brampton were looking over the items available at the silent auction at the recent fundraising event.

Mayfield rugby coaches are (back) Colin Bowins, Arta Theophylactou, Rhys Manning, Jon Forbes, Kirk Robertson, (front) Jon Beggs and Dave Kurzinger.

ANYONE FOR PIE?

There was lots of activity Saturday night at Terra Cotta Community Centre for the Valentine Pot-Luck Pie Party. There were a wide variety of pies contributed. Joan Wong was busy dividing them up.

teer Simon Brooks said there will be male and female players making the trip. They will practise there and get to have some matches with local teams. There are also hopes they will get to take in a soccer game, and there are plans for lots of sight-seeing.

Kirk Robertson, one of the coaches of the girls' team, said they will be staying in hostels and hotels while away, and they will get to travel a lot in south Wales.

"Wales is a hotbed for rugby," he declared. "It's a rugby culture in the U.K." He added the United Kingdom is a very hospitable place to take tours like this.

The tradition started in 1996, he said, and this will be the 11th trip students from Mayfield have taken.

"It's just become a growing tradition at our school," he said.

While it might be a rugby culture across the ocean, Robertson said Mayfield players in the past have been able to hold their own against their hosts on the field.

"We've had good success," he observed. "We compete hard and play well."
