Town of Caledon follows neighbours' lead in officially declaring a climate emergency

Written By ALYSSA PARKHILL

In June of 2019, the House of Commons passed a motion to declare a climate emergency across Canada. Several local municipalities have since followed suit, with Mississauga and Brampton declaring back in June, Toronto in October and Newmarket-Aurora in August. Kingston was the first municipality to declare climate emergency in Ontario, in March 2019.

Co-Chairs of ecoCaledon Donna Ferron and John MacRae and Co-Chair of Gratitude for Food Caledon Carolyn Vallejo presented to Council this past Tuesday to encourage Mayor Allan Thompson, along with all members of Council, to declare climate emergency for the town of Caledon.

“Our vision is to connect the majority of Caledon citizens to their environment. Encouraging them to live more sustainable lives and to help in making Caledon itself more sustainable,” said Ferron in the presentation.

Medical officials working to protect communities from coronavirus

Written By ALYSSA PARKHILL

A 53-year-old man travelling from Wuhan, China, presented mild symptoms of the coronavirus this past Saturday in Toronto. The man was ushered to the hospital only a day after returning to Toronto and remains at Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre.

The virus was first discovered in late December when the World Health Organization (WHO) was alerted to a new virus that had affected several pneumonia cases in Wuhan City. On Jan 7, Chinese officials confirmed that the virus was indeed a new contagion which is a part of the common cold family such as SARS (Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome) and MERS (Middle East Respiratory Syndrome).

The coronavirus is described by WHO as having been transmitted from animals to humans and affecting humans by respiratory symptoms, fever, cough, and shortness of breath and in more severe cases pneumonia, kidney failure and in some cases death.

Deputy Premier and Minister of Health, Christine Elliott, released a public statement on Jan. 22 to inform Ontarians of the precautions and steps medical officials are taking in regards to this new virus.

“I want Ontarians to know that their health and wellbeing is my top concern. While the risks posed by this new coronavirus rus to Ontarians remains low, the province is actively monitoring and is fully prepared to respond. ...

FILE PHOTO

CONTAGIOUS CONTAGION: Hospitals and health care professionals across Ontario are on red alert following two confirmed cases of the coronavirus in Toronto.

“Today, to strengthen the ministry’s ability to monitor any coronavirus cases, our government is adding novel coronavirus as a designated disease reportable under Ontario’s public health legislation. Now, physicians, hospitals and other care facilities will be required to report a suspected or confirmed case of the new coronavirus to their local medical officer of health. The local public health unit can then quickly and effectively take all necessary measures to investigate, complete lab tests, and do case and contact management to prevent and control further spread of the infection.”

Wellington-Dufferin-Guelph Public Health is preparing precautions and working with local health care partners and hospitals to protect residents and communities from the virus.

“Public Health is working closely with the Ministry of Health, local hospitals and health care providers to ensure residents are protected even if the risk is low,” said Dr. Nicola Mercer, Medical Officer of Health and CEO of the local public health unit.

“Our mandate is to protect the health and safety of our communities and we will continue to be vigilant about this situation while keeping your local health care provider and hospital informed with the latest information.”

Due to the unknown factors regarding this new virus, several area medical facilities and hospitals are keeping a wide ear for new information and updates throughout the days and weeks.

Sandy Critchley, Director of Quality Improvement, Planning and Performance at Headwaters Health Care Centre, explains that Headwaters is confident concerning the preventive measures taken and is constantly keeping in contact with medical officials and the media for more ongoing information.

“As part of our standard practice, patients come to triage and are asked a series of screening questions which includes questions about their travel history. We have recently added a specific question to the travel history screening which asks people whether they have travelled to Wuhan City, China in the last 14 days.

“Anyone who has a cough or respiratory symptoms is asked to wear a surgical mask. Masks are available at all entrances, at triage and throughout the hospital.

“If someone has been identified to have travelled in the last 14 days from Wuhan China, our staff would wear an N95 Mask (mask with a respirator) as a precaution and the patient would be placed in an airborne isolation room in our emergency department for a physician assessment and tests.

“Headwaters has a microbiology and laboratory where standard tests are sent for analysis. If nCoV was suspected, those lab samples would be sent to the Toronto Public Health Laboratory for analysis.”

She said patients would be kept in the hospital until they are well enough to return home. This timeframe would vary depending on the patient and their specific condition.

Test samples would be sent to the Toronto Public Health Laboratory for analysis.

She said Headwaters “closely monitors information available on emerging pathogens. We will continue to monitor the information and trends in the coming days and weeks and as new information becomes available we will update our protocols. We remain confident in the infection prevention and control measures put into place in airports to screen those travelling to affected areas,” said Ms. Critchley.

“We are appreciative of the information available through media outlets that encourage those with travel histories to affected areas and experiencing symptoms to call ahead to alert providers and allow them to prepare for your arrival. We believe that the lunar new year travel activity could provide an opportunity for this virus to spread to additional hosts, but risk of the virus presenting locally is currently relatively low.”

Public Health says that anyone or anyone they know who has recently travelled and returned from Wuhan City and has symptoms such as, respiratory symptoms, fever and/or cough, shortness of breath or breathing difficulties to immediately see physician. They also highly suggest international travelers should avoid close contact with people who are sick, wash their hands, avoid farms or wild animals and cover mouth and nose to help stop the spread of infection.

“We suggest that people take reasonable steps to protect themselves and their loved ones from all viruses by washing their hands regularly with soap and water or alcohol-based hand rub. These practices help protect the spread of the flu and other viruses,” said Ms. Critchley.

“Your New Career Starts Here; Maximizing the Potential of the Job Fair” by Chrissy Jarvie, Communications Lead

The most obvious reason to attend a job fair is to get a job. What’s less obvious is all the other benefits you can get from attending.

With many employers in one place, job fairs are great for meeting recruiters and HR representatives face-to-face, but with the large crowds you can only stand out with a solid plan to keep from being overwhelmed. Here are important, before, during and after tips that really make a difference:

Before: Know what companies are going to be there. Do your research and make a plan. Jobs Caledon Pro Tip: research the companies you’re interested in and be ready for anything – sometimes employers will offer on-the-spot interviews and even make hiring decisions.

Bring multiple copies of your resume, a pen and a notebook. Practice introducing yourself and answering potential questions in front of a mirror or with a friend. Jobs Caledon Pro Tip: Contact our Jobs Caledon employment specialists at 905-584-2300 to find out they can help you create or improve your resume so you make an impact.

During: A job fair is your chance to network, ask questions, make connections and get a feel for potential new employment opportunities. Take a deep breath and dive in! Jobs Caledon Pro Tip: dress for success but also for comfort – you’ll be spending much of your time standing and walking and if you’re not comfortable, you won’t put your best foot forward.

After: Hopefully, you scored a job or an interview or two or made a few good connections. In any event, it’s important to follow-up on any promises you made at the fair, like sending a sample of your work or connecting with someone on LinkedIn. Jobs Caledon Pro Tip: send thank you notes to new contacts to help establish a connection that sets you apart.

Feeling ready to take on a job fair? Our next Jobs Caledon Community Job Fair is happening on February 6th, 11:30 am – 3:00 pm. Participating employers include Amazon, Canadian Tire, Devil’s Pulpit Golf Association, Lullaboo Nursery and Childcare Centre, Mount Alverno Luxury Resort, Region of Peel and many more.

For details and a full list of employers, visit our events calendar at www.ccs4u.org. This job fair is free but registration is required; please email jobs@ccs4u.org or call 905-584-2300 ext. 200. You won’t be sorry you did!

Ontario introduces new initiative as part of building ‘smarter’ government plans

Written By ALYSSA PARKHILL

This past Friday (Jan. 24) Dufferin-Caledon MPP Sylvia Jones announced that the provincial government is rolling out a new ‘Transfer Payment Consolidation Smart Initiative’, to simplifying how non-profit organizations, municipalities and other service providers receive government funding.

This initiative is a part of Ontario’s plan to build a “smarter government”. Several acts and initiatives have been introduced as part of this plan including the ‘Simpler, Faster, Better Services Act’.

The ‘Simpler, Faster, Better Services Act’ came into effect in August 2019. It was the first action taken in Canada to develop easier and more effective services to individuals through digital practices.

“Ontarians have access to many of the goods and services they want, when they want, where they want because years ago businesses recognized bringing services online will better meet customers’ needs. Unfortunately, the Ontario government has not maintained the same standard due to out-of-date, overly bureaucratic processes that have reduced the quality of service provided to the people,” said Bill Walker, Minister of Government and Consumer Services in a press release last year. “It’s time for the Ontario government to bring its services into the 21st century. Our government has introduced the Simpler, Faster, Better Services Act and a number of other legislative changes to put people at the centre of the services we provide.”

Since then Ontario has made key progress in improving services for Ontarians to improve customer experience, like with Transfer Payment Ontario, which was formerly known as Grants Ontario. The initiative has created an easier and more functional way of applying for funding opportunities.

Organizations like the Caledon Community Services (CCS) will benefit immensely with this new initiative.

“Caledon Community Services is a provider of services; we’re called upon to provide resources in myriad sectors of human services. When we can reduce back office and administration, we can increase our front facing services and do more for Caledon and the surrounding communities. The government’s direction here is one we applaud,” said Monty Laskin, Caledon Community Services Chief Executive Officer.

MPP Jones discussed with the many positive changes and improvements this initiative will have on CCS’ services.

“Smarter, more efficient transfer payments will allow organizations like CCS to focus their efforts on what they do best,” said Jones. “Delivering services and programs residents in our community relies on.”

Dufferin-Caledon MP Kyle Seeback hosts first ‘town hall’ session

Written By ALYSSA PARKHILL

One of Dufferin-Caledon MP Kyle Seeback’s goals for the new year, in which he discussed throughout the election, was hosting his own Town Hall meetings in his home riding.

The first Town Hall meeting took place on Jan. 23 at the Centre Dufferin Recreation Complex in Shelburne.

“During last fall’s election, one of my campaign promises was to host Town Hall meetings throughout the riding on a regular basis,” said Mr. Seeback. “Following the election, I worked quickly to deliver on this promise by bringing the first meeting to Shelburne, to give my constituents in the northern part of my riding an opportunity to raise any issues of concern that I should be aware of as their Member of Parliament. I look forward to hosting the next Town Hall in Caledon, in March, to provide constituents in the southern part of my riding the same opportunity.”

This meeting was based around discussing agricultural issues in the riding and working together with the community and individuals to come up with some resolutions.

One of the main topics discussed was the impact trade disputes with China were having on local farmers in the Dufferin-Caledon area, and lack of support they have been afforded by the federal government.

“The issue of limited market access for soybean and canola producers, as a result of unresolved trade disputes, is an issue which came up again and again during and following the election,” said Mr. Seeback. “The U.S. has provided a $28 billion market facilitation program to support American producers; however, the current Liberal government has failed to provide any comparable measures for Canadian producers, making it even harder for them to remain competitive.”

Seeback explained to attendees that he indeed has raised this specific issue at the House of Commons in Ottawa prior to the holidays and continues to await action.

“I raised this issue in the House of Commons before the Christmas holidays and yet, farmers in my riding are still waiting for action by this government. I will continue to demand results for Dufferin-Caledon producers, as I return to Ottawa next week when the winter session of Parliament begins,” said Mr. Seeback.

The first meeting was an eye-opener for Seeback. He is grateful for residents of the community who came out to bring forward issues that need to be addressed.

“I think it went really well. There was a pretty good turnout, almost 50 people showed up. They really opened my eyes to a whole host of issues that are going on within the riding, not only issues surrounding farming, but issues surrounding infrastructure in some of our smaller and rural municipalities. We have really serious infrastructure needs, that are being ignored right now by the federal government, and that was really eye opening to me,” MP Seeback said.

Seeback has already raised these infrastructure concerns at the House of Commons this past Monday, proving once more of his commitment to the issues arising from communities.

MP Seeback’s next Town Hall meeting will be on March 5 at 6:30 p.m. at the Bolton United Church on Nancy Street.

Town of Caledon follows neighbours’ lead in officially declaring a climate emergency

The pair pointed to several apparent tell-tale signs that they say prove Caledon has experienced dramatic changes to the weather, which they attribute to climate change, in recent years.

“Caledon is not immune to the effects of climate change. Many of us can recall the ice storm in 2013 and the recent flooding in Bolton last year, as well as record breaking temperatures and damage to crops due to dramatic weather changes,” explained Carolyn Vallejo.

According to the Climate Emergency Website, “a climate emergency is one that threatens life as we know it. It is a public signal indicating that governments and society will be mobilized in emergency mode, until the emergency passes.”

The Town has made some crucial climate change plans to focus and improve life in Caledon, and take part in reducing the effects of climate change. A Climate Change Action Plan has been in the works to create strategies and future goals to tackle several approaches to improving life in Caledon and its environment.

“There’s no doubt that we’re in for many challenges, which we have to do our best to mitigate,” said Vallejo. “Entering emergency mode is the critical first step to launching the comprehensive mobilization required to rescue and rebuild civilization.”

She added, “Using the term emergency recognizes that the earth has reached key climate tipping points and that incremental actions such as gradual reduction of emissions over several decades is no longer a reasonable course of action if we want to secure a future for our children and grandchildren.”

Each council member was inspired and moved by the presentation, as well as the several members of ecoCaledon who attended to provide support and each provided their thanks to the eco-friendly group.

“Caledon has a long history of being environmentally proactive, I think we were one of the first municipalities in the province to have an Environmental Progress Officer. I feel like this is formalizing what we’re working on and what we’re doing. I always say that actions speak louder than words and I think Caledon has been very strong in its actions, and I think a big part of that comes from the drive of our community members,” expressed Ward 3 ad 4 Regional Councillor Jennifer Innis.

The Town of Caledon council unanimously passed the motion to declare climate emergency.

Ward 1 Area Councillor Lynn Kiernan soon after the motion passed to declare a climate emergency, made an amendment to ban all single-use plastics from the Council Chamber no later than the end of February, and for staff to be directed to report back with a strategy to ban all single-use plastics. The amendment was unanimously agreed on by the rest of council.

GETTING CONNECTED: Mayor Allan Thompson alongside other council members announced the upcoming installation of 35 km of new fibre optic cable on the Caledon Trailway with partnership with Vianet.

Town announces 35km of new fibre optic cable along Caledon Trailway

Written By ALYSSA PARKHILL

The Town of Caledon has partnered with service telecommunications company Vianet, to install 35 kilometres of new fibre optic cable along the Caledon Trailway.

The initial proposal was addressed in the 2018-2022 Council Work Plan. In the early months of 2019, The Town of Caledon issued a proposal to provide high-speed internet to eight locations in Caledon that were identified in the Town's Broadband Gap Analysis.

"Having access to high speed internet is absolutely vital in today's economy," said Mayor Allan Thompson in a previous news release. "The new fibre in the Bolton Industrial Park will provide Caledon businesses access to the services and technology they need to compete locally, nationally or internationally. Our Council has never wavered in trying to find solutions to addressing this vital community need. During this term of Council, we are focused on taking even more action to bring broadband to more homes and businesses in Caledon."

On Jan 27, Mayor Allan Thompson alongside several members of Council gathered on the Caledon Trailway in Inglewood to make an announcement on Phase 2 of the installation of the future expansion of high-speed internet.

Joining them was Brian McCullagh, Director of Business Development of Vianet who expressed his excitement of the installation and working with the Town of Caledon.

"Vianet is excited to be working with the Town of Caledon to provide this fibre optic backbone running along the rail trail," said McCullagh. "This will give Vianet the ability to deliver high speed services in the area, as well upgrade our existing tower locations near the trail to deliver higher speeds and a more reliable wireless network. The high-speed backbone gives us a jumping off point to further build rural fibre broadband and provide better service in the area that is so desperately needed."

The entire $1.4 million project is being funded by Vianet.

Several schools and surrounding businesses look forward to benefitting by having high-speed internet access. Barbara Lord, Principal of the private school King's College, located on The Gore Road in Caledon East, explains that students will have the opportunity to expand their knowledge with better access for learning.

"We are really excited about this opportunity and can hardly wait to be connected," said Lord. "This will allow us to better connect our students to the broader world and give them the chance to take advantage of many new opportunities to enhance their learning."

The installation of the 35km fibre optic cable is to begin this coming spring and is expected to be complete by the end of summer. This will allow 85 percent of Caledon in range of the line to have access to new high-speed internet.

Local music studio providing childcare during teachers’ strikes

Written By ALYSSA PARKHILL

Hit That Note Music Studio is offering child care services to local parents next week in an attempt to allow them to still attend work while knowing their child is still learning.

The studio is offering parents in the Peel Region to drop off their children at the Hit that Note Music Studio in Bolton instead of taking off work due to the teachers’ strikes.

This child care service will take place on Jan 31, Feb 4 and Feb 6 for $45 a day.

The studio has been providing music and dance programs for children, as well as activities for parents and other residents to enjoy for the past seven years.

“We basically teach every single instrument, we have about 21 staff members in total that are all qualified musicians and we have about 212 students in total to date,” said studio owner Ida Puzzo. “We do everything, we do birthday parties, musical theatre programs, we have yoga for the parents and boot camp for them to work out so this way while the kids are having their lessons they can do an hour of yoga or boot camp while their child is at the studio.”

She added, “We have a lot of parents and even members of the public who don’t even bring their kids.”

own at the Hit That Note Music Studio.

“HOURGLASS & CO. hosts in-house birthday parties at Hit That Music Note Studio, they also do off-site locations as well! We have mascots, princesses, superheroes and a variety of themes to choose from for birthday parties to cater to all ages. We also host different paint nights, some in support of local initiatives. In addition, we will be holding some children and teen acting sessions, as well as motivational and empowering sessions for children, teen and women. We will have a list of new sessions and programs being released this spring,” said an HOURGLASS & CO. representative.

With the on-going Ontario-wide teachers’ strike, this child care service will allow parents to refrain from taking work off and having a place to allow their child to continue to learn while the strikes continue.

“I have such a huge space, and we do a lot of big programs and are always worked wonderful. We set up crafts for the kids, we bake in the back room it’s about 1000 square feet. We set up a lot of programs in the back, we’ll teach a musical theatre script and at the end of the day they can perform for their parents when they come pick them up. The parents can know that when they go to work, their kid is still learning from music and even though they don’t have a background, they have some good care,” said Puzzo.

Brampton Flight Centre to host aviation seminar for local flying enthusiasts

Written By ALYSSA PARKHILL

The Brampton Flight Centre is hosting a career seminar to present a variety of different programs offered for those who want to pursue a career as an airline pilot.

The flight centre is owned and operated by the Brampton Flying Club, which is a non-profit organization established back in 1946. In the 64 years since, the organization has trained thousands of pilots. It is known as the only flight school in the country that includes its own airport.

On Feb. 5 at the Brampton Flight Centre (BFC), anyone interested in a future of becoming a pilot is invited to an evening seminar to learn about a variety of programs offered and how to become a pilot.

This seminar has taken place over the past five years and is open to anyone looking to be a professional pilot.

BFC currently has approximately 350 students in training in both professional and unprofessional programs.

“The Brampton Flight Centre is dedicated to inspiring young and mature adults in our local communities to realize their potential and pursue careers in aviation. Students will experience BFC’s state-of-the-art flight school, meet with certified flight instructors, exposure to our simulators and will discover the latest career opportunities in aviation,” says a BFC spokesperson.

Programs that will be presented to attendees are:

- Self-paced Commercial Pilot Licence
- The College Program
- Integrated Airline Transport Pilot Licence

The Brampton Flying Club takes strong pride in what they do, and trains potential pilots about importance of safety and security while in the air.

According to their website, “The Brampton Flying Club is a healthy, innovative, thriving, member owned organization that inspires excellence in the products and services that we offer. Our top priority is safety and security. The core of our business is education. We are known around the world for excellence in the development and delivery of aviation services, environmentally responsible airport planning and giving back to our community. Our extraordinary working environment attracts the best talent in the industry. We inspire a passion for the flying experience and we enrich the lives of our members, staff and our community by the work that we do.”

The seminar will take place at the Brampton Flight Centre on Feb. 5 at 7 p.m. Pre-registration is recommended and secures your spot at the event.

People today are savvy, but not smart

by Mark Pavilons

Few among us would question the fact that society is changing. Every generation brings with it a new approach, new ideas and a new slant on life. Many of our teens and 20-some-things are likely among the most tech savvy individuals that our society has produced. Good for them. But being savvy doesn't always mean being smart. Merriam-Webster defines savvy as "having or showing perception, comprehension, or shrewdness especially in practical matters." Well, in my experience and opinion, today's tech smart youth may be perceptive, but I'm not sure if they excel in "practical matters." I'd like to think my wife and I produced and raised rather intelligent kids. They are all smart in their own ways. Lexie, the university student, is wise beyond her years and exudes compassion. She's well versed in areas of justice and equality. She can manage to drive from London to Goderich to Bolton with no problem. But balancing her cheque book is another matter. She's had part-time jobs since she was young, and has developed a strong work ethic. She's quick to understand the qualities of her co-workers and knows when to stay clear of a grumpy manager. While she's months away from her university degree, I'm not sure if she's completely ready for the world. In hindsight, maybe none of us were. She's a well rounded individual mind you, but she lacks some common sense and practical methodology. She can navigate the public transit system, and has been to dozens of airports around the world, but she has trouble understanding shipping costs, fees or duty when ordering on Amazon. She's frugal, but will stop and buy an over-priced bottle of water at the gas station, just because it's convenient. Her people skills are impeccable, and she can likely carry on a conversation with pretty much anyone. She's been pretty good, but she does exhibit a certain amount of "me" when she needs or wants something. My son Liam wasn't much of an academic but is trying to focus on his future. He's a hard worker, and needs a little push more often than not. He has a great sense of humour (what can I say) but he's opinionated and stubborn. He just doesn't get why his pay cheque dwindles because of taxes. Kyleigh, at 14, is a bit of an anomaly. She's definitely assertive, outspoken and often brash and sassy. She thinks we "get" money on our debit and credit cards. Just where this money comes from is a mystery and she's not sure why there isn't an endless supply. I wonder that, too. They may be tech savvy and know their way around iTunes, Netflix and Snapchat, but I worry. When a problem arises, they're quick to call their mom, who always provides aid or advice. I'm told they're leary of calling me because my first reaction would be a stern, "I told you so" when all they need is compassion and caring. Maybe I'm old fashioned but when my dad told me to do it myself, I did it myself. Independence is learned; it comes from experience. My kids are amazing, but I doubt they could fend for themselves on a tropical island or during an apocalypse. I remember, to this very day, walk-

Health teams may face challenge

ONE BIG REASON offered for the fact that the SARS epidemic of 2003 killed 44 Ontario residents but only four British Columbians is that a Vancouver hospital was far better prepared than any hospital in Ontario. Ultimately, roughly half the Ontario deaths were health care workers who, unlike their colleagues in B.C., weren't properly protected in treating SARS patients. A lot has happened since 2003, one of the latest developments being the creation by the Ford government of a single agency, Ontario Health, and local Ontario Health Teams, to replace the Local Health Integration Network (LHINs) created by the previous government. The local agency, the Hills of Headwaters Collaborative, is responsible for the health care of the roughly 120,000 residents of the Dufferin-Caledon riding. Unlike most of the other Ontario Health Teams, the local one has a single hospital, Orangeville's Headwaters Health Care Centre, which obviously does not have all the facilities found at Toronto's Sunnybrook hospital. That particular facility is treating the first two confirmed cases of the potentially deadly coronavirus, which originated in Wuhan, China and by Wednesday had taken 132 lives. One question not yet answered by the authorities here or in China is when someone who contracts the virus becomes contagious. Is it only when the potential carrier has symptoms or several days earlier? It is known that since the virus can be transmitted without any physical contact between the carriers and those around them, all those on the plane that carried the two Sunnybrook patients from China to Pearson Airport last week are apparently being monitored for the disease. One question facing our federal government is what, if anything, to do about the roughly 250 Canadians known to be in Wuhan province, about half of whom have indicated a desire to return home. If Canada does follow the United States and several other countries in bringing their citizens home by chartered aircraft, can they be quarantined somewhere long enough to detect carriers of the virus? In the circumstances, no one knows whether there will be any significant spread of the disease in Ontario and all we've been hearing from Health Minister Christine Elliott is that the system is working and anyone with flu-like symptoms should come forward to be tested for the virus. The main advice being given is for everyone to wash their hands frequently and to use hand sanitizers where they are available. How serious is the problem? Thus far, the death toll is almost miniscule by comparison with the worst pandemic of modern times, the Spanish Flu of 1918 that probably took 50 million lives and likely played an important role in ending the First World War. Today, although we have vaccines that combat most of the influenza viruses, only about 30 per cent of Canadians will bother to get flu shots and far more will likely die this year from the flu than from the Wuhan coronavirus. If the lessons learned from SARS provide the protections clearly needed, Ontario should do as well as B.C. did in 2003, when only one health care worker and three other residents died from SARS. But what if the disease becomes a real pandemic? Perhaps something that should be considered in Ontario is a test of the Ontario Health Teams' ability to deal with such an emergency situation by having local drills that would familiarize the health care workers with the precautions they must take to protect themselves as well as those with the pneumonia-like disease symptoms. And in the meantime, one couldn't imagine a better reason for everyone to get the flu shots that have been available since November!

ing home from public school, at maybe 8 years old, during a snowstorm. My sister didn't show up to take me home, so I trudged along the streets of Etobicoke, until I found my home. Yes, I was much later than usual, causing my mom some concern. And I was quite cold and covered in snow. But even at that age, I wasn't scared or freaking out. I was driven. I had a task to do and I had to figure out it, using what God gave me. There were no phones, rides from other parents, or even a local bus on our street. I have also found that my charges don't much care for unsolicited advice. But I have so much wisdom to impart! We all have roles and responsibilities in our relationships and households. In our household I tend to be "in charge" of major bills, utilities, taxes, car insurance – all the really fun stuff! Odd because math was never my strong suit. Maybe it's my Virgo qualities that make me organized and prepared. Again, most of it came because I simply had to do it. No one held my hand or did it for me. In our younger years, my wife and I played a little bit of Sega Genesis at home (yes, I know). Through the years we watched as these games progressed, to the point where today, my son is quite the pro on his Ps4 and Xbox systems. He's also dabbled in song production and recorded a couple of songs. He watches poignant movies and really absorbs many of life's lessons. He has an amazing memory and deep down inside, a good heart. I credit my wife for giving all of our children some very good qualities. Maybe I expect too much from them. There's that old adage about tossing them in the deep end until they swim. Well, that actually happened to yours truly during his first swimming lesson. They other day, a couple of young tellers at the bank had no idea how to handle a cashier's check from the U.S. Surely this wasn't the first time this came across their desk. Alas, in another 10 days or so, I should have an answer! But I have to ask, in this technologically advanced banking system, what's the hold-up? Will being tech savvy help our kids along their respective journeys? I'm not sure. It does make many things quite convenient, but maybe we're losing some vital skills along this e-journey. I'd love to fast-forward the digital recording of society, to catch a glimpse our future selves. There's little doubt that technology will dominate humankind's evolution. Let's try to retain some humanity, common sense and compassion along the way.

The coronavirus

In an emergency, the good thing about a dictatorship is that it can respond very quickly. The bad thing is that it won't respond at all until the dictator-in-chief says that it should. All the little dictators who flourish in this sort of system won't risk their positions by passing bad news up the line until the risk of being blamed for delay outweighs the risk of being blamed for the emergency in the first place.

You can see how this works if you consider China's response to the emergence of nCov-2019 (novel coronavirus 2019), a new viral threat potentially as serious as the SARS virus of 2003. Some things it has done well, but others it did very badly, and the odds that the virus will spread globally are now probably evens or worse.

The local health authorities in Wuhan, the 11-million-strong city in central China where the virus first appeared, spotted it on December 31, when only a few dozen cases had come to their attention. That's as fast as you could ask, and they promptly shut down the seafood and wild game market where the victims caught the disease. Score: 9 out of 10.

China's national health authorities also acted quickly. On January 9 they announced that they had a brand new coronavirus on their hands, and just one day later they released its full genetic sequence online so medical researchers worldwide could start working on it. Elapsed time: 11 days. Known deaths at that point: one. Score: 10 out of 10.

But these are medical professionals, doing their duty according to internationally agreed protocols. We don't know what they recommended to China's political authorities at that point, but they must have called for widespread testing, and probably also for travel restrictions to control the spread of the virus. But nobody dared to rock the boat: nothing was done.

A pause here to recall how you control the spread of a new infectious disease for which there is no vaccine, nor any effective cure. You isolate the victims as soon as they are identified, and give them what medical support you can: some will die, but most will usually survive. And if you do that soon enough and thoroughly enough, the global pandemic never gets going.

There are often complicating factors. The spread will be far faster if the virus can pass from one person to another in the air. It will be much harder to isolate the people carrying the virus if they become infectious before they develop visible symptoms. But the methods available to slow or stop the spread are still the same:

identify the carriers and isolate them.

Now, back to what happened in China. The medical people did their job; the political people did not. It was two more weeks before the city of Wuhan was cut off from the rest of the country and the world. I live in London, 15 hours' flying time away, and during those two weeks 2,000 people arrived from Wuhan at London's airports.

Lunar New Year, the biggest holiday in China's calendar, was coming up fast, but nothing was done although half the population goes home for a visit at this time every year. Wuhan and a dozen other Hubei cities are now in lockdown, but it's too late: Wuhan's mayor, Zhou Xianwang, admits that 5 million people have already left the city for the New Year celebrations. Score: 2 out of 10.

We now have two pieces of bad news that would have made it even more urgent to seal Wuhan off had we known them at the time. The new virus does propagate through the air, and people carrying it do become infectious before they display any symptoms.

Zhou didn't dare advocate isolating the city, and neither did anybody else, until the Great Panjandrum Himself had spoken. President Xi Jinping finally spoke last Saturday (January 25), saying that China faces a "grave situation", and now the system is racing to do what it should have been done two weeks ago.

Too bad, but this pandemic (if that is what it becomes) will probably be on the same scale as the SARS virus, and that is not really horrific: deaths in the high hundreds or a few thousands worldwide. The mortality rate among those who catch it appears to be about 2%, compared to 1% for ordinary seasonal influenza. And ordinary 'flu kills about 400,000 (mostly elderly) people every year.

But one of these days something like the 1918 virus that caused the 'Spanish' influenza will emerge again. That killed around 50 million people worldwide, out of a global population only a quarter of what it is now.

Since Chinese food markets now seem to be a prime source of dangerous new 'flu-related viruses, the Chinese government has a particular responsibility to contain them early. The Chinese doctors will do their duty, as always, but it would be nice if China had its political act a bit more together before then.

OUR WORLD TODAY

Look for the helpers

The Caledon community is, generally speaking, one awesome group of people. At a population of about 66,500 and comprised of many small hamlets, neighbourhoods and villages, we are just small enough to say that we are still a community where many of us know our neighbours not just to nod and say hello but more importantly, enough to really care about them. In times of trouble, we might even rally around them. Even better, Caledon is the kind of community where even when we don't know our neighbours, we still rally around them! In a world that has been full of bad news lately, including the terrible tragedy of Flight #PS752 that impacted one of our very own, it's time we focussed on some good news for a change. To quote a phrase popularized by Mr. Rogers, (it was his mother who actually said it first) "When bad things happen in the news we should look for the helpers. You will always find people who are helping." Today I want to talk about just a few of the people in our community who are the helpers.

Caledon is blessed with an abundance of folks who spend countless hours of their time volunteering for various causes and community support agencies. Those volunteers deliver meals on wheels; they support local seniors, or volunteer with organizations serving children. Of course many of our volunteers are members of a myriad of social service clubs and organizations doing good work here. Sometimes, it's the folks who drive us home when we shouldn't be driving. Thanks, Home James. Sometimes it's as simple as a neighbour who organizes a carol sing-a-long at Christmas time for the enjoyment of families who live nearby. Thanks June Dias Simpson. Other times it's the people who recognize there are some pretty special people in Caledon who would benefit from instituting a local chapter of Special Olympics. Thank you Joe Sassine, Franca de Stefano and the many others that help to make your organization and the events you run such as a special place for local athletes. Thanks also to one of Special Olympics biggest advocates and "man about town" Jason Scorgia who promotes Special Olympics at every opportunity including through the sale of his colouring book (designed with the help of his friend Chris Tampin) and by hosting an upcoming Gala on the 28th of February – yes tickets are still available!

We have Harold and Wanda Janes who, together with their "little grey workhorse," collect items from our entire community, recycling goods to raise funds for a variety of initiatives. Anyone from Caledon is welcome to drop old TV's, computers, VCR's, keyboards, toasters and microwaves along with alcohol beverage containers, batteries and even pop and beer can tabs into the trailer that sits permanently on their drive way. They will take care of the heavy lifting and they donate all the proceeds to various organizations like the Bolton Sea Cadets, Special Olympics Caledon, Meaghan's Music Room and more recently, toward EHE Sarcoma Cancer research. Look them up on facebook to find out more. Perhaps you've heard the name Dmytro Basmat, doing great work at Che's Place for the youth in our community but today we wanted to say a thank you to Antonio Rizzo and his family who created a fabulous Christmas light display, spread the word, then collected donations from our generous community as they came to admire his home. Che's Place and the campaign to support Reese Meyer and his family thank you.

That brings us to #GoReeseGo, an outpouring of community support and love probably unlike anything we have ever seen before. It's hard to single out any one person or organization such has been the response of the community, but people like Mira Dimovski Budd for example, who single-handedly organized an online auction certainly deserve applause. As of January 25th all signs pointed to the auction raising at least $7,000, a number that's sure to climb by the time it officially closes. Again, the success of events such as this is due to both the person who steps up and all of our community who support it. Thank you. Reese's Hawks hockey family has been amazing and on Sunday, January 26th the Mississauga Steelheads organized a game day fundraiser, attended by so many from both within and outside of Caledon's borders, that it resulted in the presentation of a $25,000 cheque! The best part of that day if you've seen the pictures, was watching Reese walk out for the puck drop – something he had vowed to be ready for and worked very hard to make come true despite the many challenges he faced along the way.

The Town of Caledon will be hosting their volunteer recognition ceremony tentatively scheduled for sometime in April. The nominations have just closed and I hope you took the time to recommend someone you know. There are so many people we could feature, so many who are doing good work in our community of communities. In Valleywood some people are coming together in an attempt to build an ice rink for the kids and Cheltenham, Inglewood and Terra Cotta have a long history of wonderful people doing great things to support their communities. Don't even get me started on the number of folks who help run local soccer clubs, hockey teams, the Challenger baseball organization and more! If you know someone who should be featured here or nominated next year for a volunteer award, take the time to be sure you let us (and the Town) know! We all benefit from their time, expertise, leadership and commitment to community – on behalf of the residents of Caledon – thank you to "the helpers" for all you do!

Girlhood in 2020

Though I am very clearly, in the most obvious of ways, a feminist, I rarely describe myself with that particular label. I haven't done any major advocacy for issues that pertain especially to women, nor do I write about them (though there are many that I worry about constantly). I do support, in every way available to me, the work of feminists (especially women of colour) who are working for justice, and equality. The reality is, I have privilege. I am a straight, white woman, who lives in a country where it is safe for me to express my femininity in whatever way I choose. But this doesn't mean I uncritically live my life, oblivious to the work that still needs to be done.

But this is not a column about feminism and injustice (though more on that in the coming weeks). It's more about how I've been personally grappling with the ongoing pressures of 'girlhood' as a parent. I didn't really become aware of how deeply ingrained capitalist conceptions of man and woman are until I had children of my own. Indeed, it is in my parenting that I am the most challenged by the cultural norms that feminism has attempted to deal with for many generations now. And it is hard work. Though I should also note, the challenges are equally as confounding in parenting a boy.

Coming of age in the late 90s and 2000s meant that feminism became a sort of underground force- over the course of my childhood, feminism disappeared from pop-culture. And it is through pop culture that most children receive signals about what our world values (it transmits both deeply entrenched norms and emerging ones). For instance, in adolescence I sang the feminist anthems of Fiona Apple, Alanis Morissette, and Gwen Stefani. But then by the time I entered the teen years, those rebellious girls had faded from the spotlight and were replaced by Britney Spears, and similar popstars who I deeply resented on some level. What impact did that have on me?

Indeed, participating in or expressing traditional femininity has always felt awkward for me personally, despite the fact that I've always found all women beautiful and fascinating. But with my daughter, I want to show her that she can be whoever she wants to be- but to always appreciate her own inner strength and beauty. Unfortunately, despite all the years of western feminism, girls are still told that 'thin' is beautiful. They are still told that they should remove body hair. They are still told that makeup and diet shakes and laser hair removal is the solution if they are not born with all of the things that our culture deems beautiful.

I've read all the manuals. 'How to Raise a Conscious Child' or 'How to Raise a Feminist' or whatever. "Tell your daughters they are funny. That they are strong. That they are smart. That they are kind." etc etc. And even still, she asks me, "Mama, am I beautiful?" I tell her that of course, she is! That I love her to the moon and back for everything that she is. She IS beautiful, and funny, and brave, and strong. She crashed her pedal bike this summer and skinned her elbow badly and within a few hours she was right back on.

She's smarter than most adults I know, and often arguing with her is a game I'd rather not engage in, for certain defeat is imminent.

And even still, while I know she has the strength to make up her own mind about what she likes and dislikes, I still want to arm her with the tools to resist the crushing weight of expectations that our culture places on girls. I want her to resist. This means that I have hesitated to put her into dance class, I have never allowed her to watch the more traditional Disney films like The Little Mermaid or Cinderella. (Though we've seen Frozen 2 three times in theatres and I'm grateful to Disney for writing a narrative, at the very least, about reconciliation with indigenous peoples, protecting the natural environment, and the love between sisters). And I try to encourage her to choose practical clothing- though this is a battle I won't win. We don't watch TV with commercials, and yet somehow, she still knows about all of the latest dolls (dolls with a full face of makeup, long eyelashes, large plump lips etc etc). Luckily my kids have both accepted that plastic toys are not allowed in our home (unless they are used or LEGO). Sometimes, it feels like an uphill battle this resistance. And she's only 4! I shudder to think what the teen years will be like. How can I gently encourage her to LOVE every part of herself, and indeed, to focus on what makes her truly happy, rather than being preoccupied with her appearance, or the appearance of others? I have no clue.

All of this work is part of a larger struggle we are in with ourselves. Our planet is melting. And yet, rather than taking responsibility for this destruction, which is driven by consumerism in so many ways, corporations are telling us over and over to focus on ourselves. To cultivate our own 'well-being'- wellness, self-care, meditation, keto diets, mindful moments, strength training, self-optimization. In some ways, each of these are not bad in and of themselves. But in other ways, they still feed this dominant narrative of what is beautiful and 'good' and successful and desirable and what is not.

I don't just want my daughter to resist. I want all women to resist. Especially my close friends and my Mother. What does that look like? I don't know all the answers. But here's how I've been trying: I will never speak about my appearance, my weight or otherwise, in front of my children. I will only do exercises that are a whole lot of fun for me (I love yoga, and hiking and riding my bike, for the sheer joy of it!). I always eat a second cookie if I feel like it. I wear my emerging gray hairs with pride. But beyond that, and the daily feminist modelling that I think my kids deserve, I'm at a loss. I can't do it on my own. So I need my community to join me on this quest! Dads, Moms, Grandfathers, Grandmothers, Teachers, community elders... please don't pigeon-hole children into the two categories we've created: boy or girl. Make it safe for them to be whoever and whatever they choose.

Somebody knows something
On Jan. 22, the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) released three videos that look at unsolved homicide and missing person cases through an OPP investigative lens at OPP News. The series provides a behind-the-scenes look at investigations in the hopes of sparking new tips from the public that could potentially help solve these cases. Someone knows something.

The series focuses on the following cases:

Sonia Varaschin - The 42-year-old health care professional was brutally murdered in her home in Orangeville in 2010. Her body was found days later in a wooded area. After nine years, what do we know and where does the investigation stand?

Melanie Ethier - It's been 23 years since Melanie disappeared without a trace while walking home in a small northern town. Where do police look when there is no evidence and how do investigators stay motivated to solve the case?

Kathy Wilson - A case is not closed until it is solved. Thirty-nine years later, the OPP gets a confession and the family gets peace. This video is a rare look at the evidence and techniques the OPP can now share including interviews with the family and the undercover officer who got close to the murderer, and finally the confession 39 years after the 12-year old's disappearance.

Anyone with any information that could assist in the Sonia Varaschin or Melanie Ethier investigations can contact Criminal Investigation Services, OPP at 1-888-310-1122 or Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477 (tips).

KEEPING OTHERS WARM: Knights of Columbus donate 48 winter coats to Caledon Community Services Exchange for families in need to keep warm this winter.

Knights of Columbus donate 48 coats to CCS' The Exchange

Written By ALYSSA PARKHILL

The Knights of Columbus have made a generation donation to The Exchange in Caledon, handing over 48 winter coats to families in need, doubling the amount donated last year.

"It started with the National Knight of Columbus organization. We picked up on it, and the intention is to continue throughout the years," explains Jerry Gorman from Knight of Columbus.

The coats are purchased from a supplier in Hamilton. They have been organizing the donation and shipment of winter coats since November.

The Knights of Columbus has 1.9 million members worldwide and has strong sets of values and faith for charity, unity, fraternity and patriotism and has held these values since 1882.

According to their website, "We are men who lead, serve, protect and defend, whether we are giving out Coats for Kids, lending a hand in disaster relief efforts, supporting local pregnancy centers by donating ultrasound machines or providing top-quality financial products."

The inspiration came from the Coats for Kids program that began in 2009, and approximately 500,000 coats have been donated to children in 49 states in the US and in all 10 Canadian provinces.

"We're a fraternal organization, it supports families and the community, not just the church community," explains Gorman. "Our previous pastor was very much involved in Caledon Community Services programs. We've been involved for roughly 15 years in this type of project."

The Knights of Columbus are hosting a Basketball Free Throw on Feb. 1 at St. Michaels Catholic School in accompany with approximately seven schools in the Bolton area.

For more information about the Knights of Columbus visit kofc.org.

Orangeville’s ‘Edge’ makes huge WWE return at Royal Rumble

Written By MIKE BAKER

It was almost the perfect homecoming for Orangeville native Adam ‘Edge’ Copeland this past Sunday (Jan. 26) as he made a shocking return to action during World Wrestling Entertainment’s (WWE) annual Royal Rumble event.

Nine years on from his emotional retirement, brought on in 2011 after being diagnosed with cervical spinal stenosis, Edge was a surprise entrant in the 30-man over-the-top-rope battle royal, with a spot in the main event of Wrestlemania 36 up for grabs.

When he came in at number 21, the crowd inside Houston’s Minute Maid Park erupted as Edge’s iconic ‘You Think You Know Me’ theme hit, announcing his arrival to the match. It was clearly an emotional moment for a man who thought he’d never step foot inside the squared circle again.

Fans may have been forgiven for thinking this was nothing more than a nostalgic ploy designed to generate a big pop on the night (pop is a term used to describe strong crowd reaction at a wrestling event), but Edge did his very best to prove the doubters wrong, lasting almost 24 minutes and eliminating three individuals, including long-time friend, and rival, Randy Orton. He was one of the final three participants in the match – ultimately getting thrown out by the polarizing runner-up, Roman Reigns.

While he now resides on a plush estate in North Carolina with his wife, former WWE superstar Beth Phoenix, and two children, Edge spent much of his formative years in Orangeville. He attended Orangeville District Secondary School, alongside long-time friend and fellow professional wrestler Jason Reso, better known to wrestling fans as Christian. The pair were inducted into the school’s ‘Wall of Fame’ in 2006 following their exploits in the WWE.

Such has been Edge’s influence in Orangeville that former Town Councillor Don Kidd lobbied to have a lane named after the pro wrestler in 2017, in recognition of his accomplishments with the WWE. Ultimately, the Council of the day voted against the idea.

Otherwise known as the Rated-R Superstar, Edge is one of the most decorated WWE superstars of all time, with 31 championship reigns under his belt. While he fell just short of what would have been an incredible victory at the Royal Rumble, Edge showed up on Monday Night Raw, also held in Houston, indicating his surprise appearance was more than just a one-time thing. It has been widely reported by various online wrestling sources that Edge has signed a new three-year competitive contract with the WWE.

But, how is it that a man forced to retire almost a decade ago due to a serious neck injury is all of a sudden able to jump right back into regular competition?

“Let’s address the elephant in the room,” Edge told a live crowd of almost 20,000 in Houston on Monday (Jan. 27). “Nine years ago, I was disqualified from ever doing this again. But, I refuse to live in a world of what ifs. The second I ask myself ‘what if’, the very next second I get to work on making that ‘what if’ disappear.”

He added, “Over the years, I started to feel pretty good and I asked myself ‘what if’. What if I came back home. So, I got to work. I got a second neck surgery, and then I busted my ass. I got in the best shape of my life at 46 years old so that I could step back in this ring. So I could step back in here and end my career on my terms.”

Prior to his appearance in the 33rd Royal Rumble, Edge’s last match in the WWE was a winning effort back at Wrestlemania 27, when he successfully defended his World Heavyweight Championship against Alberto Del Rio.

While he had been dealing with chronic pain during the final months of his initial WWE run, Edge was not aware of the seriousness of his injuries. In the weeks before his match with Del Rio, after experiencing numbness in his arms, Edge underwent several tests that brought up issues stemming from a serious neck injury he sustained in 2003. Essentially, he was forced into retirement after being told by doctors that he risked paralysis, or even death, if he continued to compete.

With the many advancements in the medical field over the past decade, it would appear that Edge has received a clean bill of health from the doctors, paving the way for his incredible return.

“I’m not fooling myself. I know this might not last that long, but I hope all of you join me on this ride,” Edge said. “I know I’m a little older, I know I’m a little greyer, I know I got some crow’s feet, but it’s the road map that got me here. And I have one thing that you can’t fabricate, that you can’t fake, that you can’t force down someone’s throat and tell them you have it unless you have it, and

YOU THINK YOU KNOW ME: Orangeville native Adam ‘Edge’ Copeland made a shocking return to WWE at Sunday’s Royal Rumble, held in Houston, Texas.

He added, “If you knock me down, I get back up.”

It would appear that Edge will be working closely with Randy Orton upon his return to the company, with a match at Wrestlemania 36, to be held in Tampa, Florida on April 5, likely. On Monday, following his address to the crowd, Edge was attacked by Orton, who hit him with his finishing move, the RKO, before delivering a con-chairto, historically one of Edge’s patented moves, to leave the Orangeville native prone in the ring.

If there’s one thing Edge has proven time and time again throughout his career, it’s that he won’t be down for long. To this point, a confrontation with Orton in the near future seems inevitable.

Caledon’s Reese Meyer honoured at Mississauga Steelheads game

Written By ROBERT BELARDI

Tragedy is a neurological shockwave that bends the body and mind out of shape. It is a moment where, you might feel, you are frozen in time staring at something you simply cannot believe. That is, until realism sinks in and you begin to take action.

It was when Reese Meyer collapsed on the ice back in November in his Caledon Hawks minor league rep game, that the family and the Caledon hockey community were struck in the heart.

It’s difficult to fathom, given the health of so many people in this world today. Surely, this could not be happening to a 13-year-old boy.

The news stretched out further than the local hockey community. When it became public knowledge that Meyer had a brain tumour, hockey superstars such as Connor McDavid, Wayne Gretzky and Hayley Wickeneiser shared their love.

This young man endured surgery after surgery. Those around him trying to ensconce the young boy as he fought for his life.

As the news spread, this enigmatic event received a heart-warming response. The Mississauga Steelheads, backed by their owner Elliot Kerr, announced their home game against the Kitchener Rangers would be a charity event for the Meyer family.

Months ago this game on Jan. 26 was designated as the first Superhero themed event for the Steelheads.

Impeccable timing to say the least.

Kerr said that this story inspired him once he heard about it from his friend Katrien Mooney. Having been touched by cancer in his life, his first question was clear - “What could I do to help?” He said the truth is, “hockey is family and hockey cares.”

“How wonderful, that, it’s a superhero game, and I look at Reese Meyer as a superhero,” Kerr added on.

Mooney, has been preparing and organizing the event for some time now. She lives in Caledon East, in the same neighbourhood as the Meyers. The families have known each other for a long time, ever since their children were young.

When Mooney called Kerr, the two began to schedule a game that they each thought would be a perfect fit. She chose Jan. 26 to allow Reese some time to regain his strength so that he could attend in person. It was important, too, that they didn’t schedule the game on the same day where his own hockey team, the Caledon Hawks, had a game.

“When we picked the date, we looked at the Steelheads calendar a little closer and we saw that the theme for the game was superhero. We thought that was a fitting theme, we thought it was extremely appropriate given the fact that he has shown so much strength through all of this,” said Mooney.

Last week, the Steelheads hosted the Kitchener Rangers. 20 different minor hockey teams attended from across Ontario. Some children brought cards with letters to spell “Go Reese Go.” In other areas of the building, you saw the words “Stick it to Cancer.”

As the video display ended and the lights illuminated the arena once again, Reese Meyer walked on to the red carpet to a standing ovation. The kind that gives you goosebumps. This is the progress that he has made. He’s actually walking out onto the red carpet.

Then the young man took the microphone. He thanked everyone for being there for him, and he vowed to continue fighting, “like a Hawk”.

The family was presented with a cheque for $25,000 raised from this event. Mooney went on to add in her speech, another $3,000 was raised just last week, adding up for a grand total of $28,000.

After Meyer’s father’s speech to the crowd, thanking all of those who attended this game and for their continued love and support, Rangers winger and Caledon Hawks alumni Reid Valade stepped in with Steelheads captain Liam Ham for the ceremonial puck drop.

The Steelheads didn’t disappoint Meyer one bit once all was said and done.

Trailing to the Rangers 4-1 in the third period, the Steelheads rallied to score three times in the final period. Ty Collins got the comeback underway before Cole Shwindt scored a beautiful solo-goal and a one-timer in the dying seconds to tie it up. In overtime, Shwindt buried the game winner for his 22nd goal of the year.

After the game, the Steelheads player held up a jersey with Meyer’s name on it and the number three paying tribute.

Schwindt and Meyer each shared the honour of being named first star of the game.

A fitting way to end a tremendous tribute.

Caledon Golden Hawks offence coming alive as playoffs loom

Written By ROBERT BELARDI

The Caledon Golden Hawks could not have chosen a more opportune time for their offence to come alive.

In the last five games, the Golden Hawks have scored 27 goals, with 10 of those coming on the powerplay.

In this past week, the Golden Hawks fell on the road to the Penetang Kings 5-3, with several controversial penalty calls in the game.

In the first period, the Golden Hawks trailed by two goals, until Ethan Lajeunesse, the work horse that he is, put a goal on the board. Head Coach Stan Kondrotas has praised Lajeunesse, for his persistence and courage on the ice.

In the second period, the Golden Hawks scored two goals, and with momentum on their side, a victory seemed imminent.

That was until the penalty trouble came along.

The Kings rallied from behind thanks to two powerplay goals from Brandon Bressette. Much to the dismay of the Golden Hawks, Brayden Irwin added a fifth goal in the third period.

In total, the Golden Hawks were punished for 34 minutes in the sin bin with 14 infractions.

In their return to home ice to face the Midland Flyers, the team could not have bounced back any other way. With one rule of course.

There was no impunity to those who took bad penalties. Kondrotas made it clear, if you were undisciplined, you sat on the bench.

In an effort to tap into the player's minds, the boys immediately got on the scoreboard thanks to Ethan Lajeunesse. The improved powerplay was confounding for the Flyers penalty kill to solve.

It didn't take too much time before Marc Bottero found a way past Zach Mather, twice before the end of the period.

In the second period, the Golden Hawks' powerplay struck again. Alex Mourani's shot from the slot through traffic beat Maher. Shortly after, a sweet wrister from the hashmarks from Dante Zuccaro sent Maher to the bench, with backup Nicholas Porretta playing out the rest of the game between the posts.

Later on, in the second period, the Flyers were not too shy to display their frustrations, checking players after the whistle and since that moment, both teams began to scrap it out even more.

Got to love Junior C hockey eh?

In the third period, Alex Rasonen showcased what the penalty kill can do. He broke free on a breakaway, dodged a sprawling Porretta who sprung out of his crease and buried the puck into the empty net.

Midway through the third period, Marc Bottero completed his hat trick. The forward now has scored seven goals in his past three games.

He shared after the game with the Caledon Citizen, the true reason for his goal streak as of late.

Bottero explained, "Just shooting the puck, my teammates have been helping me out. It's not a one man show, teammates got to help you out, give you the puck. Also, find the areas and kind of get noticed and find the small areas, where you can shoot the puck and when the play is in the right spot, it goes in.

WHAT A PLAY: Marc Bottero tips Dante Zuccaro's point shot for his second goal in the first period to give the Golden Hawks a commanding three-goal lead.

With the Golden Hawks facing the Kings once again on the road this Friday and the chippy, Orillia Terriers on the road this Saturday, for the final two regular season games, head coach Stan Kondrotas shares what the boys have been doing to produce good results.

"They're being where they need to be. There's little more determination, little more hard work. First to the puck, keeping the high guy where he needs to be. Being able to pinch down walls, you create all sorts of havoc when you do that and you know, we're moving pucks."

On the verge of playoff hockey, the Caledon Golden Hawks organization is giving you the chance to order your very own Moose Kit.

This kit comes with a personalized sweater of a player, two packs of team hockey cards and a team poster. All proceeds will be donated to the Ronald McDonald House. The cut off for this is Feb. 2. Email mooseme@ahghockey.com for more details.

Local football stars commit to Queen's Gaels for upcoming football season

Written By ROBERT BELARDI

A pair of St. Andrew's football stars finalized their letters of intent last week to join the Queen's Gaels next year.

Aurora native Brendan Dilworth and Caledon native Nathan Falconi have been gifted full scholarships.

As a testament to their football careers at St. Andrew's College, both players earned the prestigious Addison Award. In memory of Harry J. Addison, this prize is presented to graduating football players who have made an outstanding contribution to the program at the school.

Both players were team captains this past year and almost ended their career with a title, if it was not for injuries in the final against Huron Heights Secondary School.

One of their most recent memories together outside of high school football was their experience as a part of Team Ontario in the International Bowl last year. The boys took on Team USA beneath the floodlights at the home of the Dallas Cowboys in Arlington, Texas. Although the team ultimately lost, Falconi scored a touchdown, and the experience gained at AT&T stadium was unlike anything they had gotten before.

Now, their careers take a new step in a place where school and football are prioritized above all else.

At 6'2, Dilworth is a force to be reckoned with. He can play on the offensive and defensive side of the line. He is a physical lineman with incredible intelligence on play calling throughout the others he plays with.

As for Falconi, his skills are similar to New Orleans Saints player Taysom Hill. He can play quarterback, running back, wide receiver and even safety in some cases due to his speed and his versatility.

Flaxman says he loves that feature Falconi will bring to the team and how he will be an x-factor in the Gaels' no huddle offence.

"He's a bit of a swiss army knife, he can kind of do a bit of everything. He can play some quarterback, he can play some running back, he can play some receiver and that is exactly how we will utilize him. His primary position will be at the receiver position," Flaxman said.

Falconi received multiple offers from other schools in Canada and the United States. He shares why he chose Queen's above all else.

"I knew a lot of coaches there. Coach Flaxman, coach Nesbitt and all of them. I've known them from Team Ontario and everything since Grade 9. I was comfortable with the coaches at that point and after visiting two weeks ago and seeing the facilities and everything. It felt right."

On top of playing football, the boys are required to adhere to standards held by the team and the school. Students will be taught how to be student athletes. The tools to be successful will be provided to these boys.

Structure is a big thing with mandatory study halls and freshman checks along the
