Toll lanes included in 427 extension plans

By Bill Rea

The proposed extension to Highway 427 is going to include provisions for toll lanes.

That was among the details that came out of a public open house session in Vaughan last week. It was hosted by the Ministry of Transportation (MTO).

Project Manager Iqbal Muhammad said high-occupancy toll (HOT) lanes would be an extension of high occupancy vehicle (HOV) lanes.

"It would give a choice to other people," he commented.

Chris Copeland, an environmental planner with MTO, said there are provisions for HOT lanes, but there's been no decision yet on whether they will be used, or the technology involved.

"We don't know what it is yet," he said.

The Province is maintaining that HOT lanes are an important part of the transportation strategy. It was announced in December that

MTO has started long-term planning for the implementation of HOT lanes all over the Greater Toronto and Hamilton Area.

HOT lanes will work roughly the way HOV lanes do. Vehicles with enough occupants will not be charged a toll. The hope is HOT lanes will promote behavioural changes, encouraging people to form carpools.

That should reduce congestion, since every carpool takes at least one vehicle off the road.

The plan is to extend the road to Major Mackenzie Drive. There have been calls that the road should go further north, but Muhammad said the current project is only looking as far as Major Mackenzie.

The actual project is going to involve work on the stretch from Albion Road to Major Mackenzie (roughly 10.6 kilometres). Information at the meeting stated MTO believes the extension will improve the ability of the provincial transportation network to accommodate future travel demand, improve traffic flow between Peel and York Regions, solve traffic congestion issues and improve the flow of goods, provide greater truck accessibility to and from the Canadian Pacific Intermodal Facility, and provide commuter with additional options and connection.

The hope is construction can start sometime in 2017, but

Widening of roads in the works

Copeland could not narrow that down any more. They are looking to have the work completed in 2021.

There have been previous environmental assessments dealing with the proposed extension. The latest, completed in January, calls for eight lanes from Highway 7 to Rutherford

Road, and six lanes north to major Mackenzie. There are also plans to widen the highway from a point south of Albion Road to Highway 7 from six to eight lanes, with provisions to have two of those lanes (one northbound and one southbound) available for HOV or HOT. The stretch south of Highway 7 would have a concrete barrier median in the middle, with a storm sewer underneath. There would also be a concrete barrier and storm sewer on the road north to Rutherford. There would be a median ditch north of that.

The plan is to have modifications to various existing structures at the CN Rail crossing, Albion Road, Steeles Avenue, Highway 407 and Highway 7 to allow for the road widening. There will also be three new interchanges constructed. They will be at Langstaff Road, Rutherford and Major Mackenzie.

York Region is planning to widen Major Mackenzie to six lanes. That road connects with Coleraine Drive at Regional Road 50, and that is part of the Bolton Arterial Road (BAR).

Caledon residential property values increased since 2012

The Municipal Property Assessment Corporation (MPAC) began mailing Property Assessment Notices last week in Caledon, where assessed values of residential property values have increased on average 6.3 per cent per year since 2012.

Every four years, MPAC conducts a province-wide assessment update and mails Property Assessment Notices to every property owner in Ontario. In 2016, MPAC will update the assessed values of every property in Ontario. All properties will have a legislated valuation date of Jan. 1, 2016.

MPAC looks at sales and compares properties to similar properties that have sold in a particular area.

“Our assessments reflect the local real estate market and property owners in Caledon may be interested to know the value of their home has increased over the last four years,” commented Greg Baxter, director of Valuation and Customer Relations in MPAC’s Mississauga office.

In Caledon, the typical residential property is assessed at approximately $644,000.

“Property owners should ask themselves if they could have sold their property for its assessed value on January 1, 2016,” Baxter said. “If the answer is yes, then their assessment is accurate and no further action is required. If not, we are committed to working with them to get it right.”

Property owners can visit the website aboutmyproperty.ca to learn more about residential market trends in their area and how their property was assessed. By using the Roll Number and unique Access Key on their Property Assessment Notice, they can also see the information MPAC has on file for their property and compare it to others in their area.

Property assessment information is provided to municipalities for property tax purposes. Property owners can also learn more about the relationship between property assessment and taxation through aboutmyproperty.ca

MPAC’s province-wide assessment updates of property values have exceeded international standards of accuracy. MPAC’s property values and data are also used by banks, insurance companies and the real estate industry.

“We are committed to working with property owners if they have questions about their assessment,” Baxter said.

For more information, property owners can visit aboutmyproperty.ca or contact MPAC at 1 866-296-MPAC (6722).

DNA leads to arrest in March incident

A construction company on Nixon Road in Bolton contacted Caledon OPP March 17 to report that a work vehicle had been broken into overnight.

As a result of the offence, the involved vehicle sustained extensive damage to the interior and exterior, and more than $23,000 worth of equipment had been stolen from inside the rear compartment.

Police, along with assistance from the OPP’s Forensic Identification Unit and Street Crime Unit, were able to solve this investigation effectively by carefully examining the crime scene and gathering evidence that was left behind. Due to DNA, a positive link was made to an accused individual.

A 34-year-old from Brampton was arrested and charged with theft over $5,000, mischief under $5,000 and failure to comply with recognizance.

Planting trees in ValleyWood

There was no shortage of volunteer help out recently to plant trees in ValleyWood for the Toronto and Region Conservation Authority (TRCA). It was a family event as Jamie Mackness of Bolton was assisted by Alyx Calder and their children Arya and Cyrus, 2. Ashley Ventura and Jorja Stevens of the 101st Brampton Girl Guides were getting some planting pointers from Diana Wilson of TRCA.

14 High Cost Home Inspection Traps You Should Know About Weeks Before Listing Your Dufferin-Peel Home for Sale

DUFFERIN-PEEL – According to industry experts, there are over 33 physical problems that will come under scrutiny during a home inspection when your home is for sale. A new report has been prepared which identifies the fourteen most common of these problems, and what you should know about them before you list your home for sale.

Whether you own an old home or a brand new one, there are a number of things that can fall short of requirements during a home inspection. If not identified and dealt with, any of these 14 items could cost you dearly in terms of repair. That's why it's critical that you read this report before you list your home. If you wait until the building inspector flags these issues for you, you will almost certainly experience costly delays in the close of your home sale or, worse, turn prospective buyers away altogether. In most cases, you can make a reasonable pre-inspection yourself if you know what you're looking for, and knowing what you're looking for can help you prevent little problems from growing into costly and unmanageable ones.

To help home sellers deal with this issue before their homes are listed, a free report entitled "14 Things You Need to Know to Pass Your Home Inspection" has been compiled which explains the issues involved.

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your FREE copy of this report call toll-free 1-866-500-3429 and enter 302. You can call any time, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Get your free special report NOW to learn how to ensure a home inspection doesn't cost you the sale of your home.

Young women wanted for Girls Can Too program

There are a lot of things girls can do, and three local young woman plan to demonstrate that this summer.

Bolton resident Dana Pugh said they are coordinating Girls Can Too, for women of high school age.

Pugh said they are university students who are passionate about environmental education and making a change in the community.

The program will start July 4 at Bolton Camp, and Pugh said they will be working on a number of projects, like maintaining trails, constructing a boardwalk, making garden boxes, etc.

“We have noticed that females are given less opportunity to explore trade skill related jobs such as construction, and environmental careers,” she stated. “Through our hands-on projects, such as building a boardwalk and trail restoration, we hope to provide our program volunteers with the opportunity to explore hands-on tasks with an environmental focus.”

As well, she said there will be training sessions with professionals from various different specialties, like tool training, architecture aquatic ecosystems, etc.

Pugh said the program was created by herself, Nadia Zanardi and Danielle Scepanovic. They “set out to create a program that gives female high school students the opportunity and the encouragement to learn about construction and ecology in an entirely hands-on way.”

“Research from the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education indicates that women are underrepresented in high school apprentice programs for the skilled trades,” she observed. “Although high schools offer trades classes, such as wood shop and auto shop, they are typically male-dominated, making it difficult for women to receive the support and encouragement required to gain access to the skilled trades.”

She also cited Statistics Canada reports that women aged 15 and older are 27 per cent more likely to be employed in the sales and services sector, while men of the same age were more 26 per cent likely to be in management and skilled trades positions.

“These gender gaps will remain unchanged if young women are not provided with opportunities to learn about, and gain hands-on professional experience in the skilled trades and environmental sectors,” she stated.

There will be four sessions lasting two weeks, and Pugh said they are hoping to have 10 to 15 girls per session. It will be free.

Took a while to make Caledon Trailway what it is

By Bill Rea

The Caledon Trailway is one of the showpieces in Caledon’s trail network, but it’s only been available for less than 30 years.

Caledon East resident Wayne Noble recently offered some facts about the trail to members of the Caledon East and District Historical Society.

It used to be a rail line snaking through Caledon. Noble said it was started by the Hamilton and North Western Railway in the 1870s, and it was eventually taken on by the Grand Trunk, and later Canadian Pacific. There also used to be a lot of stations along the line, including in places like Caledon East and Cheltenham. The last passenger train stopped in Caledon East in 1960. After that, there were a few freight trains passing by.

Noble recalled the Caledon East station was over a creek, and he remembered playing there as a kid, “something that would never be allowed today.”

The station was closed and demolished in 1971, and a couple of years later, the line was used as a shooting location for the CBC mini series The National Dream, based on books by Pierre Berton. Students from the local public school were used as extras in that project. That caused a lot of excitement in the community in those days.

“Now, when we see a movie production, it’s more of a pain in the butt,” he remarked.

The line was used in those days for walking and hiking, as well as to get to fishing spots and cross-country skiing. Noble said there were always people using it, even though it was private property.

Not long after the Mississauga train derailment of 1979, there was talk of using the line as a possible alternative for hauling dangerous goods.

“It wasn’t long after that that the tracks got taken up,” he said.

The Town eventually decided to buy the land in 1989. Noble recalled Emil Kolb was Caledon’s mayor at the time, and he was in favour of the acquisition. It turned out that council was split on the idea, and Kolb was obliged to break the tie.

Noble said the Town paid $30,000 for the trail, and there were some who said at the time it was a waste of money.

“It was one of the greatest achievement for council at the time, and especially Emil,” Noble declared.

He said it’s saved millions of dollars over the years. The trunk line sewers serving Caledon East run under the trail. “It saved a fortune then,” he observed.

He added the well that serves Inglewood is on Highway 10. The connecting pipes were installed under the trail, avoiding the expense of running them south to Olde Base Line Road. The fibre optic cable serving Town Hall also makes use of the trail.

The early 1990s saw a lot of community involvement on the trail, along with considerable volunteer work. A committee was formed, and that led to such things as uniform signage along the route.

It was also decided that no motorized vehicles would be allowed on the trail, except in emergencies or for maintenance. Gates have been installed at all access points, but they can be opened in an emergency.

Although it cost $30,000 to buy the 37 kilometres of trail, there was still work to be done. There were bridges and fences that needed to be fixed.

“So much of it back then was being done by volunteers,” Noble said.

The federal government established the Trans-Canada Trail in 1992, with the idea of a network that would run from one end of the country to the other. The trail running through Caledon, from Inglewood to Highway 9, was designated part of that.

The Town also applied to have the first pavilion along the trail in Caledon East, and there was also an effort to get the area cleaned up.

“When I was a kid, it was basically a dump down there,” he remarked.

Volunteers pitched in, and got the area cleaned up in about six weeks.

“I’ve never seen such work done so quickly,” he commented.

The pavilion went up in June 1996. Broadcaster Lloyd Robertson was on hand for the opening, along with about 5,000 others. It was the first of 86 that are now standing.

The work on the Trans-Canada Trail has not yet been completed, but Noble said there are hopes it can be done in time for the country’s 150th anniversary celebrations next year.

The trail has seen its share of improvements over the years, an important one being the bridge crossing Highway 10. He said there had been calls for it for several years, since there was no safe way to get between the two portions. But there were many people who thought they would never see it, including himself.

“It’s a pie in the sky,” he said he remembered thinking.

It eventually took a lot of time and political will to get the project started. There were some who said it was a waste of money, while Noble remembers thinking nothing would happen until someone was killed.

Work finally got started on the bridge in 2006, and it was completed the night of Nov. 28, and opened Christmas day.

The trail requires on-going maintenance, and Noble said it’s a little awkward to get volunteers to do it because of liability issues.

The Town started cutting bushes along the side of the trail twice a year. Some of the skirts at the roadways have been paved to make things easier for cyclists.

There are also the push-button traffic signals where the trail crosses Airport Road, and Noble said a lot of people use it.

“Make a Difference” by Brigitte Malo

I can’t tell you how many times I’ve heard my husband say, “I’m running into town to pick something up; need anything?”

How easy it is to just jump into your vehicle and drive.

We don’t realize how many destinations we drive to when running errands in our daily lives. I’m sure if you asked a senior, who drove for more than 50 years and now doesn’t drive anymore, they would easily name dozens of places they need to go: the bank, post office, grocery store, doctor’s office, hair dresser, pharmacy, social programs and even to simply go to a coffee shop and visit with friends. All of these places are not as accessible to seniors as they once were.

Affordable transportation for older adults in Caledon is critical to helping them continue living independently and stay connected to their communities.

Caledon Community Services’s Transportation Program is in need of volunteer drivers to help meet seniors’ increasing need for local transit support. Our volunteer drivers not only provide the ride; they make friends with their passengers, provide a door-to-door service and help raise awareness of the need for drivers. Most important, they play a large part in ensuring independence and a better quality of life for our Caledon seniors.

Becoming a volunteer driver is not a lifetime commitment. You can’t know if it’s a good fit unless you try it. If you enjoy driving, how about sharing your mobility and independence with someone in your community and make a positive impact? The drives and routes are flexible and tailored to your schedule and availability. Mileage is also paid out to our volunteer drivers to cover their gas costs.

If you are interested in making a difference or have any questions regarding volunteer driving, please contact Brigitte Malo, CCS Volunteer Resources at 905-584-2300, ext. 235 or bmalo@ccs4u.org

No end in sight in battle over proposed water-skiing events

By Todd Taylor

In 2009, Caledon orthodontist Cliff Singer realized his dream of owning a rural property in Mono.

Singer and his wife Judy fell in love with the property that was home to a man-made lake, courtesy of an old worked-out gravel pit on Airport Road, about a kilometre north of Mono Mills.

Singer is a doting father and a devoted family man. Other than the tranquility that the property offers, the family's main motivation was to find a private waterway where their daughter Chantal could practise water skiing. But the Niagara Escarpment Commission (NEC), the Town of Mono, and some concerned citizens are not in favour of the Singer family practising their craft in an area known for its peace and quiet.

The property owner's application to NEC to hold up to four water-skiing events annually on the 200-acre site was only partially successful, the regulator giving only approval for a three-year period. The result has been both an appeal by the Singers and a cross-appeal by the Town, which has hired a senior Toronto law firm to challenge the partial approval.

Singer describes himself as someone from an extremely humble background. In fact, he never had the opportunity to water-ski as a child.

"I first tried it in my early 30s and fell in love with it. I hope water-skiing will not be presented as an elitist sport. Particularly, when Caledon and Dufferin County actively support the equestrian community. Over 10 million Americans have water-skied. I think the average person is far more likely to afford a water-skiing ride than a thoroughbred horse which would allow them to participate in an equestrian event."

Singer, who is a level-3 judge for water-skiing events, has offered to give back to the Town of Mono youth "by introducing them to a sport they might not otherwise have an opportunity to try."

It is true that Singer has been referred to as a "pain in the ass" by some in his community.

Discussions with him via phone are thoughtful and passionate, yet his persistent nature can be off-putting. Singer himself will admit that he has indeed upset a few people in the community with single-minded pursuit of his water-skiing dreams.

Although no one will overtly admit their personal biases against Singer, one could certainly connect the dots to see that in some instances this is indeed the case.

Singer has privately made accusations about close relationships on the NEC with town staff. He has also wondered aloud that "perhaps the plan is to make sure I can do nothing with my property and eventually (the Town of Mono) buy it themselves for 50 cents on the dollar. There is a term for this in the U.S., it is called a regulatory taking. You reduce the value of someone's land by regulatory restrictions and then the same regulatory entity down the road buys it at a reduced cost."

Mono Mayor Laura Ryan is not aligned to Singer's description of events. Although Ryan did agree to be interviewed for this article, she admitted it was difficult to make public comments as the Singer situation is currently in due process. It was extremely important to the Mayor that she not be seen negotiating via the press.

The Mayor shared that Mono council does indeed have an issue with the way NEC works. NEC is backwards. They approve things first and ask for input afterwards. Ryan admitted that the process is hard on the applicant and residents.

"The only way we could get them to re-look at the issue is to appeal it," she said.

Although the Town of Mono is not the decision-maker, it certainly can act as a commenting body. In the end, council was uncomfortable with what Singer was proposing. As such, council wanted more answers to some of their concerns. Ryan described council concerns as "the scope of what was being allowed. There could be events there on an annual basis. The volume of spaces for parking was originally supposed to be 40 spaces, then they came back with over 200 spots."

In addition, there were concerns about road occupancy and potential damage to the road base. (The parking issue relates to the space available on the huge site. Singer and a spokesman for the water-skiing association said the events proposed would not see more than 40 cars using the space.)

I did ask Ryan if there were personal biases towards Cliff Singer and his cause. The Mayor responded by stating simply, "There is no foundation to this."

She went on to explain that working in public life is a small network. One would work with many of these people over a career. Singer was trying his best to throw whatever he can out there. Council was not taking sides, she insisted, "we are simply trying to determine what is best for our land use. Will it disrupt the traffic flow or the environment? We have a responsibility to ensure this is not going to come back and be a problem. Council does not feel it is being unfair."

In a separate interview, Deputy Mayor Ken McGhee agreed with the Mayor's assessment. McGhee shared that the gravel company had mined below the water table, and this could cause issues such as murky water. He explained that council believes this is a sensitive property. He also insisted that there is no personal bias against Singer.

McGhee's vision for his home area includes a high level of environmental consciousness, an area that has a night sky policy, does not allow industries that use excessive amounts of water, and "any other activity that may have a long-term impact on the area."

Ryan wants to continue to operate the municipality in a way that the majority of residents feel they should be maintaining. That is to celebrate the areas ecological features and tremendous quiet. Although the Singer case could very well end with high legal fees for the residents of Mono, Ryan spoke for council by saying they feel "this is in the best interest of all residents."

In the end, council could not get a clear vision of the intent of NEC. The Mayor was passionate when stating "we must be cautious for our residents. We must be cautious about what the results to the area would be if events were to be held there."

In the end, the Mayor admitted that there were attempts to settle via mediation with Singer, but there were differing visions of what the outcome should look like. "The sides could not agree," she said.

As for Singer, he has vowed to continue on in his quest for up to four water-skiing events on his property.

Singer is a driven man, one who will not give up his mission to give back to a sport that has given so much so much to his family.

He said the bureaucracy he has had to endure has been taxing on him personally and financially. Legal costs, assessment fees, and time away from work have cost the Singer family much as they pursue their dream.

Researching this story has uncovered a significant amount of information that is quite frankly daunting. Singer calls the entire process "regulatory abuse" and a waste of taxpayer resources. Hearings with NEC will occur mid-summer this year. Resolution to this ongoing affair seems to be in the distant future.

Deirdrey Francois appearing at CrossCurrents

Deirdrey Francois will be among the featured performers appearing tomorrow (Friday) night at CrossCurrents Cafe in Bolton.

The DD Francois Ensemble, with Alex Severinets on guitar and Viktor Khomenko on bass, will present a combination of jazz and blues, rock and funk, along the theme of The Rollercoaster of Love.

"Deidrey's performance a year ago left us thrilled and amazed," said Steve Slutsky. "Her voice has been compared to Aretha Franklin. She sings with power, presence, energy and conviction. Her accompanists, Alex and Viktor, are virtuoso musicians in their own right. She deserves the kind of large, enthusiastic audience we have been enjoying lately. It will be a joyous experience. I strongly urge you not to miss her!"

The doors will open at 7:30 p.m., and the entertainment is scheduled to begin at 8.

CrossCurrents Cafe is at Bolton United Church on Nancy Street. Use the side entrance.

BIA events starting in June

By Bill Rea

Midnight Madness is not going to be hitting Bolton this August, but there are other new events in the works for the summer, planned by the Bolton Business Improvement Area (BIA).

BIA Chair Jean Carberry said banners have been prepared to promote the new events, and they have been posted on the streets of the village.

“The idea is that they’re publicizing the events to come,” she said.

The events include the Bolton Farmers’ Market, which soon will be starting another year in the municipal parking lot in Bolton, operating every Saturday.

And there are going to be a lot of other happenings taking place every fourth Saturday over the coming months, starting June 25.

They will include Music and Dance at the Royal Courtyards, sidewalk sales involving local merchants and Art in the Park. This will be in the park where Queen Street crosses the Humber River. As well, they are planning A Taste of Bolton, in which local restaurants will be offering special menu items.

There is some regret at not having the Madness this year, and Carberry said it could be resurrected in coming years.

“It seems to have changed over the years,” she said, adding the costs were mounting.

She added it used to be an evening with all the local businesses taking part.

“It kind of evolved away from that,” she observed, adding it wasn’t benefitting the local businesses as much any more.

She also pointed out the construction taking place on King Street this summer represented another complication.

Carberry commented that the Farmers’ Market has been attracting people to the core Saturdays. “We’re hoping that every fourth Saturday, additional attractions will bring a lot more people,” she said.

United Way announces strategic investments in mental health supports

United Way of Peel Region recently announced an investment of more than $1.3 million supporting critical mental health services to meet the growing need in Caledon, Brampton and Mississauga.

Mental illness is the second leading cause of disability and premature death among Canadians, according to United Way. One in five will experience diagnosable mental health problems or illnesses in their lifetime, and 70 per cent of them will occur during childhood or adolescence.

In Peel, this figure represents more than 250,000 people. Stigma and lack of awareness of mental health supports are key challenges facing Peel’s population. There is a six-month waitlist for mental health supports, 12 per cent of Peel students surveyed had seriously considered suicide and six per cent had tried it at least once in the past 12 months.

Police units are responding to an increasing number of mental health calls, representing a 96 per cent increase since 2009.

“We see the impact of mental health and addictions in our hospital emergency departments, our work places and our schools,” observed United Way of Peel Region President and CEO Shelley White. “We need to significantly increase access to community based mental health services in Brampton, Caledon and Mississauga to meet the needs of our growing, diverse communities.”

“Police are called upon to assist individuals suffering from mental illness at an alarming rate that seems to increase yearly,” commented Peel Regional Police Chief Jennifer Evans. “It puts officers and citizens at risk due to the limited amount of mental health resources available in the community.”

“As our community continues to grow, so does the need for quality mental health and addictions services,” said Dr. David Kocerginski, chief of psychiatry at William Osler Health System. “Each year, we see and treat more than 85,000 people through our inpatient and outpatient mental health and addictions services, and care for over 7,500 patients with mental health issues in Osler Emergency Departments. With the support of partners like the United Way, we can continue to offer even greater access to the mental health and addictions care that our community needs, closer to home.”

United Way is focused on poverty reduction. Collectively, they work to reduce poverty, prevent poverty and support people living in crisis right now. Through research and best practice, they know that mental health and addictions play a critical role in feeding into the cycle of poverty.

Across the region, there is significant need for increased supports, education, outreach and advocacy. The $1.3 million announced recently will go to drive education, awareness, counseling, family supports and outreach strategies.

One of the best opportunities to break the cycle of poverty is to prevent and address mental health issues before it is too late.

With such great taste,
we always felt a little under dressed.

HFFA celebrates with website launch

Headwaters Food and Farming Alliance (HFFA) is celebrating Local Food Week by launching a new website (hffa.ca) with a celebration for all ages at the Orangeville Farmers' Market this coming Saturday (June 4).

HFFA is an alliance of residents involved in the food system in Headwaters, from farmers to foodies, and includes a range of businesses, governments and community groups. HFFA is working to build a food system in the Headwaters that is productive, sustainable, transparent and fair to support the well-being of residents and contribute to a prosperous and equitable economy.

The website (hffa.ca) extends HFFA's efforts virtually, bringing the Headwaters community together to communicate with each other and learn all about what is going on with local farmers, suppliers, growers and educators.

It provides information about local food events and an interactive directory where you can find local foods, on-farm stores, you-pick farms, local farmers' markets and other vendors.

In addition to finding local foods, the website has a What's Happening section for local events and activities. There are project profiles that explain what HFFA is working on, including the Farm to School program, which invites farmers into the classroom, and the Food Club program, which fills knapsacks with local foods for kids to take home.

There are lots of opportunities for the public to get involved or support local causes. According to the co-chair of the Education, Literacy and Access (ELA) committee, Bob Megens, "The HFFA website is a great resource that connects people to what's happening with local food in Headwaters."

"Our new website puts a focus on all things food in the Headwaters: entrepreneurship, education and access," Janet Horner, a committee member of HFFA and executive director of the Golden Horseshoe Food and Farming Alliance, added.

The HFFA Education, Literacy and Access committee will have an interactive booth at the Orangeville Farmers' Market from 9 to 1 p.m. that promises fun for the entire family. There will activities and information on how to enrich your lives with local food experiences.

HFFA is a project of Headwaters Communities in Action (HCIA) that encourages everyone to become involved in the health and well-being of their community.

Local Food Week is an initiative of Ontario's Local Food Act. Now in its third year, it dedicates the first week of June to celebrating those who grow, produce, harvest, buy and sell local food.

Don't go too Conservative

The Institute for Canadian Values (ICV) is upset and worried that Ontario Progressive Conservative Leader Patrick Brown is going to liberalize the party.

The release issued last week by ICV stated he has promised to liberalize the federal Conservative party. That puzzles us just a bit. Although Brown spent several years as a Conservative MP in Ottawa, he now leads the provincial party. So exactly what impact he's expected to have at the federal level is not clear.

What is clear, however, is that a party wishing to form governments at the federal level in this country had better be prepared to cross spectrums, and that might not be too appealing to the staunch Conservative element in this land.

No matter what our political stripes, we believe most Canadians want a government that is inclusive, and which tries to embrace the wants and desires of as many Canadians as possible. That's not an easy thing to do in a country as vast as this one. We have been hearing about western alienation for years. But we have also heard about troubled times in the Atlantic provinces. And there are still a significant number of people in Quebec who would like to see the country split up. A party that hopes to govern and be inclusive has got to realize and appreciate those differences.

Staunch conservatives out there might not want to hear this, but a Conservative party that wants to be successful has to lean to a certain extent to the left to attract broader support.

There are some who will cite Stephen Harper and the impressive showing he accomplished in the 2011 election to form a majority government. It does seem to demonstrate that Conservatives can stick to their guns and be successful.

But there were two major factors in play in '11 that are not likely to repeat themselves. One was the fact that the Liberals had ineffective leadership under Michael Ignatieff, and that the new Democrats had inspiring leadership under the late Jack Layton.

Besides, was Harper really that impressive? In 2006, his first campaign at the head of the party, he was only able to obtain a minority in the House of Commons, although the Liberals, who had been governing, were mired in scandal. He did a little better in 2008, but it took the leadership dynamics of the two opposition parties to give him a majority in '11.

And look what happened to the Conservatives in 2015, when they had to face a rejuvenated Liberal party with a vibrant and energetic leader.

There is nothing wrong with being conservative. Such a philosophy represents values that are held dear by many Canadians. But as it the case with any political position, some of them are more conservative than others.

There was a time when Conservatives thought they were no longer being represented by their party. That led to the formation of the Reform Party of Canada in the late 1980s and early '90s. But the Reform Party is a memory today. We have to wonder what history books written 50 years from now will have to say about them. Will they be remembered for anything more than splitting the conservative vote in this country and giving Jean Chretien a long-term stay in the Prime Minister's Office?

In time, federal Conservatives are going to pick a new leader. That person, who ever he or she is, will have to be able to draw support from the various areas of the party. And once successful, that leader will have to be able to get support from all over the country; that is if the Conservatives are going to form the government.

There are some conservatives who maintain their party should not get too close to the Liberals. Are these people interested in pleasing themselves, or Canadian voters, who make the decision as to who governs?

And to those who don't want to see a Conservative party lean even a little bit close to the Liberals, we have to wonder if they like what they see in Ottawa now?

Rotary Club of Palgrave's Weekly Rotary Minute

By Ian Kittle

We all choose to give back for different reasons. And the avenues we choose to do so by are very personal decisions.

I spent many years of my life volunteering from coaching t-ball, to being a Beaver/Scout leader, joining Neighbourhood watch — to name a few.

When I was lucky enough to retire, I wanted to continue giving back to the community that I lived in. When my wife and I settled in Palgrave, I sought out the means to do just that.

I had my "check list" that I needed whatever service club I joined to meet . . . it went something like this:

1. I wanted to continue volunteering;
2. I wanted to volunteer in a different way than I had before;
3. We wanted to meet a new circle of friends;
4. I wanted to assume new responsibilities;
5. I wanted to feel good every time I came to a meeting.

With all the "checks" on my list taken care of, I know that — by my actions of joining Rotary and being an active, engaged Rotarian — I am making our community a friendlier and "gooder" place!

Too soon to say

In some sports, there is such a thing as Silly Season.

It's a period, usually well into the campaign, but before the runs for the playoffs commence. It seems like various players are looking at positioning themselves, not for the rest of the season, but for where they hope to end next season.

It makes some sense to me. Even the most avid sports fan has to take the occasional break during the action.

Silly Season occurs in other endeavours that have nothing to do with athletics.

Take politics, for example.

There are points in the term of any government when the policies and issues seem to take a back seat, at least for a time, to jockeying.

Looking south of the border, we all know this is an election year, with a sitting president who is not eligible to run again. So the very real question is who's going to replace him. The two major parties have been busy for the last couple of months essentially weeding out those who will not advance. But things seemed to have settled down for a while. I think it's pretty clear by now who the Republicans and Democrats are going to nominate for the big job, but their respective conventions are still some weeks away. After that, things will heat up.

So I wouldn't be surprised if there are some interesting developments, if not out and out foolishness, in the time leading up to the conventions.

In terms of federal politics in Canada, we haven't had a Silly Season yet. I don't think that will come for a while. It's only been a couple of months since the Liberals under Justin Trudeau won their big majority, so I think they're still busy being impressed with themselves. That should continue for the next year or so. True, there have been a few controversial items, like the nonsense that recently took place in the floor of the House of Commons, and what is being commonly referred to as "Elbowgate."

But I think that mess is going to go exactly where it should, namely nowhere. It was a simple combination of bad manners, accidents, dreadful acting and political posturing. You don't need any Silly Season to have those.

I predict that a year from now, the term "Elbowgate" will be a matter of trivia.

The real fun is starting at the provincial level. We still have about two years to go before the next general election, but the jockeying has already started, and the proverbial knives are out for Premier Kathleen Wynne.

That really shouldn't be too surprising, and as far as Wynne is concerned, it need not be terribly ominous. She leads a majority government, and her party has been in charge at Queen's Park for going on 13 years. Naturally there's a mood for change out there, although it remains to be seen if anything will come of it. There appeared to be moods for change out there heading into the last couple of elections, but we still have a Liberal government. What that all boils down to is nothing is guaranteed yet.

The rumblings, however, are definitely out there. There are scandals on a number levels that involve the use of taxpayers' dollars and confidence in government, as well as the competency of those running things right now. I think these issues can gain more traction than efforts to hammer Trudeau over his brief breeches of etiquette.

There was a story in the Toronto Sun last Thursday about former Toronto City councillor Doug Ford boldly predicting Wynne's days as Premier are numbered.

"In two years, the party's over," Ford is quoted as saying. "Pack your bags, get your loot bags, and we'll be going in there'd straightening out the Province's finances."

Ford's position on this should not come as a surprise. Indeed, while he has announced he won't be seeking the Progressive Conservative nomination in an upcoming by-election in Scarborough, I would expect him to be prominent in the general election campaign expected for 2018. Since another member of the family has announced plans to seek the City council seat that had been held by Ford's late brother, I don't expect to see him running municipally two years from now.

But, then again, anything can happen.

Interestingly, but certainly not coincidentally, the story about Ford was printed right next to an item by Queen's Park columnist Christina Blizzard, which offered a bit of a catalogue of the various woes facing the Wynne government. One of the points she made is there seems to be a number of Grit MPPs who seem to be about ready to pack it in. Again, that shouldn't be much of a surprise. There are always changes heading into any election, as some sitting representatives come to realize they have had enough. Politics is a rough business, especially if the faction with which you're aligned happens to be out of favour. It stands to reason some of these people might just decide they've had enough.

But no matter how much trouble the party seems to be in, the Liberals can be assured there will be a lot of aspiring party members out there who are willing and anxious to step up. There are lots of Tories and New Democrats available to fill gaps those parties might encounter too.

So while things might currently look bad for Wynne and company, nothing has been decided at this time.

And where a particular party or leader might stand in the opinion polls at this point is next to meaningless. There's plenty of time for the numbers represented in the polls to change.

In 1990, the poll numbers for David Peterson and his Liberals looked pretty good, so he called a snap election. A couple of weeks later, he was unemployed. Five years later, poll numbers indicated Lyn McLeod was going to lead the Liberals back into power, yet Mike Harris somehow got in. Harris proceeded to make a lot of people like me mad. Some of his opponents resorted to strategic voting, and he ended up getting another majority in 1999.

Dalton McGuinty came to power in 2003 with promises not to raise taxes, and he promptly went back on his word. There were predictions he would be tossed out for that four years later, and he wasn't. And much was expected of the last two Conservative leaders, and they weren't able to deliver much.

Many people would like to see the provincial Liberals sent packing after the next election, and that might very well happen. Or it might not.

Two years is a long time, allowing for plenty of variations in fortunes. While I don't expect it to happen, it is possible that Wynne could be restored to grace in the eyes of many who are mad at her now. Patrick Brown is a rookie leader, so there's no telling how he's going to do in his first campaign. And even if he comes up short, it's not the end. Bob Rae, Harris and McGuinty all lost the first elections they contested as leader. Or maybe he'll win. We all just have to wait.

Remembering Father

Amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, Lou Gehrig's disease, is personal for me.

I watched my father Joseph struggle with the disease from beginning to end; it had a profound effect.

Dad was from a lumber town, Burk's Falls, Ont., then population 500. They were working people, so it was an achievement for him to attend the University of Toronto and earn a degree in dentistry. He opened a practice on Yonge Street in Toronto and made a success of his life.

Dad curled at the Toronto Granite Club; that's probably why I took up the sport. He loved gardening and fishing. As a boy he taught me how to bait a hook and where to find the fishing holes. All these years later I still return to those same spots. I remember family motor trips every spring down the Eastern seaboard as far south as the Carolinas. We were happy.

My father walked to work every day for 50 years. He built a thriving practice and was looking forward to a long retirement — then something went wrong. He found it difficult to keep his balance, and kept falling. He consulted one doctor after another, desperate for a diagnosis. This was in 1986 and ALS was considered very rare and little known.

OTTAWA JOURNAL

David Tilson
MP Dufferin-Caledon

I remember the day I visited my father at home and he sat me down in the living room: "I have amyotrophic lateral sclerosis," he said.

I replied, "What is that?"

"Lou Gehrig's disease," he said.

It's the same affliction that has struck Mauril Bélanger, MP for Ottawa-Vanier for 21 years. The last time I saw Mr.

Bélanger, it brought tears to my eyes, thinking of my father. It is awful. It ravages the body. My Dad moved from one cane to two, to a walker, to a wheelchair, to a bed, to the grave in four years.

Near the end, all he could do was lie in bed and watch television. I was elected a member of the Ontario Legislature; Dad liked to watch the Queen's Park channel, but saw his health decline so rapidly he couldn't press the buttons on the TV remote. In his last year of life he could neither move nor speak. I sometimes wondered if he wished for death.

Recalling Dad's last years influences my view of right-to-die legislation. Many court cases involving assisted suicide involve plaintiffs who suffer from ALS. It's a terrible way to die, and it will affect how I will vote on this measure.

My father had great spirit. He never complained. ALS patients feel no pain, but witness their own decline. I never heard Dad pray for death. "It's a bitch getting old," he told me once. He was 86 when he passed away, still lucid to the end.

We don't know what causes Lou Gehrig's disease. It is genetic? Possibly; my children are concerned they may carry a genetic mutation. My father survived four years with ALS, but some people live much longer than that.

Researchers need funding to find the answers, perhaps a cure. Dad had many good years before ALS; many Canadians aren't so lucky. They deserve our help.

Excel Learning program targets those with learning difficulties

By Tabitha Wells

One of the most difficult things we can experience in life, whether personally or as a parent, is struggling with the ability to learn due to a potentially uncontrollable factor in our lives.

Whether it is simply a struggle to understand, a disorder like dyslexia, ADHD (attention deficit hyperactivity disorder), autism, sensory processing or anything else that affects our learning, an even bigger struggle can be to find the support to combat it.

Excel Learning is a program designed specifically with that in mind. The organization, which operates under the name Excel Strategic Learning Centre, pursues the goal of helping both children and adults overcome an array of learning difficulties through programs in neuroplasticity.

Juanita Pomroy-McLeod, a recent addition to the area, explained that the program isn't a tutoring tool, but rather is designed to help change the way one thinks.

"The programs are designed to remap your neural pathways," she said. "When babies learn to talk, listen, copy, it's mapping their pathways as they go — if there is something that impedes that, such as if the child has lots of ear infections so they don't hear right, that impacts their learning capabilities. This is built all around neuroplasticity, which is basically brain training."

A former teacher, Pomroy-McLeod witnessed many children falling through the cracks because of their learning hindrances. While there were all kinds of services and special classes for kids with different learning disabilities, none of them really focused on developing their abilities to help them learn in school.

"Every year, more kids are integrated into classrooms with major problems and no proper support," she explained. "The parents are lost and the teachers are lost. After so much of it, I decided it was time to stop complaining and do something."

Excel learning employs three "methods" or programs, which can be tailored, based on the needs of the person receiving services. The techniques include Tomatis, Cellfield and the Interactive Metronome Method, which are utilized through a computer or tablet, and are designed to focus on different types of training.

These programs have been around for 30 to 40 years, and despite not becoming a highly known about or popular method, have never seen a negative outcome. They have been used to help students deal with everything from dyslexia, anxiety, stress, sensory processing disorders, developmental delays and even ADHD, through helping the student learn to focus on an individual task.

"There is always some form of improvement in the individual, and it's usually pretty dramatic," Pomroy-McLeod said. "The program is not just for kids either, but designed to help adults as well."

Her family recently moved to Orangeville from Montreal, which has program centres dedicated to this kind of learning. They also exist in B.C., but in Ontario, it is still very grassroots. Despite the challenge of not being well-known, Pomroy-McLeod is determined to help both students and adults locally who may be struggling because of a learning disability. So far, with everyone she has worked with, their progress has been significant.

"I've started with a little girl locally who has quite a few challenges, and she has already made huge strides," she said.

Pomroy-McLeod's daughter has also experienced issues with learning, and she has been working on the different programs based on her learning needs.

"The differences in my daughter are like night and day," she added.

Each client is evaluated before they begin any of the programs, and testing is done in the client's home on their own schedule, allowing flexibility for anyone to be able to benefit from it. Each of the three methods has specific evaluations, which are designed to help pinpoint strengths and weaknesses, as well as target the appropriate learning program.

"One of the really nice things about this program is the results tend to be fast," Pomroy-McLeod observed. "Usually, we see results in about three days, and the programs last about three months. The results and changes are permanent."

The programs can range from something as simple as identifying shapes and colours, to following patterns and instructions. Each training program is developed through the three techniques, and includes support through the process of regular progress reports, recommendations for schools and teachers, and parental support.

"The main thing about this is that it is not a tutoring program," Pomroy-McLeod said. "It's actually a therapeutic learning program. I go to clients' houses, and provide in-home assessments and program access so it's easy for parents and adults who have busy schedules."

She added that the programs are designed to be able to help a number of issues outside of learning disabilities as well.

"They've been proven to help with people who have depression, anxiety, brain injuries, as well as adults who have never been able to fully develop skills like reading well," she said. "A lot of adults don't like to admit it, but they struggle with reading and it can affect their work. The programs can also address organization of tasks, especially for people who have to manage in a high pressure environment."

Horrendous, yet necessary events

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Claire Hoy

It was Spanish-born philosopher George Santayana who first said, "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it."

He might have added that those who only remember part of the past are even worse.

Which brings us, if you haven't guessed, to U.S. President Barrack Obama's unfortunate visit lasts week to the Hiroshima Peace Memorial Park in Japan, where he offered tribute to the "silent cry" of the 140,000 people who were killed by the world's first atomic bomb attack Aug. 6, 1945.

He did not apologize directly — but just being there, combined with his history of apologizing for past U.S. actions, i.e. the Middle East, Iran and Cuba — plus his call for a world without nukes, certainly left his audience feeling he'd apologized.

Indeed, after the ceremony, 79-year-old bomb survivor Shigeaki Mori hugged the president and said afterward that even without an interpreter, he knew from his body language what Obama was saying.

You will likely know that three days after the Hiroshima bomb was dropped — and after Japan still refused to surrender despite the warning — another 70,000 people died in the second bomb in Nagasaki.

After that, Japan surrendered.

There is a large, and unfortunately growing, body of public opinion which openly condemns the U.S. — and then president Harry Truman — for dropping the bomb on civilian targets and causing so much death and destruction.

They seem to think — as critics of major events often do — that the bomb dropping came in a vacuum, as if the Americans decided to test it out and see if it actually worked or not.

They forget — or, more likely, conveniently chose to ignore — the history that led up to this terrible moment.

To be sure, nuking both Hiroshima and Nagasaki were horrendous events, hopefully, as Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe said, never to be repeated.

But before you start tsK-tsking and pointing fingers at the dreaded Americans, let us go back four years to Dec. 7, 1941, "a date that will live in infamy," as then president Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed shortly before the U.S. formally declared war on Imperial Japan.

On that day, even as U.S. and Japanese officials were still holding meetings about Japan's aggressive expansionist activities in the Far East, Japan launched a massive attack on U.S. naval installations in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, killing 2,403 Americans, wounding another 1,178, and causing extraordinary property damage to ships, planes and buildings.

This, even though the U.S. and Japan were not at war, and Japan had not announced its intention to launch a war with the Americans.

Japan's emperor at the time was seen to be a God-like figure, and the Japanese fought with a zeal — and a cruelty — which has seldom been matched in the world. Indeed, as horrible as the death toll is from the two nuclear strikes, it is still less than the 300,000 innocent Chinese people slaughtered by the Japanese in Nanking, not to mention Japan's shocking cruelty to captured POWs throughout the region and during the long, sorry course of that horrid war.

It is true — as some anti-Americans posit — that by 1945 it was obvious that Japan was losing the war.

But it is also true that they were not about to surrender.

So the Americans at the time were faced with the Hobson's choice of a) launching an all-out military attack on mainland Japan to subdue the enemy or b) drop the bomb and hope that would convince them of the futility of continuing the fight.

It's not as if there was an option available where nobody would be hurt and we could all live in peace and harmony for ever more.

The Americans estimated that launching an attack on mainland Japan would cost at least 500,000 American lives — plus losses for Russia and other allies — and even more Japanese lives, both military and civilian, given what U.S. commanders characterized as the "fanatical hostility" of the Japanese population toward non-Japanese.

In short, the nuclear bombs not only saved lives but ended the war.

It wasn't pretty, but it was necessary. If anybody should apologize for the death toll, it should be Japan, not the West.

And Obama, by doing what he did, risks sullying the service of all those men and women who died while fighting off Japanese aggression and unbridled imperialism.

MUSEUM REOPENS

After more than a year of planning, structural work and exhibit renovations, the Great War Flying Museum (GWFM) re-opened to the public last Saturday at Brampton Flight Centre. Mayor Allan Thompson was on hand to cut the ribbon, accompanied by Museum Curator Nat McHaffie, Councillor Johanna Downey and her son Angus, 4. GWFM was created through the efforts of the Ontario Aviation Historical Society, founded in 1970 by a group of members at the Brampton Flying Club. With a vision was to inspire a passion and appreciation for First World War aviation history, it is dedicated to all those who served in the world's first air war. The restored museum now houses a renewed collection of original First World War uniforms, artifacts, documents and art through new displays of aircraft models, rare treasures and aviation-related dioramas. There were several members of the family of David Henry Tachauer, who flew in the Great War, and shot down a Fokker D-7. The museum has a replica of such a craft. The family contributed several sets of uniforms to the collection.

Annual Relay for Life held Friday at Robert F. Hall

By Bill Rea

The weather was very co-operative and the mood was great for the cause of fighting cancer.

Students and staff at Robert F. Hall Catholic Secondary School in Caledon East were out in force Friday night for the annual Relay for Life. They started at 7 p.m. and spent the next 12 hours walking laps around the school's track, raising money for the Canadian Cancer Society.

Amber Hann, one of the head chairs of the event, told the participants it's expected there will be 131,300 new cases of cancer diagnosed in Canada this year, and there will be about 76,600 who will die from the disease. She added the Cancer Society is leading the fight against the disease, promoting education, prevention and early detection.

"Relay for Life will certainly save lives," she declared.

Many students at Robert F. Hall Catholic Secondary School didn't get a very restful night's sleep Friday, but it was all in aid of a good cause. They were taking place in the annual Relay for Life, in support of the Canadian Cancer Society. As usual, the first lap of the relay was led by Cancer survivors, with other participants falling in behind.

Photos by Bill Rea

Samantha Steeves and Amber Hann, the head chairs of the event, were welcoming the participants Friday evening, accompanied by Chaplain Brenda Holtkamp and Vice-Principal Chris Letters.

She also observed there were six cancer survivors on hand to lead the first lap of the Relay.

"A cancer diagnosis can be one of life's most terrifying moments," she observed.

"Cancer takes lives and breaks hearts every day," Samantha Steeves, another head chair, commented.

"Cancer must be eradicated," Vice-Principal Chris Letters told the participants before they started on the Relay.

He recalled his mother had been diagnosed with cancer. "It felt like I had been punched in the stomach," he said, although his mother did live another 19 years.

He pointed out medicine has come a long way over the years in dealing with the illness.

"But we've got to do a lot more," he said. "Tonight, you're assisting in that miracle to find a cure."

"One person can make a difference," he added. "You are that one person."

SMALL BUSINESS TOO BIG TO IGNORE

Nearly 3 million Ontarians are employed by small businesses of 100 or less employees, but the rising cost of doing business in the province is stunting their growth.

The Caledon Chamber of Commerce, in partnership with the Ontario Chamber of Commerce (OCC), is launching Small Business Too Big to Ignore, a six month campaign that will highlight the important contributions of small businesses to our communities and investigate the top barriers to small business growth. Coinciding with the launch of this campaign, the OCC also released its report, Top 3 Obstacles to Small Business Success, aimed at starting a conversation about the underlying challenges that are weighing on small businesses and stifling job creation.

In the report, the OCC cites the rising cost of doing business as a major impediment to small business growth. In fact, OCC survey results show that one in twenty businesses in the province expect to close their doors in the next five years due to rising electricity prices. In addition, 38 percent will see their bottom line shrink, with the cost of electricity delaying or canceling investment in the years to come.

Rising electricity prices is just one of the many elements adding to the cost of doing business in the province.

The Caledon Chamber of Commerce is launching this campaign to take a look at how we can mitigate these types of costs by engaging both government and business leaders in a productive conversation to the answer the question "what exactly is ailing small business?".

In addition to the rising cost of doing business, the report also lists key infrastructure gaps and a lack of access to skilled workers as the top three obstacles weighing on small business. According to a recent OCC survey, 39 percent of employers have had difficulty filling a job opening over the past year and a half - an increase of 11 percentage points since 2014.

Building a 21st century workforce has been a cornerstone of Chamber advocacy efforts for quite some time. There has been tremendous progress on this file over the past few years but we recognize the need to foster greater connections between skilled workers and employers.

Over the next six months, local chambers of commerce and boards of trade will hold consultations with small business owners throughout the province to identify the barriers that they face.

"Small businesses of 100 or less employees are the core of our membership and employ nearly 3 million Ontarians, which is why we've decided to undertake the Small Business Too Big To Ignore campaign," said Allan O'Dette, President and CEO of the OCC. "The insights gained from the local chamber consultations will inform an upcoming OCC report to be released during Small Business week in October 2016. We're really looking forward to the feedback."

If you are a small business owner interested in participating in a roundtable discussion on the needs of small business please contact our office at 905 857-7393.

English pitches back-to-back shutouts for Dodgers

By Jake Courtepatte

Following three-straight losses to open the 2016 North Dufferin Baseball League season, the AA Bolton Dodgers have turned it around in dramatic fashion.

Veteran pitcher Shawn English was tagged for six runs in his team's season opener, an 11-0 beating by the Ivy Leafs. He was not on the mound for the next two games, as the team fell to an 0-3 record, and was looking to return to form against the Creemore Braves.

He followed up with 14 consecutive innings of shut-out baseball, in back-to-back games no less.

The Dodgers were stellar defensively in their second game at North Hill Park of the season, with English and his fielders holding the Braves to just four hits in a 7-0 win. English struck out an astounding 11 batters, while allowing only one walk in a complete game.

With their first win under their belts, English returned to the mound to start against the Alliston Athletics last Wednesday. He won a pitcher's battle with seven more innings of solid work, with the Dodgers squeaking out a 1-0 win.

The Dodgers ended the week on the road to face the Nobleton Cornhuskers, drawing a 4-4 tie to stretch the unbeaten streak to three games.

They were to put their 2-3-1 record on the line Tuesday against the Aurora Jays (results not known at press time), returning to North Hill Park Wednesday night to host the Creemore Barons.

Their AAA counterpart, the Bolton Brewers, are not yet enjoying the same success in the Greater Toronto Baseball League. They are off to an 0-5 start in their sophomore season, dropping both games of a home-and-away miniseries with the East York Bulldogs last week.

Bolton played the role of host first last Thursday evening at North Hill Park, allowing the Bulldogs to jump out to a 5-0 lead in the top of the first inning. Brett Chater and Darius Barlas crossed the plate for the Brewers in their half, but the early lead was too much to overcome as the Bulldogs held on the rest of the way.

Chater scored one more run, as well as Brett Bond in the fourth in an eventual 11-4 loss.

Justin DiTaranto was tagged with the loss, having worked the first two innings and given up six runs. Stan Wadlow Park in East York was the site of the second half of the back-to-back, played Monday evening. The Bulldogs once again jumped out to the lead first and held on for a 6-2 win.

The Brewers will be searching for their first win of the season Thursday against the Leaside Leafs. First pitch is at 7:30 p.m. at North Hill Park.

Shawn English tossed back-to-back shutouts in the Bolton Dodgers' 7-0 win over the Creemore Braves and 1-0 victory over the Alliston Athletics.
