Peel angry at Premier over election of Chairs

By Bill Rea

Peel Regional councillors are going to give Premier Kathleen Wynne a piece of their collective mind.

Councillors voted last Thursday to send a letter to the Premier protesting the enactment of Bill 70 and asking it be repealed. The letter will also be sent to the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Peel area MPPs, as well as clerks of York and Niagara Regions.

Bill 70 requires the general election of the Chair of Peel, along with the Chairs of York and Niagara, for the next term to start in the fall of 2018. The bill was introduced in the legislature in November, and received Royal Assent in December. Councillors were angry that it passed without proper consultation with the Region.

There were a number of strong and angry comments, and a few councillors could be heard at times singing the Twisted Sister song We're Not Gonna Take It. In the end, the motion carried almost unanimously. Brampton Mayor Linda Jeffrey, who has long supported the election of Chairs, was the only one who voted against the motion.

Caledon Councillor Johanna Downey was absent on the day the bill was passed, and she was not consulted, and we're opposed as a council," she declared.

Caledon Mayor Allan Thompson remarked that he understood the matter was a done deal. Regional Solicitor and Director of Legal Services Patrick O'Connor confirmed the bill has been enacted, and the only way to reverse the decision is to have it repealed.

Caledon Councillor Barb Shaughnessy agreed something should be said about the fact the Region wasn't consulted, either through a letter or a motion passed at council.

posing the general election of the Chair.

Peel's Chair is chosen by Regional councillors shortly after the municipal elections.

Crombie pointed out the bill was passed with little fanfare, adding no one had realized it was going to be adopted so quickly.

"It was done without our consultation, and we're opposed as a council," she declared.

Pushing through bill was not ‘transparent,’ councillors charge

“I think we have to make our voices heard,” she declared, adding these new elections are going to add a burden on the taxpayers. “We shouldn’t just sit back and take it. Let’s do something about it.”

Mississauga Councillor Pat Saito agreed that just because it looks like there’s no hope of getting the bill repealed doesn’t mean the Region should do nothing.

Saito added the Province is always referring to open and transparent government, but not when it comes to the municipal level.

“I think it should be a resolution of council,” she said, referring to the action that should be taken, stressing the need to tell the Province to pay attention to municipalities when they are asked for opinions. “Stop making decisions on the fly.”

“This is just the tip of the iceberg,” Brampton Councillor Grant Gibson remarked, adding other changes are coming. He added there are some confusing points in the bill. He said it says the current term of council ends Nov. 15, 2018, but he understood it would end Dec. 1.

Gibson also pointed out there’s no word on how much an election for Chair will cost.

Brampton Councillor Gael Miles reiterated that council had passed a motion telling the Province it believed the Chair should continue to be appointed. She also brought back up the issue of getting more Regional councillors for her city.

Crombie put forth the idea of sending a letter signed by the councillors.

Mississauga Councillor Karen Ras countered that a lot of letters are sent to the Province, and they either go unanswered or no action is taken.

She was also upset there was no consultation with residents.

Ras also wasn’t in favour of electing the Chair. Someone running across Peel would need either a big name or deep pockets.

Mississauga Councillor George Carlson argued it’s not anti-democratic to appoint a chair, pointing out the chairs of the local school boards are appointed.

“He’s above politics,” he said, adding an appointed Chair can speak for the Region without feeling the need to count heads.

“I don’t think it’s a move that’s going to improve anything,” he commented.

Caledon Councillor Annette Groves observed that having the Chair elected would mean a Caledon resident would likely never occupy that office again.

“They won’t even campaign there,” Shaughnessy yelled across the room.

“We don’t have to take this like a bunch of sheep,” Brampton Councillor John Sprovieri said, adding the Region should tell the Province they will boycott the legislation.

Brampton Councillor Elaine Moore agreed council should act, pointing out they already made their position overwhelmingly clear. She stressed the need to act collectively.

“It is a dictatorship by the Province, as everything else is that they do,” Mississauga Councillor Carolyn Parrish commented, adding she supports election of the Chair, but she also wanted to stand by her colleagues.

Mississauga Councillor Nando Iannicca likened the situation to the recent election of American President Donald Trump, who was behind in the popular vote, but won in the Electoral College.

“It’s a very smart system that they have, but they have it for a reason,” he said, arguing that without it, presidential candidates would only campaign in large population states, like New York, Florida, Illinois, Texas and California.

“It’s easy to throw it out when you’re upset the morning after,” he added.

Iannicca also pointed out that with an elected Chair, there would never again be one from Caledon.

He also said he found it “galling” that they put issues to the federal and Provincial governments that they don’t act upon, but come up with other ideas.

“They’ve got to get rid of that program that when the Province and the federal governments elect people and they go to Ottawa or Queen’s Park, they’ve got to stop the practice of the frontal lobotomy before they start; that they forget how a city runs,” he remarked.

Tony Pontes

Director of Education Tony Pontes is retiring from the Peel District School Board, effective Aug. 31, 2017.

Pontes has held the role since March 2010.

He has spent his entire career in the Peel board, beginning in 1978 as a teacher of mathematics and woodworking at the then J. A. Turner Secondary School. After his time as a teacher, department head and vice-principal, Pontes became principal of Chinguacousy Secondary School, followed by Mayfield Secondary School. In 2000, he became a superintendent of education, where he had the opportunity to serve as both an elementary and secondary superintendent. In 2009, he became superintendent of staff development and school support services at the HJA Brown Education Centre. He has been active beyond the board in both the Ontario Public Supervisory Officers’ Association and the Council of Ontario Directors of Education.

“Since becoming director six years ago, and indeed in his entire career with Peel, Tony has focused first and foremost on a sincere desire to support students,” Board Chair Janet McDougald commented. “He has done so with integrity, kindness, optimism and genuine hard work. He leaves the Peel board with a legacy that includes our new Plan for Student Success, a renewed instructional focus on math, a powerful implementation of Bring Your Own Device and vision for modern learning, and a system commitment to mental health and well-being.”

“Without question, he has also personally demonstrated a bold, fearless and unwavering commitment to real progress on inclusion in all forms, and has helped make Peel a national leader in equity,” she added. “We thank Tony for his personal and professional dedication to the children of Peel — he truly is someone who each day lives and breathes the Peel board mission to inspire success, confidence and hope in each student. He will be missed in Peel, and we wish him every success in his well-deserved retirement.”

Caledon Trustee Stan Cameron had words of praise for Pontes at last Tuesday’s board meeting.

“He is a gentleman, and a gentle man,” Cameron said. “He offered the board of trustees humble leadership. He always took responsibility, while always giving credit to others.”

Cameron also commented on Pontes’ ability to connect with people through a caring and empathetic approach.

“Tony has displayed extraordinary problem-solving skills,” he declared. “His in-depth knowledge of this board’s 254 schools . . . and our nearly 154,000 students allowed them to always stay focused on student success.”

“I will carry this question forward with me after Tony retires: ‘WWTB — What Would Tony Do?’” Cameron concluded.

The board will begin a formal search process for a new director of education. That process will include hiring an external search firm, and consulting internally and externally on the qualities and characteristics for the new director. The board expects the new director to be in place in May 2017.

“As a board, we want to ensure that this search is comprehensive; that we do all we can to select the right leader to take this board forward and continue our work in the Plan for Student Success,” McDougald said. “We are confident that process will be complete and a new director in place by the end of May 2017, so we can provide stability to the system for the next school year.”

Bolton resident wins big with Lottario

Bolton resident Ernst (Ernie) Drachenberg has a great reason to celebrate these days.

He won $428,343 in the Jan. 21, 2017 Lottario draw.

“I go to the gym every day,” he said while at the OLG Prize Centre in Toronto. “On the day that I won, I was on my way there when I decided to stop by the store and check my ticket.”

He scanned his ticket at the ticket checker.

“The words ‘Big Winner’ appeared and at first I thought I won $428,” Drachenberg, 90, said. “I tucked my ticket away and headed to the gym. Later that day, I picked up a print out of the winning numbers and went home to check my ticket. One by one, the numbers matched up.”

“I didn’t want to celebrate yet and later find out the ticket wasn’t a winner,” he added, so the following day, he returned to the store with his wife. “Together with the manager we verified my win, validated the ticket and spoke with OLG on the phone.”

“I consider myself a young 90,” the a married father, grandfather and great grandfather said. “I am active, love riding my bike and enjoy life every single day. In fact, I have climbed the CN Tower seven times. My first time was when I was 80 years old.”

“Winning the lottery is lovely, but I do wish I was 20 years younger so I could really enjoy this money. Having said that, I have a wonderful family and it will make me very happy to see them enjoying my win. I can’t wait to have a big family celebration, knowing that this money will help take care of all of us.”

“Finally, I would love to come back to the Prize Centre after I win again!” he concluded.

The winning ticket was purchased at Petro Canada on Queen Street in Bolton.

OFF TO DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

When going on a long trip, it’s best to get an early start, and that was the case with students from St. Michael Catholic Secondary School in Bolton and Father Michael Goetz Secondary School in Mississauga, staff and chaperones as they boarded a bus at St. Michael at about 6 a.m. Saturday. The ultimate destination of the 2017 Mission Team was the Dominican Republic, where they are spending the week delivering supplies (food, clothes, medicine) through the Congregacion Hijas de Maria. They are slated to return home Saturday.

14 Critical Home Inspection Traps to be Aware of Weeks Before Listing Your Caledon Home for Sale

CALEDON - According to industry experts, there are over 33 physical problems that will come under scrutiny during a home inspection when your home is for sale. A new report has been prepared which identifies the eleven most common of these problems, and what you should know about them before you list your home for sale.

Whether you own an old home or a brand new one, there are a number of things that can fall short of requirements during a home inspection. If not identified and dealt with, any of these 11 items could cost you dearly in terms of repair. That’s why it’s critical that you read this report before you list your home. If you wait until the building inspector flags these issues for you, you will almost certainly experience costly delays in the close of your home sale or, worse, turn prospective buyers awayaltogether. In most cases, you can make a reasonable pre-inspection yourself if you know what you’re looking for, and knowing what you’re looking for can help you prevent little problems from growing into costly and unmanageable ones.

To help homesellers deal with this issue before their homes are listed, a free report entitled “11 Things You Need to Know to Pass Your Home Inspection” has been compiled which explains the issues involved.

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your FREE copy of this report call toll-free 1- 855-217-7810 and enter ID# 79. You can call any time, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Preliminary OPP data suggests poor behaviour on and off roads in 2016

A first glance at last year’s Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) traffic data signals a troubling increase in number of on-road, off-road, marine and pedestrian deaths compared with the previous year.

While all of the numbers are preliminary, OPP is reporting 276 fatal motor vehicle collisions (MVCs) on OPP-patrolled roads in 2016 where 309 people were killed. By comparison, there were 262 fatal MVCs in 2015, killing 301 people.

Early data suggests that driver inattention, speed, alcohol and/or drugs, and lack of occupant restraint (known as the “Big Four”) were again causal factors in a high percentage of the overall road deaths last year. Close to 75 per cent of the 309 MVC deaths were attributed to these road user behaviours. In comparison, the Big Four were factors in 77 per cent of the 2015 overall collision fatalities.

Off-road vehicle (ORV) deaths spiked significantly, with 23 deaths investigated by OPP last year, compared to 14 in 2015.

A total of 16 people died in snowmobile incidents in 2016, up from 13 in this off-road category the year before.

Pedestrian fatalities in OPP jurisdiction increased significantly in 2016, with 38, compared to 25 in 2015.

Marine-related fatalities were up in 2016 as 21 people were killed in motorized and non-motorized boating incidents, compared to 18 the previous year.

While the OPP’s 2016 traffic data is subject to further compilation and analysis, the organization can already draw an important conclusion from what it has seen.

“The OPP is truly saddened that Ontarians appear to have steered fatality numbers in the entirely wrong direction in virtually all traffic-related categories last year,” OPP Deputy Commissioner Brad Blair commented. “This is a wake-up call to drivers, passengers and pedestrians to adopt much safer behaviours in 2017 — a critical factor in reducing the number of preventable deaths on and off our roads.”

Festive RIDE results are in

During the Festive Reduce Impaired Driving Everywhere (RIDE) campaign, from Nov. 21 to Jan. 7, officers from the Caledon OPP RIDE Team, as well as front line patrol officers, were out in force, conducting numerous spot checks at various locations within Caledon.

Officers conducted 148 spot checks in Caledon, issued a total of 35 roadside licence suspensions to drivers, and charged 22 individuals with criminal offences related to drinking and driving during the campaign.

Impaired driving puts the lives of all roadway users at risk, and Caledon OPP officers will continue to conduct RIDE spot checks at various times and locations throughout the year. Anyone who suspects that the driver of a vehicle is impaired is encouraged to report it to police by dialing 9-1-1 on a hands free device with a description of the vehicle, location and direction of travel.

Caledon OPP would like to thank all of the drivers who choose to drink responsibly and use a designated driver, take a cab, or use a free ride-sharing service such as HomeJames during the festive season.

Two arrested after search warrant executed

Members of the Caledon OPP Street Crime Unit, in conjunction with the OPP Tactical Response Unit, executed a search warrant at a residence on Ridgebank Court in Bolton Jan. 13.

During the execution of the warrant, police located and arrested two men.

A 22-year-old Caledon man was charged with possession of marijuana, possession for the purpose of trafficking — marijuana, possession for the purpose of trafficking — cocaine, possession of cannabis resin and possession of property obtained by crime over $5,000.

A 23-year-old Toronto man was charged with failing to comply with recognizance.

FIREFIGHTERS ON HAND AT WINTERFEST

Caledon firefighters were on hand at the recent WinterFest at Mayfield Recreation Complex. They were handing out free scrapers, but the real attraction was Sparky. That’s who Evan Quinn, 4, of the Forks of the Credit area, was interested in.

Peel Region seeking input on its transportation plan

By Bill Rea

Aggressive driving appears to be a major concern among Caledon residents when it comes to transportation issues.

That was one thing that was indicated recently as Peel Region hosted the first in a series of public information centres (PIC) on long-range transportation planning. The session was at Caledon Community Complex in Caledon East.

Lindsay Edwards, a principal planner with the Region, said about 25 people signed in at the PIC, and they were all asked to indicate on a list of transportation-related concerns which ones were important to them. Aggressive driving was well out in front on the list, but speeding and trucks drew some attention, as did pedestrians.

Edwards said they have been trying to get input from the public on the greatest concerns so a plan could be put together to address them.

Other CIPs were to be held in both Brampton and Mississauga, and Edwards said transportation plans will be tailored to each of the three municipalities. She added six or seven of these concerns will be primary focuses in coming up with a plan, with the concerns raised by the public being part of that process. The Region will also be hearing from the three municipalities, as well as other stakeholders like the school boards and police.

The Region is working on a 25-year plan to last until 2041, and the idea is to incorporate it into the Regional Official Plan. According to material presented at the PIC, the aim is to make travelling in Peel easier, faster, greener, safer and healthier. This would be achieved through making the best use of existing infrastructure while making strategic investments in new infrastructure.

The themes of the study are to promote sustainable modes of transportation; attract businesses and people to Peel; implement strategies to manage traffic demand; and harmonize car and truck traffic in Peel.

The Region is planning for transportation solutions that are less harmful to the environment, as well as healthy and age-friendly, and that allow for better movement of goods to help business. They are also trying to manage coming growth well by looking to reduce congestion.

According to information at the PIC, a sustainable transportation strategy will help build a system that is safe, efficient and healthy.

It's estimated that Peel's population will grow by almost 40 per cent by 2041. The current roads can't handle that load, and it's not going to be possible to simply widen existing ones.

If more people use sustainable transportation alternatives, it would result in benefits in terms of public health and safety, lifestyle choices, sustainable communities and economic prosperity.

The information at the PIC stated that 34 per cent of the peak-period trips in Peel make use of sustainable transportation, such as walking, cycling, transit, car pooling, etc. The strategy the Region is working on aims to increase that figure to 50 per cent by 2041. Some issues that are being looked into include dealing with missing sidewalks to facilitate walking, making road crossings safer, building separate bike lanes, better marketing of the benefits of using transit, improving connections to transit, flexible work options, building more car-pool lots, etc.

More PICs are planned for April.

Schools to celebrate Black History Month

Dufferin-Peel Catholic schools will host many engaging events and activities to celebrate Black History Month.

This will include It's Everyone's History — Walking Forward Together in Hope, a board-wide Black History Student Conference. It will be Feb. 23 for secondary school students. This event will be from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the University of Toronto Mississauga Campus.

Now in its 13th year, the conference will highlight local community members who have achieved success and fulfillment of their ambitions and who are also role models for all students. More than 400 students are expected to attend the event, which will include a panel discussion on Black Identity in 2017, followed by a series of workshops.

"In addition to a panel discussion, students will participate in workshops, led by a diverse range of presenters, who will share their own success and motivational stories," said Dufferin-Peel's

Principal of Diversity, Equity and Inclusive Education Michelle Coutinho. "By learning about, and celebrating the contributions of African-Canadians and, in particular, members of our own local community, students will be inspired to develop and share the diverse talents with which they have been blessed."

Conference presenters include lawyer and notary public Renatta Austin, radio host and columnist Desmond Cole, TV producer and host Amanda Parrris, author and journalist Dalton Higgins, lawyer Asha James, founder and President of TEN81 Lifestyle Inc. Jesse Jones, journalist Morgan Campbell, lawyer Anthony Morgan, and educators and doctoral candidates Annette Baziara-Oakafor and Huda Hassan.

In addition to the board-wide conference, numerous schools have Black History Month events and activities planned. A detailed list of school events is available on the board's website at www.dpcdsb.org

Arts & Entertainment

February is full of family fun and new exhibitions at PAMA

Peel Art Gallery, Museum and Archives (PAMA) is launching into a very exciting February.

The art gallery re-opens with two dynamic exhibitions. Discover the world of Palookaville with world-renowned graphic novelist Seth and explore the complexities of painting with watercolour, in celebration of more than 90 years of the Canadian Society of Painters in Water Colour. The Museum also celebrates Canadian hero Terry Fox and kicks off Black History Month and beyond with two new small exhibitions. Plus, mark the calendars for the annual free Family Day event Feb. 20, which is always great fun for everyone.

New Exhibitions

Heading to Palookaville: Seth and the Art of the Graphic Novel will run from Feb. 6 to March 19, with an opening reception Feb. 19 from 2 to 4 p.m.

Curated by Tom Smart, the exhibit will highlight artist, cultural critic and world-renowned graphic novelist Seth, who draws astonishingly rich graphic novels and comics about how family, youthful dreams and life experiences make us who we are. This exhibition considers the complexities attached to the issues of self-identity in Seth’s artistic practice. He is at once an author, artist and cultural commentator, as well as one of the foremost graphic novelists working today. Discover the creative process of the graphic novel and see original sketches on display.

Water and Pigment: Mysterious Interactions will also be from Feb. 6 to March 19, with an opening reception Feb. 19 from 2 to 4 p.m.

Curated by Gerrie Loveys, this will enable people to discover the complexities of painting with watercolour in celebration of more than 90 years of the Canadian Society of Painters in Water Colour. Paintings will be selected from the CSP-WC/SCPA National Diploma Collection, which is housed at PAMA and will include work by artists such as A.J. Casson, Barb Sutherland, Charles Comfort, Ann Balch and Carl Schaefer.

Watercolour Workshops with local artist Marlene Madole will take place Thursdays from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Explore watercolour techniques in a relaxed, creative environment. During these workshops, participants will explore fundamental watercolour techniques. Instruction is through demonstration, examples and one-on-one assistance. The topics explored will be Wet-on-wet and direct painting in still life (Feb. 9); Unique wet-on-wet effects (Feb. 16); and Colour mixing, glazing in skies and landscape (Feb. 23).

The cost for members is $29.75 per class or $76.50 for all three, and for non-members it’s $35 per class or $90 for all three.

Terry Fox: Running to the Heart of Canada will be from Feb. 4 to June 4

Explore Terry Fox’s courageous journey during his 1980 Marathon of Hope, including his routes through Peel, local photos and news stories. Experience the deep affection Canadians have for Terry and be inspired by his legacy. Organized by the Canadian Museum of History, in partnership with the Terry Fox Centre.

Celebrating Black History Month and Beyond

Black Enslavement in Upper Canada will be on from Feb. 4 to Sept. 4.

Most people don’t realize that Black enslavement existed here in Canada, but it did from the 1600s until it was abolished in 1834. This exhibition, presented in partnership with the Archives of Ontario, explores some untold stories that are important to our understanding of Canadian history.

The Black Community in Peel in the 19th Century will run from Feb. 4 to Sept. 4.

This small exhibition shares some of the results of ongoing research into the history of Black residents of Peel in the 1800s.

Admission to PAMA will be free for the Black History Month Celebration this coming Saturday (Feb. 4) from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Celebrate Black History Month with special hands-on family activities and a pop-up performance at 1 p.m. by Juno award-winning singer Liberty Silver.

Peel Spotlight

Performer and emcee Jesse Alarcon will be presenting an evening of poetry, spoken word and live musical performance by local Peel artistes to celebrate the strong multicultural community. As well, there will be non-alcoholic drinks, snacks and free tours of the museum and art gallery.

It will be Feb. 23, from 6 to 9 p.m. the will be a $5-per-person cover charge.

PAMA Launches new Unplugged Tours

Come for the kick-off of a new line of special tours, just in time for Valentine’s Day. It will be Feb. 11 from 4 to 5 p.m. These unplugged tours will happen monthly, with a special rate of $10 per person with new themes each month. It will offer a fun and new way to experience PAMA through exciting stories, awesome facts and juicy, behind-the-scenes gossip. Be prepared for fast-paced group activities and some stellar social media post worthy material.

PAMA’s annual Family Day

Admission will be free Feb. 20 to help kick off the celebration of 150 years for Canada, Peel County and PAMA’s Courthouse and Jail. Explore exhibitions; take part in fun activities and performances.

There will be music, including a sing-a-long with Shannon Butcher and her ukulele at 10:15 a.m. and 1 p.m. There will also be face painting, as well as community art activity. Join this art activity celebrating the community, its diversity and its people with artist Tharmila Rajasingam.

PAMA is a place to explore and learn about Peel Region’s culture and heritage, as well as use conversation, questions and stories to help make new and fascinating connections to the surrounding community.

Operated by the Region of Peel, PAMA is at 9 Wellington St. E.in Brampton. Visit pama.peelregion.ca to learn more.

Editorial

Some good points, but pointless

If she hasn't received it already, Premier Kathleen Wynne can look forward to getting letter from Peel Regional councillors, and it's almost certainly going to contain a bawling out. Councillors are angry about the passage of Bill 70, which received Royal Assent in December. The bill calls for the election at large of the Chairs in Peel, York and Niagara Regions. The Peel councillors are upset because they believe they were not properly consulted, and their positions on the issue were basically ignored. We agree that Regional councillors have every right to be annoyed, although we don't think they should have been surprised. Some of them commented that the swift passage of the bill was disrespectful municipal government. The fact is the Province has a long history of treating municipal government with contempt, bringing in changes without consulting either elected officials or the electorate. Bill 70 is a recent example of a long series of disrespectful moves. Wynne's announcement last week that she was shutting the door on Toronto setting up toll roads is a more recent example of sticking it to municipalities. Heading into the 2010 municipal elections, the powers that be at Queen's Park decided they would be held in October, rather than November. There were some valid reasons for doing this, but could not the people more impacted by this have been consulted? Terms in municipal office in Ontario used to be three years in length. During the first decade of the 21st century, the Province decided to make them four years. Were you consulted on this? Were your elected representatives consulted? They were not. Again, there might have been some valid reasons, but we would argue there is a difference between asking a person to make a three-year commitment when seeking elected office and four years. Input should have been sought. It wasn't. Don't get the idea that we're beating up on the Liberals here. The Progressive Conservatives have shown that they can be just as contemptuous of municipal politicians and voters. The main talking point in Toronto 20 years ago was the Province's plans to amalgamate the six municipalities that made up the Metro level of government into one entity, commonly known as the Megacity. This was the brain child of the government of then Premier Mike Harris. There was absolutely no consultation when this idea was floated. There was plenty of input, to be sure, but the government of the day made it clear it wasn't interested. When it came to public reaction from the taxpayers, the government could not possibly have been more contemptuous. The electorate could essentially go to hell, as far as Harris and company were concerned. That didn't mean there wasn't some noise made. People opposed to the Megacity idea formed a group called Citizens For Local Democracy (C4LD). They, along with municipal officials, demanded a referendum be held. The government, not surprisingly, refused. So they organized their own. Referendum day was March 3, 1997, and 76.1 per cent of those who voted were opposed to the amalgamation. It was clear the electorate wanted nothing to do with it. Those who question that conclusion will please produce the figures that contradict that 76.1 per cent. There were a couple of victory parties thrown by the opponents of the plan, including one at Massey Hall in downtown Toronto. One of the key organizers of the referendum was on the stage at the venerable concert hall, enthusiastically scrawling updated vote figures on a flip chart. That woman as Kathleen Wynne. She understood then that the Province should show more respect to municipal government. We have to wonder, therefore, what changed her mind. We are glad that the Regional councillors are giving the Premier a piece of their collective mind. On the other hand, it's not going to change anything, and we think those councillors realize that. The fact is the Wynne Liberals were given the authority to push the bill through June 12, 2014, when Ontario voters gave them a majority. Nevertheless, the points to be made are valid ones, and deserve at least to be on the record.

Caledon Central Public School is nestled in the high hills of Caledon village. Every day, a team of volunteers arrives early at the school to put together a nutritious breakfast as part of their Breakfast Program. This program has run since 2012 and started out serving breakfast three days per week. Now, they are a five-day per week operation serving 150 students per day — 750 healthy meals per week. If you calculate this over a full school year, that equals 29,550. That's a lot of breakfast! Late in 2016, our Club was approached by one of the volunteers in the program — Aimee Alabaster — seeking support. We were honoured to be able to help. One of the great feelings of being a Rotarian is being able to witness the impact you are making close to home. We are forever seeing images of those in need around the world — but rarely do we get a glimpse into the need right in our backyard. Our Club is proud to be able to make an impact — locally and abroad. Please visit www.rotaryclubofpalgrave.com for more information on our Club and all the wonderful ways you could get involved.

They don't clear the benches much anymore

I freely admit I am not the hockey fan I once was. As proof of that, I cite the fact that I started writing this column last Thursday night at the kitchen table of my home. Meanwhile, my wife was downstairs watching the only TV in the house, as the Leafs played the Philadelphia Flyers. There was a time when I wouldn't have missed a game, and was ready to do almost anything to make sure I got to see it, if it was on the tube. There were many Saturday dinners as a kid during which I was told I would be sent to bed before the hockey game if I didn't eat all of my vegetables. I ate them, grudgingly to be sure. Like so many of you, my favourite vegetable is roast beef. I was allowed to stay up late enough to watched the Leafs carry off three Stanley Cups before I graduated from primary to junior grades at school, so pulling for a team that has constantly come up short for 50 years can drain one's enthusiasm. There have been a number of changes in the game since I was a kid, and I stumbled upon such an example not long ago while fooling around on the internet. When was the last time any of you ever saw a bench-clearing brawl in a hockey game? Weren't they entertaining to watch? Before this goes any further, I'll state that I hate to see fights in hockey games. On the other hand, I accept that such antics earned the Flyers a couple of Stanley Cups in the 1970s. I do understand something of the male ego, and that thing known as testosterone. There is such as thing as aggression, and players who are aggressive have a better chance of making the team. More to the point, if all the players on Team A hop over the boards and start throwing punches, the complement of Team B had better get their butts into the battle pronto, backing up their mates. It wasn't always the case with me and fights on the ice. There was a time they added some spice to Hockey Night in Canada. I wasn't alone with such beliefs. For a time when I was little, the only TV in the house was in the basement. I'd be watching the game while my father was upstairs doing something. My dad was something of a stickler when it came to running on stairs, going either up or down. But if I yelled up to him that there was a fight on the ice, he would literally run downstairs to catch as much of the action as he could. And if the benches were emptied, it meant the entertainment would last a lot longer, as the officials were ending one battle while a couple of others broke out. What fun! But you don't see the benches empty much any more, and I guess that's mainly because the penalties are so stiff. The memories of these events were driven home to me recently when I stumbled upon a bench-clearing brawl on YouTube. It was from Dec. 7, 1963, a Saturday night when the Leafs were hosting Chicago. The battle started when Reg Fleming speared Eddie Shack. Fleming was excused to the penalty box while the Leafs grouped around Shack, who was still down on one knee. Then Bob Baun skated over to the penalty box to confront Fleming. Carl Brewer and George Armstrong were pretty quick to get over there too. Shack was back on his feet by this point and, according to Bill Hewitt, was glaring at Fleming. The referee then announced that Fleming was out of the game. He mouthed off a bit to the ref, then headed to the bench. On the way, he bumped into Larry Hillman, and the two of them went at it. The linesmen did a good job of keeping the two apart, but Baun was able to get up to Fleming and the two of them started trading punches. Other skirmishes were taking place, and Hewitt announced all the players were on the ice. The action continued, and eventually there was a plain-clothed guy with a camera on the ice. What's a bench-clearing brawl without the media there to record it? Meanwhile, the two goalies, Glenn Hall and Don Simmons, seemed to be chatting amiably off to the side. Of course it was announced that the players who left the benches to take part in the fighting would face consequences, namely a fine of $25. How times have changed! When was the last time you bought a two-four for 25 bucks? The video showed several cases in which third players involved themselves in individual fights. It was a couple of years before such action would mean an automatic game misconduct. Murray Balfour backed Brewer right into the Leaf bench, and then started throwing punches. A whole lot of other players were there in seconds. Interestingly, only three players, Fleming, Baun and Balfour, were tossed from the game. Stan Mikita drew five minutes for fighting and a 10-minute misconduct. This is a guy who would eventually twice win the Lady Byng Trophy. Things sure have changed.

House of Commons gets back to work for Spring Sitting

The Spring Sitting of the House of Commons got underway Monday (Jan. 30) and the Trudeau government finds itself faced with a whole host of problems, most of which are of their own creation.

At the top of the list of important items to be dealt with is the Budget, which we expect some time in February or March. In their first year in office, the Liberals have spent your tax dollars at a ferocious rate, blowing past their estimated deficit figure of $10 billion by a factor of three. We are now poised to be permanently in debt to the tune of $1.5 trillion by 2050 if we continue at the rate the Liberals are going. Our Conservative government left Trudeau with balanced books. Slightly more than a year later, he's decimated the federal balance sheet.

Next up is job creation. In their first year in office, the Liberals have seen a net loss of 30,000 full time jobs. It's time to get on with implementing policies that will create well-paying, full-time jobs in Canada. With the incoming Trump administration, the timing is excellent to get rolling on the Keystone XL pipeline. The government must also defend NAFTA and the millions of jobs in Canada that depend on it.

We will likely see the details of Prime Minister's plan to impose a job-killing carbon tax on Canadians starting in 2018. Combine that with Premier Wynne's similar plan, and you will have significant economic pain being inflicted in Ontario — something that we in Dufferin-Caledon definitely do not need.

As I wrote previously, the Prime Minister is also facing some serious ethical issues, both for himself as well as with some of his Ministers. The Prime Minister is now under investigation by both the Conflict of Interest and Ethics Commissioner as well as the Official Languages Commissioner. On the latter, the Prime Minister answered in French a question asked in English by a woman from Sherbrooke, Quebec. The question was about the lack of mental health ser-

I had the opportunity to participate in the Pre-Budget Consultations of the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs Jan. 19.

Pre-Budget consultations are an opportunity for committee members to hear from organizations and individuals about their suggestions of what they want included in the next budget. It is also an opportunity for opposition MPPs, like myself, to hear about areas where the government isn't providing the funding or service that Ontarians need.

This year, the committee travelled to Brampton to hear from people and organizations in Peel and the surrounding area. We had a variety of presenters, including the Canadian Manufacturers and Exporters Ontario, the Region of Peel and Catholic Family Services of Peel-Dufferin. I want to share with you some areas which struck me as areas that the government needs to address going forward.

A particularly poignant presentation was given by Children's Mental Health Ontario (CMHO). CMHO talked about the shocking wait times for our young people to find mental health care, saying that some children wait 18 months to find treatment in the Ottawa area. They also talked about the 60 per cent increase in hospitalizations for kids with mental health disorders over the last decade. Meanwhile there has been a 50 per cent cut to community services in the last 25 years.

To quote CMHO, "If you're not providing kids with treatment in the community, they are going to go to hospital. The consequences are dire. Kids die while they wait."

CMHO's testimony is even harder for me to hear because I spent 18 months studying mental health and addictions while serving on the Select Committee on Mental Health and Addictions. In the end, we presented 23 recommendations to the legislature that were supported by all parties. That was seven years ago. Those 23 recommendations mean the government knows what is necessary to help our children. It is time to act.

Many organizations brought up issues that I have been hearing for some time. The City of Brampton and the Region of

The corruption of power

By Skid Crease

"Power tends to corrupt and absolute power corrupts absolutely." John Dalberg-Acton (1834-1902)

Lord Acton's full quote went on to say: "Great men are almost always bad men."

In reality, they don't have to be either great or bad to be corrupted by power. We don't consider any of our current politicians to be great. We don't have, for example, a provincial leader like the late and truly great Peter Lougheed. We have no national leader on the global stage with the courage of Mbande Nzinga, the very late and truly great Queen of Angola.

Instead, we have bureaucrats, mandarins and politicians incapable of "seven generations" thinking. It was glaringly apparent when the common sense Conservatives sold the 407 ETR to a foreign conglomerate. Now, the current ruling party is trying to sell off Ontario's publically owned power generation to private enterprise. As financially incompetent as our public utilities are sometimes, the thought of our plutonium privatized in the hands of Bruce Nuclear makes me very nervous.

Recently at Queen's Park, we have seen very angry people protesting over the high electricity prices, very angry about the big bite that these rising energy costs are taking out of their flat-line paychecks. If people are getting that angry, then we all need to take a step back, take a big breath, and look for solutions. After one month of global research, Eureka! That big idea LED light bulb over my head came on in full energy-saving brilliance.

The Grattan Institute study in Australia has come up with "Fair Electricity Pricing" using a "capacity tariff" combined with "time of use" smart metering. Based on their research and doing some calculations that appreciate the Ontario situation, here's what could be a workable solution:

Every household/business gets a basic survival supply of electricity at the lowest kwh cost. It would cover lighting, heating, utilities and tech needs.

It would be based on the number of people in, and the dimensions of, the household/business, balanced to your work day, and whether or not you are a senior. It would also calculate costs based on the season in which the metering is occurring. However, if more than the "basic needs" quantity of electricity is used, then a premium would be paid, increasing in cost with the amount of electricity used.

So, if you are a conservation of energy type of person, your bill is going to be low. If you are an electricity hog, then you are going to pay up big time, household or business, as you should. The incentive here is simple, use energy wisely or go bankrupt. The planet is vice availability in English in that part of the province. The Official Languages Commissioner received a number of complaints and is investigating.

There are open questions remaining for the upcoming session in the House. Is the Prime Minister going ahead with electoral reform? His Democratic Institutions Minister did such a disastrous job over the past year, she got shuffled out of her position. Speaking of the recent Cabinet shuffle, the former Status of Women Minister spent $1.1 million to renovate her office. That went over so well with her boss that she got a promotion to Employment, Workforce Development and Labour. This is not the kind of fiscal irresponsibility Canadians need right now, nor should it be rewarded with promotions.

There will be lots of questions waiting for the Prime Minister and his government when the House resumes Monday. My colleagues and I in the Official Opposition will be there, holding this government to account.

Peel raised concerns about the inaction surrounding the GTA West Corridor. It has been more than a year since the Minister of Transportation took the unprecedented move of suspending an Environmental Assessment, and there still has been no indication on whether the government intends to move forward with project. Others, like the Canadian Manufacturers and Exporters Ontario, raised the issue of Ontario having the highest electricity rates in North America, and that our lack of competitiveness in electricity is compounded by that fact that US states are offering incentive rates to attract and retain manufacturing investment.

What has become clear to me is that many of the issues raised by individuals and organizations have been issues for some time. It is time to act.

Premier, Tory deserve one another

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
Claire Hoy

It has long bemused me when politicians are accused, either by their political opponents or the media, of — wait for it — "playing politics."

It's akin to accusing General Motors of building cars. That's what they do.

And politicians? Well, they do politics.

Which, of course, brings us to the current dispute between Ontario Premier Kathleen Wynne and Toronto Mayor John Tory over the prospect of punishing commuters for driving into downtown Toronto by imposing road tolls on the Gardiner Expressway and the Don Valley Parkway.

If only politicians would put as much effort into finding ways to spend less money as they do in finding ways to make us pay more, we'd all be better off.

But that's not how it works. And despite his campaign promises to bring Toronto's spending under control, Tory, looking at $30 billion in unfunded capital projects in Toronto, settled upon road tolls as a way to pick up some relatively easy cash without making Toronto residents that unhappy.

He knew, of course, that the commuters in the 905 area would be unhappy, but hey, he doesn't have to get their votes to get re-elected.

Wynne, on the other hand, does.

And so began the latest saga of which politician is the most hypocritical and, dare we say it, the most brazenly political.

To hear Tory tell it — along with the bulk of the Toronto media — the clear winner in the boo-hiss category is Wynne. We learn that Tory went trudging up to Queen's Park last September to see the Premier and, when he raised the idea of road tolls, was told by her to: "Go for it, we won't stand in the way."

With that assurance in his pocket then, Tory came out publicly during a Nov. 24 speech, and Dec. 13, City council approved the tolls by a resounding 32-9 tally. In the legislature, when Progressive Conservative Leader Patrick Brown, mindful of outrageous increases in energy prices already facing the public, said "families can't afford this new toll tax," Wynne accused him of having "no plan for building transit or for building transportation infrastructure in this province . . ."

But a funny thing happened on the way to road tolls when Wynne's nervous caucus members went back to their ridings over Christmas, were deluged with complaints from their constituents — the ones who would be paying most of these road taxes — and convinced Wynne that, on top of the aforementioned unpopularity of Liberal energy prices, this would pretty much doom their chances of re-election.

And so, according to the Sunday Star, Jan. 18 — the day after one of Wynne's senior officials met with the city manager to discuss details of the tolls — the Premier called Tory and told him the road tolls were off. Period. End of story.

Tory was beside himself, blurting out to reporters that he is sick of "being treated as a little boy going up to Queen's Park in short pants."

Clearly, Wynne had been convinced by her worried caucus that road tolls would be simply adding fuel to the fire of the Liberal demise, so she reneged on her "promise."

The media coverage in Toronto since then has basically presented Tory as the aggrieved party here, and Wynne as the villain.

For sure, Wynne gave her word, only to betray herself (offering instead a sop in the form of more gas taxes for the city.)

But before we rush off to crown Tory as the good guy in this fight, let us take you back to 2003, the first time Tory ran for mayor, when rival David Miller suggested road tolls. Tory called the idea "highway robbery," and stationed his supporters at the Spadina Avenue entrance to the Gardiner holding signs saying, "Honk if you hate tolls."

Tory said he was concerned about "the impact . . . on the downtown . . ."

Indeed. But in January 2013, as a private citizen on a panel, Tory said he'd "performed a disservice" by attacking Miller, but added "road tolls (are not) the best answer of all the sort of (revenue) tools that are available, but . . . we need some combination of tools to raise this money."

In 2014, in his successful bid for mayor, Tory flatly ruled out road tolls. "We need to make Toronto more affordable and imposing new taxes is not the way to tackle traffic congestion," he said, promising his SmartTrack line and more transit instead.

Once elected, alas, his solemn promises were cast aside and, lo and behold, Tory suddenly believed road tolls were a good thing.

So which is worse: Wynne giving the OK and then reneging, or Tory campaigning against tolls then wanting to impose them?

Two peas in a pod, it seems to me. They deserve each other.

Pond hockey tournament ends up on the street

The weather last Saturday was unseasonably warm, putting a damper on the annual Alton Mill Pond Hockey Classic. But organizers were ready with Plan B, and players left the pond to take part in the grand Canadian custom of street hockey. “We had to roll with what came,” Alton Mill co-proprietor Jeremy Grant observed. Councillor Johanna Downey was sent on a break away by Inspector Ryan Carothers of Caledon OPP.

Golden Hawks to face Siskins in PJHL first round

By Jake Coutepatte

It's been a challenging year for the Caledon Golden Hawks, but the junior C club's biggest challenge yet lies ahead.

With the Provincial Junior Hockey regular season over, the eighth-place Hawks have drawn the first-place Stayner Siskins in the first round of the playoffs.

Matt Magliozzi plants himself in front of the Stayner net in a Caledon Golden Hawks game against the Siskins in November.

They finished the season with a 1-1 record in the final week of play, besting the Huntsville Otters 5-4 on the road Saturday before falling 6-4 to the Alliston Hornets at Caledon East Sunday.

Andrew Ireland had an incredible game between the pipes for the Hawks against Huntsville, facing more than 40 shots in a full game played. With Jason Cumbo sent to the Penetang Kings earlier this month, Ireland should be given the brunt of the duty heading into the post-season.

A slow start to the season was the reason for Caledon landing in the last-place spot, though they have been one of the top teams in the Carruthers division since the start of the year.

In the final month, they earned points in six of their eight games, finishing with a record of 11-29-2. Meanwhile, the Siskins have been red hot all year, usurping the throne of the Alliston Hornets in early January and heading into playoffs with a record of 39-3-0.

It is the first time in four seasons that the Hornets were not crowned regular season champions, with Stayner last doing so in 2011-12.

After some lopsided losses earlier in the season, the Hawks took the Siskins to overtime in early January after a late-game comeback, which can only provide fuel to fire the red-hot Hawks.

The teams kick off their first round series tonight (Thursday) when the Hawks visit Stayner Memorial Arena, where the Siskins lost just one game all season.

Action then shifts to Caledon East Friday night, with a 9 p.m. start time.

In its six year history, Caledon has made it out of the first round of the playoffs once, in 2015-16. It was a different-look Siskins they took down in the quarter-finals in six games, before falling in seven games to the Penetang Kings.

Elsewhere around the league, the second-place Hornets face the seventh-place Schomberg Cougars, the third-place Penetang Kings face the sixth-place Orillia Terriers, and the fourth-place Midland Flyers take on the fifth-place Huntsville Otters.

All pairings are in a best-of-seven format.

Alton Legion President Larry Weltz was accompanied by Steve Hayward last week as they accepted the cheque from the Caledon Council Community Golf Tournament from Tournament Co-ordinator Doreen Beffort, Mayor Allan Thompson and Councillors Johanna Downey, Jennifer innis, Annette Groves, Nick deBoer, Gord McClure, Doug Beffort, Barb Shaughnessy and Rob Mezzapelli.

Legion benefits from council golf tournament

By Bill Rea

The annual Caledon Council Community Golf Tournament in September was another success, and that's a benefit to the Alton branch of the Royal Canadian Legion.

Councillors gathered recently to present a cheque for $73,000 to the branch. The Legion hall is currently undergoing work, including replacing the roof.

"I think we've got some wonderful news here," Mayor Allan Thompson declared, adding the Legion hall has been a hub for the northwest section of Caledon for years. He also thought it was symbolic that the tournament itself is always held at Osprey Valley Golf Course near Alton.

"This was our most successful golf tournament so far," he added.

Councillor Annette Groves was happy that this contribution will help keep the branch going. That's important, as she pointed out the Royal Canadian Legion has more than 300,000 members in some 1,400 branches.

Groves expressed thanks to Doreen Beffort, who has co-ordinated the tournament for the last several years. She also voiced appreciation for the support from the community, and was confident it would be there next year.

The tournament has been going for many years, and Groves said it has raised more than $800,000. She added she expects the number will pass the million mark next year.

"For a small community like Caledon, I think that's wonderful," she commented.

"I'd like to thank the town of Caledon for supporting us," remarked Legion member Steve Hayward.

Tragically killed in Milton, Ontario
February 2, 2007 - 10 years ago

In dreams, we see you
Your smile, your eyes,
We hear your laughter
And all seems real
Until we reach out to touch you
And all disappears
You left us quietly
Your thoughts unknown
So many wonderful memories
We have of our own
May the winds of love blow softly
And whisper so you'll hear
We will always love and miss you
And wish you were here.

It's been 10 years since our last precious hugs.
Always loved and you will be forever with us!

OBITUARIES

DEGRUCHY, Jean
Jean deGruchy writer, lover of the outdoors, gardener, mother, sister, wife and daughter, died on January 24, 2017 at age 86 at Bethell Hospice in Inglewood. Jean, a long time Caledon resident, died of pancreatic cancer. Much to her annoyance, cancer thwarted her plan of dropping dead unexpectedly in her beloved garden. Predeceased by her husband, Philip, Jean was mother to Charles, Jane and Sarah and grandmother to Aleck, Jonathan, Honoria and John Carson. An accomplished freelance writer, Jean started her career at Maclean Hunter Publishing and was an Assistant Editor at Canadian Homes and Gardens and Brides Book and her love of the written word spanned a lifetime and a multitude of articles. Always curious, recently Jean embraced texting and if you were fortunate enough to receive one of her missives, you know she had a great sense of humour and an unexpectedly penetrating viewpoint. Always entrepreneurial and endlessly energetic, Jean established a successful herb and everlasting flower farm gate business in retirement. She was also a frequent gardening expert on Canadian television and at Canada Blooms. Dignified, ladylike and never a lover of fuss, according to Jean's wishes, there will not be a funeral. The family would like to thank the many generous people who provided help, advice and guidance throughout Jean's final journey. From the remarkably human and caring team of health care and palliative support providers to the many people who offered kindness along the way, we sincerely thank all of you. If you would like to remember Jean, buy a plant for your garden, or enjoy her drink of choice: A Starbucks chai latte, with no foam, no water, extra hot and an extra pump of chai. Maybe order an oat bar as well. Donations may also be made in Jean's memory to the Bethell Hospice Foundation at bethellhospice.org. Jean believed there were very few things in life you could control, but your attitude was one of them. She lived a life full of cheer and embraced the positive and had a rich existence as a result.

Condolences for the family may be offered at www.EganFuneralHome.com

SMITH, William (Bill) Geoffrey
Peacefully at Headwaters Health Care Centre on Saturday, January 28, 2017, at the age of 84.
