As I look out at the Class of 2023, I realize all the talents that were discovered over these past four years and the hard work we put in to get ourselves to this moment. I see artists, academics, athletes, some social butterflies, and some indispensable introverts... What is so exciting about this time in our lives is that we have the choice to choose who we want to be, what we want to pursue, and what we truly care about. Choose wisely, but also know everything is subject to change."

Bicentennial of Sandhill commemorated at Caledon Day

Sandhill, which is by Airport Road and King Street, was settled in 1819

BY ZACHARY ROMAN

The 200th anniversary of the settlement of Sanhdill was celebrated recently.

On June 17, a procession featuring Caledon's Town Crier and the Sandhill Pipes and Drums left from Caledon's Town Hall at 2 p.m. and headed for the Caledon Day Culture Stage.

The parade through Caledon Day marked the bicentennial of Sandhill, one of Caledon's many unique villages. Located by Airport Road and King Street, Sandhill was once a prosperous 19th century crossroads settlement.

Caledon Councillors and a small crowd of Sandhill residents joined in the procession and met at the Culture Stage, where dignitaries read remarks and residents got to learn about the history of Sandhill.

Caledon's Town Crier, Andrew Welch, read an official proclamation to mark Sandhill's 200th anniversary. Due to the pandemic and other factors, Sandhill's bicentennial had to be celebrated a few years after its official date.

Sandhill is located on tableland in the central part of the Peel Plain. Its first known settlers were Timothy Terry, the son of a United Empire Loyalist; George and John Robinson, brothers who came from Ireland; and Loyalist Edward Freeman.

Sandhill soon became a prime agricultural area and in 1835 it got its first doctor: Dr. Thomas Henry, who was from a place called Sandy Hill in Ireland. In the next few years, Inns and Taverns sprang up in the Village, as well as a general store.

Then, in 1841, a post office was established in the Village and it was called Sand Hill. By 1850 there were two hotels in the community and its first schoolhouse was built.

Sandhill had rich soil that was great for growing wheat, making local farmers prosperous. These great economic conditions meant that soon, Sandhill had a weaver, tailor, carpenter, builder, mason, carriage maker, wagon maker, and multiple boot and shoe makers.

In 1871, the Toronto Grey & Bruce Railway was routed through Mono Road, and although Sandhill was bypassed, it still thrived as it was in a prominent north-south transportation route.

Telephones, electricity and automobiles, while advances in society, spelt the beginnings of Sandhill's end as a busy village. By 1910, there was only one general store and a post office in Town, accompanied by a blacksmith and shoe shop. By 1916, even the post office had closed.

The expansion of Airport Road and King Street in recent decades eliminated almost all traces of the original Sandhill. However, a bicentennial plaque featuring information about Sandhill will be placed there to help remember the history of what was once a busy crossroads settlement.

DON'T BE A VICTIM TO AUTO THEFT: OPP

Officers from the Caledon Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) would like to take this opportunity to remind everyone of important reminders to best protect yourself from vehicle thefts.

"Auto theft continues to be a commonly reported property-related crime in Caledon and across the province," say Police. "Today's auto thieves are increasingly turning to technology that bypasses security systems allowing vehicles to be stolen. Electronic auto theft is on the rise as more vehicles are equipped with technology such as keyless entry fobs. In fact, the insurance industry has seen the growing trend that thieves are able to copy FOB information and steal cars right from your driveway. Another methodology is 'relay thefts' and it involves the use of equipment designed to boost and exploit the signals sent out by a vehicle's legitimate key fob. This allows for a thief to unlock and start an engine of a vehicle remotely."

Residents can help protect their vehicles by taking any of the following crime prevention measures:

- Ensure your vehicle keys are kept well away from doors and windows;
- Use a signal blocking pouch they can block your key fob from transmitting its code to the vehicle as the pouch is lined with layers or metallic material;
- Turn off the keyless fob wireless signal at night - refer to your car manual for instructions;
- Use a steering wheel lock this could add a significant delay or be a deterrent for thieves;
- Consider a secondary audible car alarm - which works by using sensors placed in different points of

Residents of Bolton may have noticed new pieces of public art popping up recently.

With the painting of two murals and the recent callout for an artist to create a sculpture for the to implement art exhibits at community centres Humber River Centre, it's clear public art is taking centre stage in the revitalization of Downtown Bolton.

Jason Schildroth, manager of community and cultural development for the Town of Caledon, explained that public art was embedded in the Downtown Bolton revitalization plan as a priority.

He said in all the surveys the Town did, community members said public art is an important way to bring life to public spaces. This led to the creation of a public art program, which looked for places that could use a boost to change the way people view them.

The first space identified in Bolton was the Queen Street Bridge Underpass, somewhere there was typically lots of graffiti and vandalism. In 2022, artist Blaze Wiradharma was hired by the Town to make a giant street art-style mural that paid homage to the Humber River.

"That's how the public art conversation really started in Downtown Bolton," said Schildroth. He said the underpass has transformed from a place people would shuffle past quickly to somewhere where people are even stopping to take photos.

"People take selfies with it now... it's exciting to see as well the vandalism has stopped there," said Schildroth. With the success of the Queen Street Bridge Underpass project, Town staff and the Downtown Bolton Revitalization Task Force moved forward, knowing they could achieve that same success elsewhere. Giuliana Giancotta, project manager of community projects for the Town of Caledon, said public art is an important tool in placemaking, which is in turn, an important tool for economic development. She explained that placemaking is about creating the maximum value out of shared public spaces. Giancotta said placemaking and economic development go hand in hand. When there's a place people want to be at, businesses want to be there too. That's why the Town views public art as an asset.

School are painting a piano that was donated to the Town, and this piano will be implemented for public use somewhere in Caledon at a future date.

Also happening right now, the Town is working with the Peel Art Gallery, Museum, and Archives across Town.

Coming later this summer is the Caledon Creative Arts Festival, which will be hosted by the Town and Caledon Public Library in August.

"We're looking to use art as a way to bring people together, educate, engage, share a feeling, and create a sense of place," said Schildroth.

Giancotta said it's important to note the Town has planned for the maintenance of its public art. Schildroth agreed and said the Town views public art as something someone has invested a lot of time and creative energy into and, therefore as something that's worth maintaining.

This mural, painted by Blaze Wiradharma, is the second to be created by him in Downtown Bolton. His art is part of the Town's efforts to revitalize the area. CONTRIBUTED PHOTO

"We think it is incredibly worth the value and the time, and I think you're seeing that too with the public reaction," said Giancotta.

Schildroth said public art is all part of making a downtown area somewhere that people want to go to. For example, they may come to see a new mural and then grab an ice cream from a local shop. He said it can even inspire visitors to Town to check it out.

"If you're on Google Maps and you see there's neat public art... you're more likely to want to get out of your vehicle, stop, take a walk around, grab a coffee," said Schildroth.

Giancotta said the Downtown Bolton Revitalization Task Force is working with Town staff every step of the way in the public art process. For the recent mural painted on a building in Downtown Bolton at King and Queen Streets, the idea was to make it bright, colourful, and representative of nature.

"We invited everyone to do research, it's a very collaborative approach," said Giancotta. "It's completely community driven... that's the wonderful part about having the task force."

With the revitalization of Bolton going well, Town staff plan to continue to work there. However, they are also going to be expanding revitalization work to Caledon's other villages and hamlets. Bolton was kind of like a pilot project to prove the strategy works, said Schildroth, and now the goal is to bring revitalization to as many villages and hamlets as possible.

"It won't be overnight, but we're definitely looking at Caledon East, Southfields, and Alton as our next springboard locations," said Schildroth. He noted at a recent Council meeting, Town staff asked for the creation of a Caledon East Revitalization Task Force to begin work there. The request was approved.

"It's a huge opportunity to take what we have learned in Bolton... and apply it Town-wide," said Schildroth.

Giancotta shared some details about other interesting public art initiatives in Town.

Background:

Peel Region has started the Bolton Water and Wastewater Capacity Improvements Municipal Class Environmental Assessment (MCEA) study. This MCEA builds off a Feasibility Study recently completed which outlined conceptual water and wastewater projects that service the additional development proposed within both the intensification and greenfield growth areas in the Community of Bolton. This study will evaluate all potential alternatives to developing the best water and wastewater servicing solutions to meet existing needs and growth within the Bolton study area.

Process:

This study will follow the 2023 process for a Schedule "C" MCEA project, which includes:

- · Indigenous community engagement and public and stakeholder consultation
- · Identification of projects that may be exempted from the MCEA process (as per recent 2023 amendment) through the Archaeological Screening Process
- Development and evaluation of water and wastewater servicing alternatives
- · Selection of the preferred water and wastewater servicing alternative including routes, sites, design, and schedule

Your Input is Important:

Two Public Information Centres (PICs) will be held to present the findings of the MCEA study and provide opportunities to give feedback to the project team. The first PIC is planned for Fall 2023 to present the alternate water and wastewater servicing solutions and the second PIC is anticipated in the Summer of 2024. Once the study is complete, results will be published in an Environmental Study Report (ESR) and will be made available for public review and comment.

Caledon Day's return to Caledon East a big success

BY ZACHARY ROMAN

Caledon Day was well-attended this year.

It took place on Saturday, June 17 at the Caledon East Community Complex and featured a wide variety of things for attendees to do.

The Sheepdogs, a Juno Award-winning rock band, were the headlining musical act and performed from 8:30 until 9:45 p.m. when they did an encore and a fireworks show began.

There were many food trucks and food vendors in attendance, as well as a variety of local craft beer and cider vendors. A large vendor market was part of the event as well.

There were performances all day on the Town of Caledon's Culture Stage, and fun games for kids to enjoy in the sun.

In the morning on Caledon Day was the Velocity Ride in Support of Caledon Seniors. Other notable events during the day included the marking of Sandhill's bicentennial and the first-ever Pride walk to be held in Caledon.

Catherine McLean, Caledon's director of community services, said being back in Caledon East for Caledon Day for the first time since the COVID-19 pandemic was very exciting. She said the backdrop of the newly-renovated Caledon East Community Complex certainly helped make the event look great. The complex is going to fully reopen to residents on September 5, with an official opening ceremony on September 16.

McLean explained the Town's Community, Culture and Engagement team worked together with the Town's Recreation team to plan the Culture Stage, something new at Caledon Day this year.

From 2 p.m. up until the Sheepdogs played on the Main Stage, there were a variety of performances held on the Culture Stage.

There was a drag show, bhangra fitness class, Syrian music, a performance from Robert F. Hall's African Black Caribbean Club, and more.

"We are committed as a Town to embracing diversity," said McLean. "This is one way we can highlight that."

McLean lives in Caledon and grew up in Caledon, and said she was happy to see the first-ever Caledon Pride walk coincide with Caledon Day. She said she was proud to see the Town making Caledon Day an event where everyone can feel welcome.

"Caledon is about connecting the community... it's an event for our whole Town," said McLean.

Caledon Day returned to Caledon East this year after being held on Canada Day at the Albion Hills Conservation Area last summer.

Smile Cookie campaign raises nearly $50,000 for Caledon Meals on Wheels

BY ZACHARY ROMAN

Caledon residents purchased a whole lot of cookies for a cause this year.

On June 19, Caledon Meals on Wheels (CMOW) announced it had received a $49,849 donation from local Tim Hortons restaurant owners.

The money donated is proceeds from the sales of Smile Cookies at the Bolton, Caledon Village, and Airport/Mayfield Road Tim Hortons restaurants.

Since 2015, over $225,000 has been raised for CMOW from the Smile Cookie campaign. All funds raised are used to support CMOW's nutrition, safety, social, and wellness programs for seniors and people with disabilities.

Christine Sevigny, CMOW's executive director, said she loves to see the energy and awareness the campaign creates each year.

"We are incredibly grateful to Tim Hortons and all of our Caledon restaurant owners, their staff.

and guests, for making the Smile Cookie campaign a success again this year," said Sevigny in a media release. "The simple act of buying cookies has an incredible impact not only for Caledon but for other communities across the country. Our Tim Hortons restaurants and community see the value in what we do, and the difference that each cookie purchase makes."

Considering the needs vs. wants of others

Any of us who went through school in Ontario join 'em" spirit of resignation. most likely knows the basics of Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs, but sometimes it feels like a re- struck me that what we need to collectively do fresher might be needed.

The pyramid model developed by psychologist Abraham Maslow in the middle of the Second World War was intended to break down, in easily digestible categories, what humans need to lead and maintain an ideal existence. Or, at least one where all their most pressing needs are met.

The Pyramid is often dusted off in school courses under the broad business umbrella, but if it's been a while, here's a capsule refresher.

At the bottom of the pyramid is our most integral need – the Physiological – which includes the necessities of air, water, food and shelter. It's foundational place on the model is, of course, a testament to its unnegotiable place for humans the world-over.

The next level encompasses safety needs such as health and security when it comes to the personal, emotional and financial.

Love and social needs come next, and this stirred discomfort for some. entails family, friendship, trust and acceptance, among other factors.

As much as this was drummed into us from probably have been quite evident. reasonably early ages, I wonder if this structure is still relevant today. I very much doubt anyone a fairly succinct list of reasons why Pride events, would dispute the foundational needs of air, water, food, shelter, and rest as the very cornerstones of our survival, but it seems that some of these lines are now blurred; that the once seemingly clear line between needs and wants are being real or perceived sexual orientation and gender bulldozed together for many reasons, practical and sometimes political.

Each day, whether it's an idea that has been floated in a Council Chamber, provincial legislature, or the House of Commons, or even a community initiative with a dollar value assigned to it, we hear the hue and cry of "Do we really need this?" or "Who asked for this?" Some groups might readily raise their hands to the last question, while others might answer the former with a resounding "Yes!" leaving still more scratching their heads – often in show rather than genuine puzzlement. And this performative act is often accompanied by innuendo subtle and not-so-subtle that clearly indicates they know the answer to their queries.

This approach was underscored to me in a reasonably benign way over the weekend during a country. family gathering where one acquaintance lit upon

A couple of days later, another missive came my way questioning the need to recognize our Indigenous people through this week's National Indigenous Peoples' Day and similar observances related to Truth & Reconciliation in the autumn. The suggestion being that the news is saturated in this particular topic...apparently in a way that

A recent poll revealed that roughly 30% of new, young immigrants may leave in the next two years.

The poll, by Leger for the Institute for Canadian Citizenship (ICC), showed 30 per cent of new Canadians aged 18-34, and 23 per cent of university-educated new Canadians, said they are likely to move to another country in the next two years.

While they generally believe Canada provides a good quality of life for immigrants, researchers said Canadians were more likely to have a positive outlook on Canada's prospects for immigrants than the immigrants themselves.

"Canada is a nation of immigrants - and one of the stories we tell ourselves is that we are welcoming to new immigrants, wherever they may be from," said ICC CEO Daniel Bernhard in a press release. "But while this may be generally true, new survey data points to the fact that many new Canadians are having a crisis of confidence in Canada - and that should be ringing alarm bells all over Ottawa."

And here's the rub. The challenges for immigrants is the cost of living in Canada. According to the survey, 75 per cent of new Canadians between the ages of 18 and 34 said they believe the rising cost of living means immigrants are less likely to stay in Canada, a statement with which 46 per cent of Canadians in the same age group also agreed.

The cost of living in Canada has recently jumped at a rate not seen in over 30 years, with economists warning that inflation rates could get even higher. Housing is also becoming increasingly scarce, with record-low mortgage rates propelling Canadian home prices 52 per cent higher over the past two years and fewer rentals available on the market at struggle every week. an affordable price.

Statistics Canada reported yesterday that Canada's debt to income ratio jumped in Q1, rising from I'm sure all of us still have them. 181.7 per cent to 184.5 per cent.

In dollar figures, this means that for every dollar come true.

Emigration from Canada showed unusually high annual growth - the biggest since 2004.

Yes, there's a base effect but a global recession typically produces those. After all, recessions produce new opportunities for those with skill and capital

Of course, numbers don't tell the whole story, and the economy is still rebounding from the pandemic. But we can't ignore the emigration figures or survey data, both of which point to a bigger problem. Our country is becoming very expensive to live in.

Governments at all levels need to take heed and re-examine some of their priorities.

We need to help everyone - average citizens who toil to make ends meet; new graduates; seniors who

Record number of riders at 5th annual Velocity Ride in Support of Caledon Seniors

Nearly $70,000 raised from ride as of press time

BY ZACHARY ROMAN

Everyone from local cycling legends to brand-new riders put their pedals to the pavement for a good cause last Saturday.

In the morning on June 17, cyclists gathered at Caledon's Town Hall in Caledon East to participate in the 5th annual Velocity Ride in Support of Caledon Seniors. The ride is hosted each year by Caledon Community Services (CCS) to raise money for its programs that help Caledon seniors age in place and increase their quality of life.

This year, a record number of riders participated in the ride: 145.

Whether they took on the family-friendly 10-kilometre journey, 100-kilometre expert expedition, or something in between, participating riders got a commemorative t-shirt, lunch, refreshments, and even a free ice cream coupon.

CCS' Chief Development Officer, Mariia Kupriianova, said it was a fantastic day and she was so excited to see the record number of riders in attendance. She said it's been awesome to see the Velocity Ride grow and become more successful over the years.

"Our community has really stepped up to raise an astonishing amount... this is definitely a record," said Kupriianova. "These funds will support our seniors, the essential health and wellness programs, accessible transportation and respite care."

CCS' CEO, Geraldine Aguiar, said Caledon is a community that really cares about its seniors.

"We're all here to support them," said Aguiar. "There's seniors choosing between medication and transportation, utilities and food. Anything an organization Anne Thompson, who fundraised for the like ours can do to help, we will."

At the ride, awards were given out for several categories such as top fundraising team and youngest rider.

This year's top fundraising team was Ted's Terra Cotta Trailblazers, who raised $7,034.84. This team was the 2022 top fundraiser as well. It was led by Ted Webb, 90, who also ended up being the 2023 event's top male fundraiser.

a short address to the crowd at the ride. "I have a secret for you: keep on cycling and you'll live as long as I have."

The top female fundraiser this year was event alongside her husband, former Caledon Mayor Allan Thompson.

Anne said supporting CCS through the Velocity Ride was an easy choice, knowing the great services it provides for seniors. The Thompsons participated in the ride themselves, enjoying the nice weather and conditions on the Caledon Trailway.

As of press time, nearly $70,000 has been raised from this year's Velocity Ride. "I love riding in Caledon," said Webb in Donations are being accepted until July 31 online at tinyurl.com/VRCCS23.

Great turnout for inaugural Pride Walk on Caledon Trailway

"Being able to rely on a partner to organize was really great," said Bertola. "They brought together a bunch of organizations."

Bertola said the Pride walk was the first time the LGBTQ community in Caledon has really made its presence known in a public place.

"We've raised the flag at Town Hall and in Downtown Bolton, but we've never really walked the community with a bunch of people and signs," said Bertola. "It feels a little scary... but I imagine myself as a kid, even if I wasn't able to participate fully, it would have been something I'd remember for a long time."

With Caledon Day being such a big event, and the Pride walk coinciding with it, Bertola said it was a great chance for Caledon Pride and the LGBTQ community to be visible. Caledon Pride had a booth at Caledon Day.

"It's important for us because we belong here... that's what Pride month is, bringing the community together," said Bertola.

Jason Schildroth, the Town of Caledon's Manager of Community and Cultural Development, was key in helping set up the Pride walk.

Schildroth said IDEA Caledon's goal is to advance diversity, equity, and inclusion work while making Caledon as welcoming and accessible as possible.

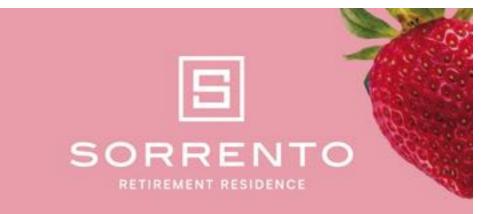

"It's an important moment in Ontario right now to make sure that Pride stays at the forefront," said Schildroth. "This is a relatively small gesture, but it matters."

He said the walk was an opportunity for the community to come together and show its allyship while enjoying a nice walk on the Caledon Trailway.

"Pride matters, and [so does] showing that this is a community for everybody," said Schildroth. "If you are not a member of the Pride community yourself, you quite possibly have a family member, loved one or friend who might be. It's important to show some support during Pride month."

Schildroth said he wanted to extend a sincere thank you to all the members of IDEA Caledon for embracing the idea of a Pride walk and working so hard to make it a reality.

"We're all so passionate about building and showcasing how welcoming and inclusive Caledon is," said Schildroth.

OHL draft pick Andersen commits to Sarnia

BY JIM STEWART

Country Day School Cyclone Matthew Andersen has had an eventful spring.

In late-April, the Grade 10 "lifer" at CDS and Barrie Junior Colts U16AAA defenseman was drafted by the OHL's Sarnia Sting in the ninth round.

The amiable resident of Aurora disclosed the best part of being drafted: "Sarnia was the team I wanted to get drafted by. I did shed some tears when my name came up. It was nice to get the good news with my brothers, mom, and dad around me. I hugged my brother, Jake, who has helped me so much along the way."

A sturdy defenseman for both the Cyclone and the Colts, who went #177 in the draft, Andersen was pleased by the future opportunities that await him with Sarnia.

"The Sting is mostly comprised of older players right now, but I will have my shot on the dance floor."

It's evident that Andersen has impressed at every level of hockey, including his year's skating for the Country Day School Cvclone.

CDS Hockey Head Coach David Drake said he was pleased that his top defenseman was drafted by the Sting.

"I am so happy for Matthew. His work ethic and hard work have really paid off." Coach Drake noted Andersen's traits as ping stone to the big OHL club.

"For now, my goal is to play Junior B with the Sting's affiliate team, the Sarnia Legionnaires. I've attended their camp and I like the Sting's motto 'A Community Like No Other'."

Andersen described Sarnia Sting General Manager Dylan Seca as "a great guy who believes in building community; he invites you into the community and really connects with his players and their parents. Community has always been important to me."

While Andersen is focused sharply on his future and his growing connection to the Sting hockey community, he was also reflective about the good times he has had at The Country Day School-a "lifer" as he refers to himself since he has attended the prestigious private school from JK to Grade 10.

"The best part of attending CDS for 12 years is the support you have from the teachers. It's a community and it's always felt like home for me. Having my dad (Athletic Director John Andersen) and my brothers here-it's always been comfortable. The teachers at CDS understood me, especially during COVID when I was struggling with online learning."

He reflected fondly not only on the help a leader on his Cyclone hockey team: "His dedication, his commitment; he's an unbelievable teammate." Most memorable for the Cyclone bench boss "were Matthew's end-to-end rushes. He scored some big goals this season and was an important figure for us on our power play. It was Matthew's decisive goal that helped get our team into the playoffs."

Getting to the playoffs was not only Andersen's goal at CDS, but his team goal with the AAA Barrie Junior Colts.

The best part of his final AAA season was "making the OHL Cup, beating Sarnia-a Top 8 team- and winning a playin game to compete. Our team got closer due to the experience and we achieved our goal of playing in the OHL Cup as brothers."

In looking ahead to his next hockey season, Andersen signed late last week to play Junior B hockey in Sarnia as a stephe got from staff to weather the COVID storm, but he also offered warm memories of "playing Soccer at CDS since Grade 4 and building friendships, winning a softball championship [for CDS] in Grade 6, and playing basketball both in Junior School and during the intramural lunch time programs."

For Andersen, helping out with the Intramural Program and participating in it at noon hour is "a way to let go and enjoy myself. Last year and this year, I have been helping out with the Intramural Lunch Sports Program."

As Summer 2023 approaches, Matthew Andersen is closing one chapter in his life after twelve years at The Country Day School, but starting the next chapter in Sarnia where his potential as an OHL defenseman will be realized after a developmental year with the Legionnaires.

When you buy from a small business you're not helping a C.E.O buy a 3rd holiday home, you are helping a little girl get dance lessons, a little boy get his team jersey, a mom or dad put food on the table, a family pay a mortgage or a student pay for college.

Talk Caledon

Call or email the Town, take a picture if you can, parks staff respond and said tree is chopped down along with a confirmation email sent to you. It's not always that easy to be sure but having had numerous interactions with town staff over the past few weeks, every single issue was resolved in a reasonable timeframe. Imagine that!

To be clear it's not all wine and roses. While you're imagining what it's like to deal with the Town, also remember that there will be times we're not always happy with the answers. I'm absolutely NOT happy with emails that have gone back and forth since January the proper channels at least gets answers; in Caledon you reside. griping on Facebook accomplishes next to nothing. I suppose I've been harping on about following proper channels because I imagine as Caledon residents we have a great deal of work ahead of us. If we want to imagine a better Caledon that is still green, not pitted with pits (or worse yet, blasting quarries) and one where your Councillors still might have a say at the table in terms of trying to represent your interests over those of Mr. Ford and his "strong Mayor" minions, we better darn well start imagining "all the people, sharing all the world" (Caledon) and treating Caledon as one of this year concerning parks, roads and infra- – where working together to resolve issues is py with my meagre attempt at co-opting his structure in Valleywood but griping through in everyone's best interests no matter where song but seriously, you may say I'm a dreamer but just imagine a brotherhood of man, all working together toward the common good of Caledon
