

More allegations against Thompson

There are additional allegations against Mayor Allan Thompson regarding conflict of interest issues.

The Toronto Star first reported yesterday (Wednesday) that there is a claim Thompson received a $600,000 loan from two developers in return for favourable votes at the council table when it came to proposed residential developments.

These have been added to conflict of interest allegations filed against the mayor last year by Caledon resident Kelly Darnley.

The case is scheduled to come up in court again Feb. 2.

While Thompson could not be reached for comment, his office reported that he would have no comment while the matter is before the courts.
