

Roll Up the Rim car winner collects her prize

By Bill Rea

Many customers of Tim Hortons roll up their rims in March with hope.

Bolton resident Patricia Giorgio did it with success.

And she collected the prize Tuesday, in the form of a 2014 Toyota Corolla S, complete with a navigation package. She commented the win has still not yet sunk in.

Giorgio said she stopped in at the Tim Hortons in the Bolton valley one Saturday evening in March and bought a medium regular coffee.

‘The car cost us a whole dollar-eighty,’ she remarked.

‘It was my daughter who rolled up the rim,’ she said. ‘We didn’t believe it.’

‘This doesn’t happen to me,’ she added ‘Until we take it home, I still don’t believe it.’

The presentation was made by the owners of the outlet where the coffee was purchased, accompanied by Mike Rietta, general sales manager of Bolton Toyota. He also told Giorgio that the first two maintenance checks on the car were going to be on the house.

She also said her daughter will be using the car most of the time, once she gets her licence.

Patricia Giorgio accepted the keys for her new car from Bolton Toyota General Sales Manager Mike Rietta, accompanied by Bolton Tim Hortons proprietors Brad Stafford, his wife Liz and his father Barry.
