

Teacher facing assault charge

Both Caledon OPP and the Peel District School Board are releasing few details regarding an alleged assault. Police report a school resource officer from the detachment learned in early December that a possible assault had taken place at a local school. Further investigation indicated that a male teacher had apparently physically assaulted a student. They added the student did not require medical attention at the time. Police have charged a 46-year-old teacher employed with the Peel board with assault. The accused's name will not be released due to the possibility that it may identify the victim.
