Caledon is home to Miss Universe Canada 2014

By Bill Rea

It's a major honour to be named Miss Universe Canada 2014.

But Cedar Mills resident Chanel Beckenlehner knows it's also going to be a full-time job.

Beckenlehner, 25, won the title May 24 at the St. Lawrence Centre for the Arts, coming out of the competition that involved 65 young women from all over the country.

While this is still essentially a beauty pageant, Beckenlehner said there's more to it than that.

"The big thing for us is our humanitarian work," she observed.

There are two major charities that she's been very involved with.

One is SOS Children's Village, an independent, non-government organization which is active in addressing orphaned and abandoned children's needs, concerns and rights. She said she's raised some $35,000, and plans to soon travel to Nicaragua to pass the money on.

She pointed out all the contestants had to do some charitable fundraising, but her efforts stood out, as the grand total raised came to about $132,000.

Another cause she's enthused about is Operation Smile, which is aimed at providing corrective surgery to children in Nicaragua with cleft palates. The operation is expensive, so she's looking forward to helping some of these Third World kids receive the treatment.

In addition, Beckenlehner is motivated to help with awareness and prevention of HIV/AIDS, which she said is part of the official platform of the Miss Universe program, and which is an issue she spent a year studying at University of Toronto.

"I really felt in tune with the subject and it made me realize how important our health is," she said. "Without your health, you've got nothing."

She added she considers herself well prepared to be a spokesperson on the topic, talking to kids about testing and prevention, and what to do if they get the virus.

Anti-bullying is another cause that's close to Beckenlehner. While in high school (she attended Huron Heights Secondary School in Newmarket, which is where her mother taught), she put together a program to address these problems, complete with peer guidance, counselling and help working through issues. She's also been able to take the message to other schools, and she expects that activity to increase.

"Now that I'm a public figure, I think it really hits home with them too," Beckenlehner remarked.

Winning the title Miss Universe Canada makes Beckenlehner eligible to vie for Miss Universe, likely to be held sometime in the fall. She said she was expecting the time and location to be announced this past weekend, coinciding with the Miss USA contest. But she said earlier this week there was still no word.

"Hopefully someplace sunny, although anywhere they pick will be an experience," she observed.

Police have tips to help make sure cyclists stay safe

From the desk of
Inspector Tim Melanson
Commander, Caledon OPP

Now that spring is well under way and warmer temperatures are the norm, bicycle riders of all ages are returning to streets and sidewalks around town.

With this in mind, officers with the Caledon Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) would like to remind parents, children and motorists of some simple but very important safety tips in the hopes of preventing unnecessary accidents and injuries.

Motorists are asked to slow down and to pay extra attention when travelling near parks and schools. Children at play often forget to look out for cars, which can lead to mishaps. Focusing on driving and avoiding distractions could be the difference between a close call or a trip to the hospital.

All cyclists under 18 years of age must wear an approved helmet or risk being fined $80 according to the Highway Traffic Act of Ontario. If the person is under the age of 16, their parents can be fined.

Even though there is no law stipulating adults to wear a helmet, wearing one just makes good sense. Parents are encouraged to set a good example and to be a role model for their children by wearing their helmets too.

Caledon OPP is reminding bicycle riders to use a lock when leaving bikes unattended in public places and to keep garage doors at home locked overnight. The best protection is prevention, so please "lock it or lose it."

Other Safety Tips

• Be a responsible cyclist and obey the rules of the road.
• Helmets should fit snugly and sit level and square on your head.
• Have a bell or horn on your bike and ensure it is in good working order.
• Make sure the tires are properly inflated and that the brakes work.
• Night riders need a white light on the front and red light or reflector on the back.
• Dress brightly to be seen at night.
• Passengers are not allowed on a bicycle designed for one person.
• Ride about one metre from the curb, in a straight line.
• Avoid pot holes, sewer grates or debris.
• Keep a record of your bikes serial number in case it is ever stolen.
• Cyclists must stop and identify themselves if requested by a police officer.
• Don't ride and text or talk on the phone.

For additional information on bicycle safety, visit the Ministry of Transportation website at www.mto.gov.on.ca/english/pubs/cycling-guide

Car seat clinic June 24

Two dead in Highway 10 crash

By Bill Rea

The investigation continues into a two-vehicle head-on collision that claimed the lives of two people and sent a third to hospital in critical condition last Thursday (June 5).

Caledon OPP reports the mishap happened at about 1:15 p.m. on Highway 10 a couple of hundred metres north of Beech Grove Sideroad.

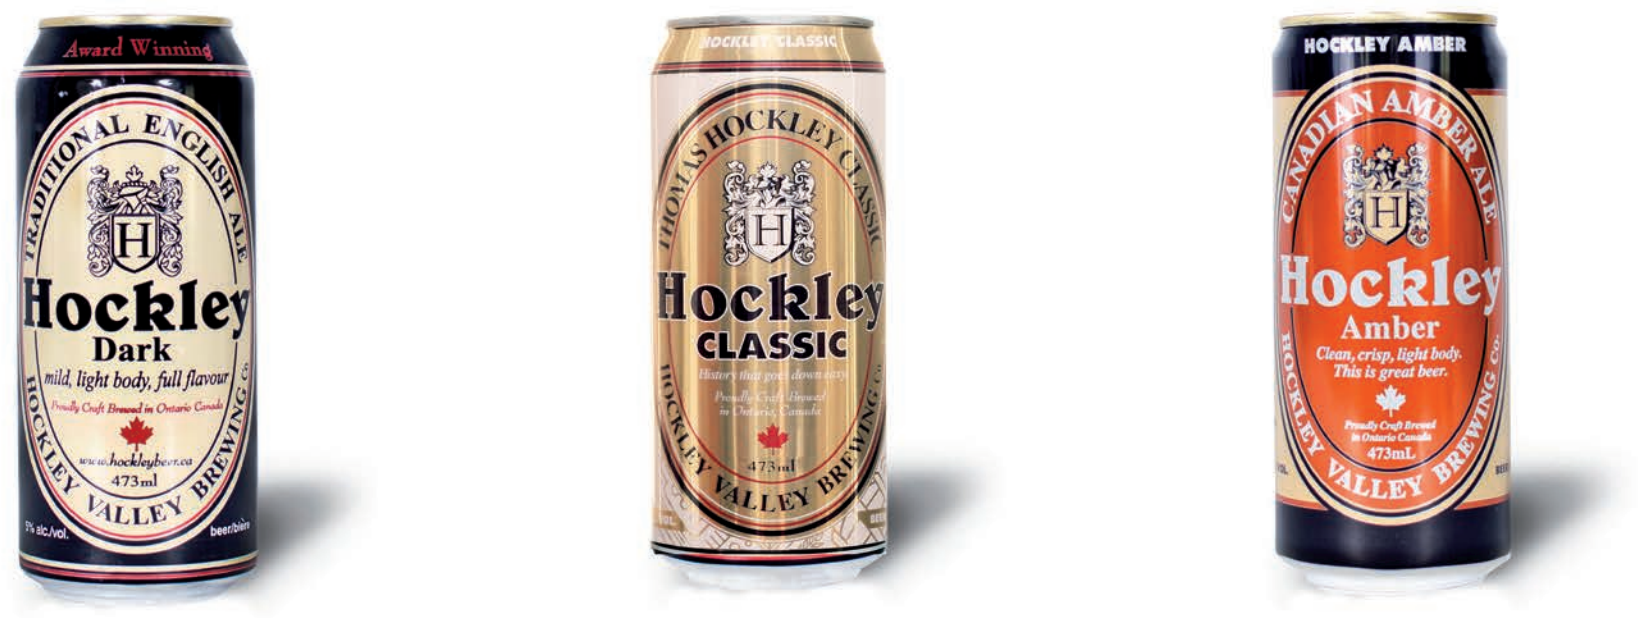

Constable Brenda Evans reported it involved a white GMC pick-up truck heading south and a northbound grey Mazda van. "For some unknown reason," one of the vehicles crossed the centre line and collided with the other, she said, adding the van was engulfed in flames and ended up on its side.

The drivers of both vehicles were pronounced dead at the scene while a passenger in the pick-up was taken to hospital. The driver of the pick-up was identified as Karen Hammond, 56, from Orangeville. The injured passenger was Jason Hammond, 39, of Wasaga Beach, who remains in critical condition.

The driver of the grey Mazda has been identified as William Taylor, 51, of Orangeville.

Police are asking anyone with information on this incident to contact them at 905-584-2241.

Sparks fly at all-candidates' meeting

By Bill Rea

The crowd meant business last Thursday night, and so did the candidates as the Caledon Chamber of Commerce hosted an all-candidates' meeting at James Bolton Public School.

Four of the five candidates seeking to represent Dufferin-Caledon at Queen's Park were on hand, and there were several sharp barbs exchanged.

There were also several occasions when candidates were put on the defensive.

Liberal Bobbie Daid faced shots over her youthful appearance and inexperience.

"I'm a lot older than I look," she commented in her opening remarks.

For her part, she lashed out at the Progressive Conservatives' plan to cut 100,000 jobs from the public service, while stressing the need to extend GO Transit and Highway 427.

New Democrat Rehya Yazbek lashed out at Tory Sylvia Jones, accusing her party, while in government, of selling assets for peanuts and not listening to Bolton residents over the massive Canadian Tire development proposal.

"We are the party that advocates for regular people," she declared.

Jones stressed her record at Queen's Park, adding she wants to help her party enhance jobs and opportunities to work close to where people live. She also said she brought in a private member's bill to increase the use of recycled aggregate,

Wynne promises GO service between Bolton and Vaughan

By Bill Rea

Premier Kathleen Wynne was in Bolton Friday, showing something of a knack for making pizza and to make a transit announcement.

Wynne was greeted by Dufferin-Caledon candidate Bobbie Daid and a room filled with party faithful at Caruso Gourmet Pizza, as she announced there will be a GO Transit express bus service between Bolton and the new subway station in Vaughan. That will come into effect, she said, once the station is completed. That's expected in 2017.

She said it would add to the transit connectivity in the Greater Toronto Area (GTA).

Wynne also stressed the government has a role to play in improving people's lives, and needs to continue making a difference. Transportation is one of the important items she cited, stressing the need to be able to get people to and from work without daily frustration.

She also said there are some politicians who would stand in the way of such progress.

Wynne said that Progressive Conservative Leader Tim Hudak would cut the investment in infrastructure.

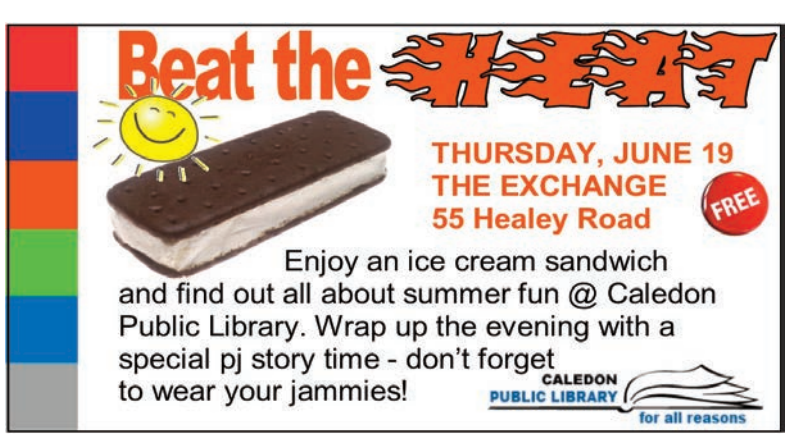

"Just like Rob Ford, Mr. Hudak is about subways, subways, subways," she charged.

Wynne also used the occasion to boost the candidacy of Daid .

"She is one fantastic candidate for Dufferin-Caledon and she is coming to Queen's Park," Wynne declared.

Jones reinforces Tory commitment to scrap Drive Clean program

By Angela Gismondi

Sylvia Jones has announced that if elected, the Progressive Conservative Party plans to eliminate the Drive Clean program.

With the provincial election taking place today (Thursday), Jones made a stop at Fines Ford Lincoln in Bolton last week to reinforce the Tories' commitment to get rid of the program. She was joined by business owner Bob Fines, Frank Notte, director of government relations for the Trillium Automobile Dealers Association, and representatives from the local automobile community.

"The program is no longer necessary in Ontario and should be phased out," Jones explained.

Ontario's Drive Clean is an automobile emissions control program which began in 1999 under the PC government of Mike Harris. The government introduced the program with the primary goal of testing automobile emissions and identifying the most polluting vehicles. The program is administered by Parson's Protect Air, through the Ministry of the Environment (MOE) and Ministry of Transportation (MTO). The actual testing is carried out by privately owned and operated automotive shops, under contract to the MOE.

The Drive Clean test determines if a vehicle meets Ontario emissions standards. By law, certain cars, vans, trucks, motor homes and buses must pass a Drive Clean test before they can be licensed to be driven on Ontario roads.

But critics say the program has outlived its useful life and that it is a waste of time and money for both car owners and automotive shops.

"I understand how this is impacting you in the industry and I want to make sure everyone knows that we are getting rid of it," said Jones. "We are the only political party that has made the commitment to eliminate Drive Clean."

Sylvia Jones was joined last week by Fines Ford Lincoln owner Bob Fines and Frank Notte of the Trillium Automobile Dealers Association in announcing plans to get rid of the Drive Clean program.

Hunting for Heritage Apple Trees

When Caledon was settled in the 19th and early 20th Centuries, apple orchards were planted close to homes and farmsteads. There are still many old apple trees in Caledon, but they're scattered in back yards, along streams and trails or interspersed among new forests. For the past two years, Heritage Caledon has honoured a wide variety of heritage trees found around Caledon. This year, the focus is old apple trees or remnants of old orchards.

Do you know of any significant old apple trees that you can identify and nominate?

Please contact us by September 30th, 2014 by email to trees@caledon.ca or by mail at Heritage Apple Tree and/or Orchard Nomination, Heritage Caledon, Town of Caledon, 6311 Old Church Road, Caledon, ON L7C 1J6 Attn: Pamela Vega

Alton Public School students staged Peter Pan Jr.

By James Matthews

Pint-sized thespians tread the boards at Orangeville's old opera house in sold-out performances of Peter Pan Jr. recently.

Each year, students at Alton Public School mount a stage production. Over the years, they've done Annie, Aladdin, and the Little Mermaid among others. They even managed the whole arduous two-and-half-hour production of The Wizard of Oz.

Students started rehearsals and other preparations for the production just after Halloween. It involved students of the arts rotation, which includes art, music, and drama streams. A total of 55 kids were in the production.

Teacher Judith Phillips said the students have been looking forward to being in a production since Grade 4. And the Grade 6 students have had three years experience in the large productions and with speaking parts.

"This is amazing because all the students are involved," she said. "They all have two or three songs. Special costumes are made for them. The students gain so much confidence."

And all those costumes and the set design were made by parents who volunteered their time. The many props on stage this year were made by a student's mother who works part-time as a nurse.

"It's a community school," Phillips observed.

Learn about antiques at historical society

Collecting, decorating with and identifying antiques will be the subject of the next meeting of the Caledon East and District Historical Society.

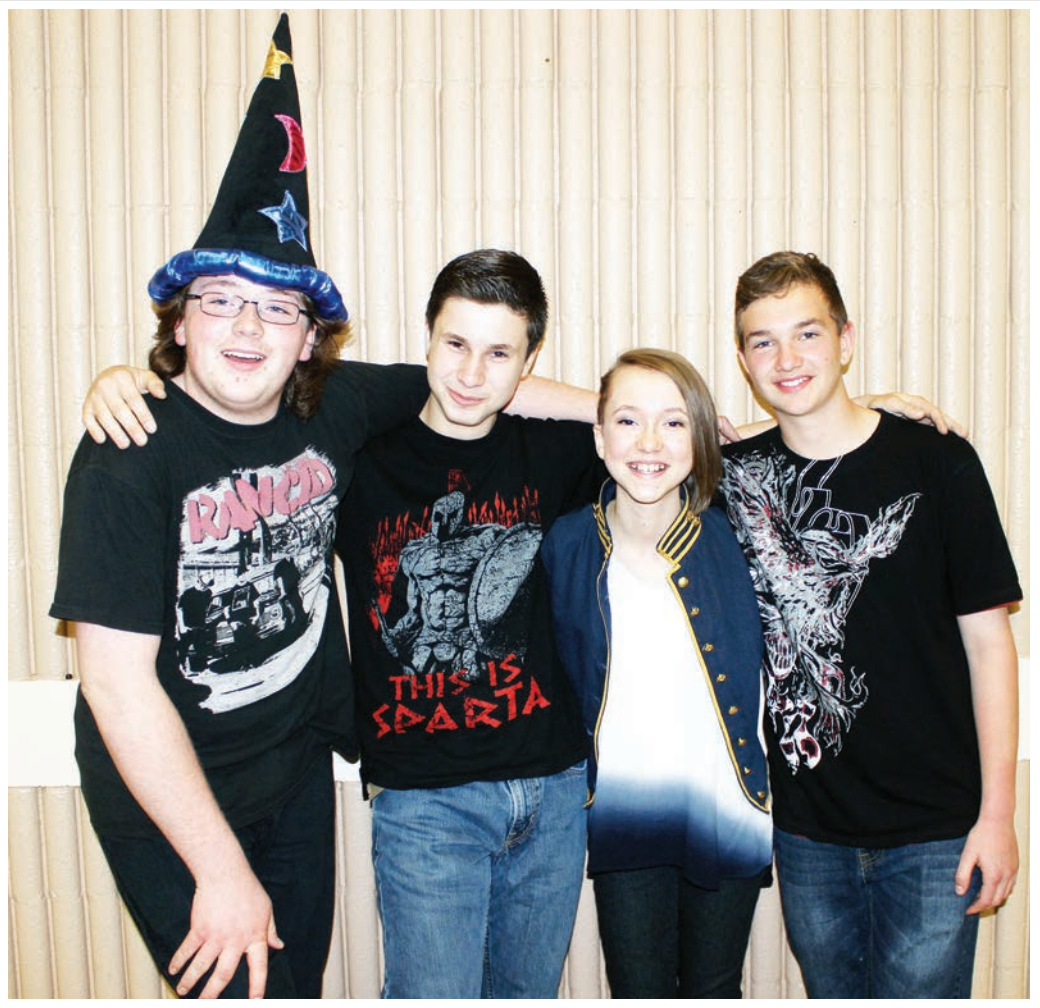

The meeting will be June 25 at St. James' Anglican Church in Caledon East, starting at 7:30 p.m.

The speaker will be Annette Turturici of the Inglewood Antique Market.

"Being brought up in the country, I was surrounded with 'old stuff,' but didn't think about pursuing antiques until I was in my early 40s," Turturici said.

She and her husband Phil completed a history of furniture course at Seneca College, and rented a booth at Harbour Front Antique Market, where they worked part-time for four years. They purchased the antique market in December, 1999 and have become well-known as the place to go for antiques. She will have only time to identify perhaps six to eight items for the audience after her talk, and she asks that there be no jewelry or art requests.

Admission to the meeting will be free for members, and $5 for visitors.

Being Miss Universe Canada is a full-time occupation for Chanel Beckenlehner

Beckenlehner said she expects to be competing against young women from more than 80 countries.

"I feel that we've got a great chance this year," she commented. "I'm going to be the best that I can. There're no regrets in trying your hardest."

Preparation for the Miss Universe competition involves intensive training. "Miss Universe is a job for a year," Beckenlehner observed, pointing out it requires speaking in public, dealing with the media, being fit and psychologically being able to handle the pressure. Her involvement in the program so far has taught her various life skills, such as time management, budgeting, prioritization, as well as communication and people skills.

Beckenlehner thought back to winning the Canadian competition, saying it came down to the last two girls.

"It was the only time I was nervous," she remembered.

"When you win, your life changes at that moment," she said. "I have a unique platform."

Beckenlehner is a woman of many interests. She enjoys golfing, mentioning that she got her first round of the year in last Thursday.

She's also active in dressage, having trained at the Federation Equestrian International level and competed nationally. She's been riding since she was two, and owns a German bred Warmblood named Prinz Wilhelm.

"I've always had horses in my life," she said, adding competing some day in the Olympics is among her hopes.

In terms of career plans, Beckenlehner said she would like to work in the media and entertainment industry, possibly as a TV presenter.

But her duties as Miss Universe Canada are taking up the bulk of her time.

"The schedule is never the same," she said.

Chanel Beckenlehner will be vying for the title of Miss Universe later this year.

Inglewood Farmers' Market opens next week

It is market time again!

Inglewood Farmers' Market opens this coming Wednesday (June 18) from 3:30 to 7 p.m.

This year, the market will once again be based at Inglewood Park at 15551 McLaughlin Rd. It will feature local, fresh season food with a venue in the park on grass, with open space, adjacent parking and a playground on site. With lots of returning vendors, new vendors and familiar faces all around, it is the place to be Wednesday nights in Caledon.

This will be the eighth season of the market.

Over the years, the Inglewood Farmers' Market has become well-known as a community-gathering place and a great place to grab dinner, shop for local foods and catch up with neighbours. The eclectic mix of vendors and high-quality foods has earned it a bit of a reputation as a true "foodie" market, with novel items such as gourmet mushrooms, cured meats, best ever pickles and curries, sheep cheese, lamb burgers on the barbecue, perfect salad greens, heritage tomatoes and decadent cupcakes. This is all in addition, to seasonal fruits, breads and bagels, vegetables, jams, jellies, preserves, garlic and much more.

With more than 15 regular vendors, both returning and new, the 2014 season is shaping up to be great a great one.

The market will operate Wednesday evenings until Oct. 8.

A campaign without precedent

Whatever else might be said, the election campaign just ended was surely like none before it.

At both the federal and provincial levels, voters for more than 80 years have been able to choose from among parties on the right, left and middle of the road, as it were. The earlier choice, between Conservative and Liberal, became blurred with the brief life of the Progressive party and was broadened with the advent in 1932 of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation (CCF), formed by a number of socialist, agrarian, co-operative and labour groups, since renamed the New Democratic Party (NDP).

In 1942, the Conservative party symbolized its movement toward the centre of the political spectrum by adding "Progressive" to its title. Since then, the merger of the federal PCs and Canadian Alliance led to the symbolic dropping of "Progressive," and there are those who see the party as having moved well to the right of where it stood with John Diefenbaker, Joe Clark and Brian Mulroney as its leaders.

In Ontario, meanwhile, the party is still "Progressive," if in name only. Its platform is so resembling that of the Tea Party wing of the Republicans south of the border that a more appropriate title would substitute the prefix "neo."

(Just where that leaves former PC leaders like Bill Davis and John Tory we don't know. But we certainly cannot recall them ever suggesting that what the province needed was a lot fewer public servants or that slashing corporate tax rates would somehow lead to creation of a million jobs.)

As if to further complicate matters, the campaign just ended has seen a strange absence of policy on the part of the one party that used to embrace democratic socialism and trade unionism. Instead, NDP leader Andrea Horwath has been preaching populism and concentrating her attack on Liberal "corruption" seemingly exemplified by money-wasting scandals involving eHealth, the Ornge air ambulance service and cancellation of two gas-fired power plants.

There's little doubt that because of those scandals many who have traditionally voted Liberal will be having second thoughts, or that the main reason they will stick with the party will be either because it has a good local candidate, they like leader Kathleen Wynne's style or they see a vote for the NDP as helping elect the Hudak Conservatives.

One thing for sure is that voters won't get much guidance from the Globe and Mail's editorial board, which last Saturday promoted the election of a Conservative minority government.

The reason, it seems, is that they would like to see a change in government but don't relish the prospect of Hudak being able to carry out his promises. Leaving aside for a moment the obvious fact that no one can vote for a minority government, it's difficult to see how a Hudak minority regime would function, unless it abandoned its election platform and opted to try occupying the middle of the road with policies acceptable to either the Liberals or the NDP.

Another point the editorial writers seem to have glossed over is the similarity between the other parties, particularly in view of the lack of NDP policies.

Even if the Tories wound up with the most seats in the Legislature, it might be argued that another Liberal minority regime would have more staying power than a Tory minority.

And if their party did as poorly as recent polls have suggested it might, the surviving NDP members might even look favourably on a coalition with the Grits.

We wonder what the Globe's thinkers would have to say about that.

Humber Valley Heritage Trail is open

The Humber Valley Heritage Trail has been cleared of fallen trees and is now open to the public.

Thanks go to members of the HVHTA, but especially to Toronto and Region Conservation Authority, which provided a trained crew to cut the large trees and clear obstructing debris from the trail after the winter ice storm. Please note however that the section of trail that crosses Duffy's Lane, in the vicinity of the Bolton Arterial Road construction, will continue to be closed until the BAR is completed in 2015.

Wonderful editorial on 'scandals'

I wanted to thank the editorial staff of the Citizen for the excellent and balanced editorial regarding the nature of "scandals" (May 29), and the ones to which we should really be paying attention.

It made me reflect on the proposed Canadian Tire facility slated to be built on industrial lands in west Bolton.

Now, I am neither in favour of or against the new facility proposal. Any legitimate business or corporation like Canadian Tire coming into Bolton is good news when properly sourced and approved.

I reflected that the furor over the facility could be nothing more than a distraction from the real issue, which is the upcoming municipal election. I would offer that this "scandal" is simply a smokescreen to distract citizens from the lobbying that has been going on to create a specific developer friendly council.

I would offer up for discussion the idea that this is really all about trying to discredit our current mayor and cast aspersions upon our current councillors so that voters will be swayed to bring in a "new and improved" council that will vote for what certain development lobbyists want.

Just an idea. I could be way off base, but when the usual suspects and patterns keep appearing, my flags go up. Caledon voters would be wise to pay attention to the real "scandals."

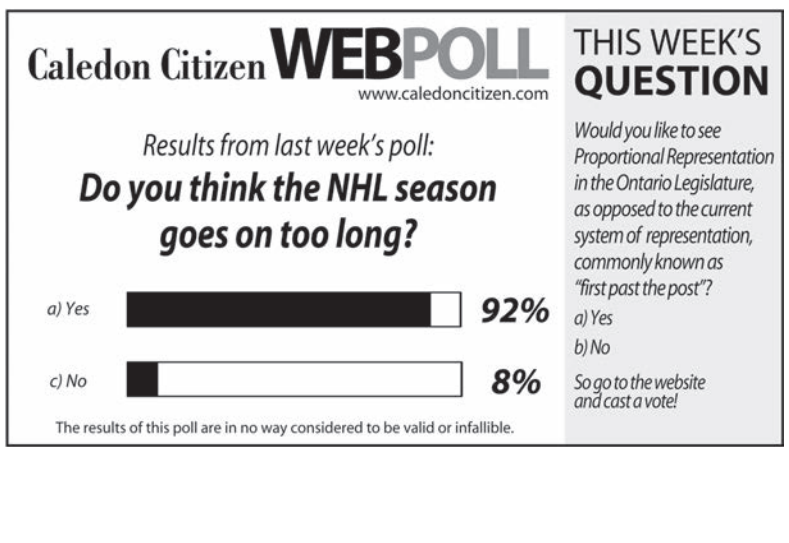

Skid Crease,
Caledon

It happened today

There were several sensational murder trials in the 20th century, but few caught and held the attention of the public like O.J. Simpson.

He stood trial for, and was eventually found not-guilty of, the murders of his former wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend, restaurant waiter Ron Goldman.

The drama started with the double homicide, which took place this day, June 12, 1994.

This sports fan is back, sort of

I attended last week's all-candidates' meeting hosted by the Caledon Chamber of Commerce, and I wasn't alone.

Yes, I know. They show these meetings to many people at a time, including candidates, media, people who have stacked the meeting to try and create a certain impression, and maybe one or two members of the general public who had yet to make up their minds on how to vote and actually attended to try and learn something about the ongoing campaign, which mercifully comes to an end today (Thursday).

So it was a pretty full house sharing the meeting held at James Bolton Public School with me, and my date.

You see, my wife attended the meeting with me. While I was sitting there, taking notes like mad, Beth was sitting there, being entertained.

It really wasn't my idea. Beth mentioned the previous evening that she was interested in attending, realizing of course that I was planning to attend. I was a little surprised, but just a little.

Beth, of course knows about my interest in politics. And she had met the four candidates who were expected to be (and in fact were) on hand for the meeting (Libertarian candidate Daniel Kowalewski did not attend). But her interest in going did catch me a little off guard.

Bill Rea

I made no effort to talk her out of it. For one thing, political meetings like that are public, meaning anyone is allowed to attend, provided they behave themselves. Considering the way some of the people attending the session conducted themselves, Beth would have presented no problems, as anyone who knows her would have realized. Besides, even if I had a problem, I had no right to prevent my wife or anyone else from attending.

So she and I started discussing our schedules for the day, and worked out the necessary arrangements to make them mesh (we even worked in time for a rather leisurely dinner before the meeting — I'm such a sport).

Beth obviously saw nothing wrong with sharing the world of politics with me, especially since the Blue Jays weren't playing that night. They had played an afternoon tilt in Detroit that day, and won.

The issue (Blue Jays, that is) even came up as we entered the school for the meeting. We encountered Councillor Doug Beffort and his wife Doreen as we walked up the path (lest anyone get the idea we were double-dating). But the fact there was no ball game worth watching on the tube was discussed, as I mentioned I had heard the Jays had won, although I hadn't heard the score. The chap walking behind us, with his arms full of NDP signs, was happy to fill in the information I was not able to.

Thus it was a happy group of people who walked into the school for a political meeting.

Isn't it amazing how a sports team on a roll can momentarily take people's minds off an election?

Good heavens, the Blue Jays have even attracted my attention again. It's been a long time. But my interest has not yet returned with the passion that I once possessed.

I am a man who was once a boy, and I have lived my entire life in this part of Canada, meaning I spent most of my life with a passion for the Toronto Maple Leafs. I will never forget the grin on my father's face when he told me he had scored tickets to the Leaf game scheduled for my seventh birthday. The memory actually does a good job of overpowering the fact Chicago won the match 6-3 (my old man had only so much clout).

Watching the Leafs was a staple in the Rea home Saturday nights during the season while I was a little kid. And at that time, we didn't even get to see the whole game. The puck dropped at 8 p.m. in those days, but the TV coverage didn't start until 8:30. Actually, that wasn't much of a burden, since we also enjoyed the Jackie Gleason Show (our favourite part was Joe the Bartender with Frank Fontaine as Crazy Guggenheim). And there was a certain amount of anticipation as we waited for Bill Hewitt to come on and tell us who was winning.

And then there was football. For a lot of years, my folks had season tickets for the Argos, and I would usually get to a game or two over the campaign. Great seats too, in the old CNE Stadium (sometimes referred to as the Mistake by the Lake); right at the top of the covered stands, exactly at midfield.

I also well remember how Toronto went nuts in 1983 when the Argos won the championship for the first time in 31 years. It was the first time that had happened since I arrived on Spaceship Earth.

And then we've had the Blue Jays. It took a couple of years of having them in town before I really got interested in the game of baseball. By the mid '80s, when it became clear they were about to make some real noise, most people in these parts were interested.

I spent a couple of weeks in Ireland in June 1985. Since this was long before the days of the internet and emails, details of how the Jays were doing were hard to come by on the other side of the Atlantic.

For the flight home I found myself sitting next to the seat where one of the flight attendants had to position herself for takeoff, and we chatted a bit as the plane was taxiing. Since she told me she lived in Toronto, I asked her how the Jays were doing. She said she didn't really keep track of such things (had I been older and wiser, I might have thought of something else to discuss with a flight attendant).

But after we had been in the air about 20 minutes, she appeared at my seat to tell me she had conveyed my inquiry to the pilot.

I was told his reply essentially was he didn't know how the Blue Jays were doing, but since the weather had been nice, he assumed all birds were doing well.

At that moment, I briefly considered getting out and walking home, rather than entrusting my one life to this joker. I didn't.

And like most people in these parts, I cheered when the Jays finally won it all, although my jubilation was somewhat muted by the fact the big event took place less than a week after my father's death.

It wasn't too long after this that my interest in sports started to seriously falter.

What really killed it was the labour foolishness that went on in professional sports.

I have been a capitalist all of my life, so I understand that owners of teams want to make money, and should do all they legitimately can to make money. I have also been a working man all my life, and I appreciate that a worker's skills and talents are a marketable commodity, and they have the right to seek as much as they can get for them.

But it is a fact that most of these people could easily treat my annual salary as their clothing allowance, and that reality should have resulted in different dynamics in labour-management relations.

But after almost 20 years, it is clear that my interest in professional sports is returning. It isn't yet at the level it once was. I could probably only name a handful of the players on the Jays, but that's better than what I could have done a couple of years ago.

But if I find myself in conversation with a flight attendant on a taxiing aircraft, I'm not likely to ask her about baseball.

I'll ask her about politics.

Canadians join the world in support of elders Sunday

OTTAWA JOURNAL

David Tilson
MP Dufferin-Caledon

Every year, the 15th day of June marks World Elder Abuse Awareness Day.

An initiative that originated in Canada and flourished worldwide with the help of the World Health Organization, World Elder Abuse Awareness Day focuses on the abuse and neglect that older adults experience and how it can be stopped or prevented.

This special day brings together individuals, communities and organizations to exchange ideas and take appropriate action against the mistreatment of older people in communities around the world. It is an opportunity for all Canadians to reflect on how elder abuse threatens the well-being of the seniors we love.

Abuse is a serious issue. It has been estimated that between four and 10 per cent of Canadian seniors experience some form of abuse. No matter the shape it takes, whether physical, emotional or financial, abuse should never be tolerated.

The government of Canada has made combatting elder abuse a top priority. In addition to awareness activities, we provide funding through the New Horizons for Seniors Program to organizations across Canada for projects that address elder abuse.

As well, further to the Protecting Seniors Act, we are making great strides to protect and empower older adults. For instance, we recently introduced in Parliament the Bill on the Digital Privacy Act, which will better protect seniors against fraud and financial abuse, as well as the Canadian Victims Bill of Rights, which gives those most vulnerable in society, such as seniors, the tools to be treated with dignity and respect by the legal system.

As part of the awareness activities, the Federal/ Provincial/ Territorial Ministers Responsible for Seniors Forum recently released the Power of Attorney and Joint Bank Accounts brochure, which highlights the risks, benefits and possible unintended consequences of opening a joint bank account or granting someone a power of attorney.

For more information and resources on elder abuse, visit seniors.gc.ca

Seniors deserve to live with dignity and respect. Our government is committed to helping ensure they lead the best possible life, entirely free of abuse.

Seventh annual Caledon Day will be a big celebration

Mark the calendars for June 14, from 2 to 11 p.m., for Caledon Day 2014.

It will be at Town Hall Civic Campus, at 6311 Old Church Rd. in Caledon East.

It promises to be a jam-packed program with something for everyone. And this year, Caledon Day is going green. As well, this year, Caledon celebrates its 40th anniversary.

Instead of driving to the party, bike along the Caledon Trailway and use the free premium Valet Bike Parking. In partnership with Peel Region, the Valet will be a secure, attended area for the duration of the event. Bring your waste to one of the eco stations and it will be sorted to ensure that everything possible is recycled or composted. Plus, there will be a Green Food Vendor competition, where prizes will be awarded to the greenest food vendor at Caledon Day.

Big Sugar will headline the main stage, sponsored by Orangeville Mitsubishi, bringing a unique blend of rock-reggae with double-neck guitars. Big Sugar is a Canadian act with a platinum recording career spanning more than 20 years. Go to www.bigsugar.com for more information.

Enjoy the Animal Zone, Beer Garden, Car and Motorcycle Show, Food and Vendor Zone, Fun Run, Kid Zone and the spectacular fireworks finale.

Established in 2008, Caledon Day celebrates this community's rich and unique heritage, history and diversity. The event has grown from a local fun fair to a full-blown community festival with something for all ages and interests attracting approximately 9,900 attendees to Caledon Day 2013.

Caledon Day has hosted more than 36,000 visitors, friends and families over the years. Feedback from 2012 suggested the Caledon Day vendor program was the most organized in all of Southern Ontario.

Market relocated to increase community vitality

The Bolton Farmers' Market, formerly known as the Caledon Farmers' Market, is moving to Mill Street, Bolton.

The market opens this Saturday (June 14) and will operate every Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., until October. The opening day party will include family activities and games, as well as live music, crafts and, of course, food.

A section of Mill Street will be closed to traffic between Queen and Chapel Streets every Saturday until Oct. 11.

"This relocation allows us to work with downtown businesses and the Bolton Business Improvement Area (BIA) to build a stronger business area, while fostering greater community engagement," said Market Manager Jith Dravin.

Dravin and his team have worked to secure some of the best local farmers and vendors, guaranteed to give the community an assortment of fresh and local food and crafts.

"Bolton Farmers' Market is where the choices you make decide the outcome of your well-being with food that is fresh, home-grown and nutritious," he said.

Woman arrested after accident

A 50-year-old Caledon woman was charged after an April 30 accident on Airport Road.

Caledon OPP reports they got a call from a concerned citizen at about 9:30 p.m. about a possible impaired driver who had been involved in single-vehicle collision. An investigating revealed that the northbound driver had entered a ditch.

On arrival, officers found the vehicle unattended, but they located the driver on the porch of a private residence close to the scene. Upon speaking with the driver, officers detected a strong odour of alcohol on her breath and she demonstrated other signs of impairment.

The woman was charged with impaired operation of a motor vehicle and driving with more than the legal limit of alcohol in her system.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Claire Hoy

Back in the dark ages of journalism – in the 1960s and '70s – before the Internet and Facebook and twittering, and even before television news had replaced newspapers as the main source of information for people, it was not uncommon to see voters turn up at the polling booths clutching a list of candidate's names which their local newspaper had endorsed.

Editorial endorsements, at the time, really meant something.

Not any more. Not really, even though the daily papers continue the silly little academic exercise, few of which surprise anybody who has been reading the particular newspaper's continuing coverage of an election campaign.

Was anybody – anybody at all – surprised, for example, when the Toronto Star, having pretended to weigh all the options facing the electorate, solemnly came down on the side of the Liberals and Kathleen Wynne? Or was anybody surprised when the Toronto Sun endorsed Tory Leader Tim Hudak?

The oddest endorsement, it says here, was The Globe and Mail's endorsement of Hudak, but only to lead a minority government. It is unclear how the Globe sees the electorate orchestrating their votes en masse so that a minority is the result. But there you have it.

Indeed, if one believes the latest election opinion polls – and given the recent abysmal record of the pollsters that's a dicey situation – the chances of either a minority Liberal or minority Tory government seem quite high, in which case perhaps the Globe will be able to boast that it had a profound impact on the 2014 provincial campaign.

Meanwhile, back in the dark ages which I spoke of above, at a time when your humble correspondent was spending far too much of his time chasing politicians around the province and, indeed, the country, it was also commonplace for each media outlet to have internal pools, where people could put in a couple of dollars and, once the ballots were counted, the best guess won the pot.

The major lesson I learned from those pools was that almost inevitably the winner did not come from the collection of "experts," those of us who were actually out there on the campaign, treating every nuance, every announcement, every slip-up, as if it was really, really important to the ultimate outcome.

Instead, the winner usually was somebody who answered the phones on the city desk or some other task, with little or nothing to do with the actual campaign and no claim whatsoever to political expertise or acumen.

I tell you this only to illustrate the reality that despite what all the "experts" will tell you – and often these days contrary to what the pollsters claim – we don't really know the outcome until the votes are actually counted.

This is not a bad thing.

Oh sure, it's likely safe to say that NDP Leader Andrea Horwath will not be premier by the end of this week. But it is not safe to say if her party's results will be as woeful as her actual election campaign has appeared to be.

The importance of the NDP result, of course, is that if the party fares better than expected, it will likely do so at the expense of the Liberals and, therefore, will inadvertently help the Tories. That is why the aforementioned Star – which has rarely met a Liberal it couldn't promote – actually published a piece written by Wynne (or, more likely, a staffer) saying a vote for Horwath is a vote for Hudak.

That was accompanied in the Sunday paper with a long, favorable article, the gist of which told us that Wynne is very close to her family. (I have reason to suspect Hudak and Horwath are quite fond of their families as well, but that's for another day – or another newspaper.)

It is hardly a secret to regular readers of this space that your correspondent is of a decidedly conservative bent – not necessarily in a partisan sense, but certainly philosophically.

That is why Hudak's gutsy plan to tackle Ontario's disastrous spending record appeals to me, the very same reason that his plans will not appeal to many other voters.

And that's just fine. That's the point of an election.

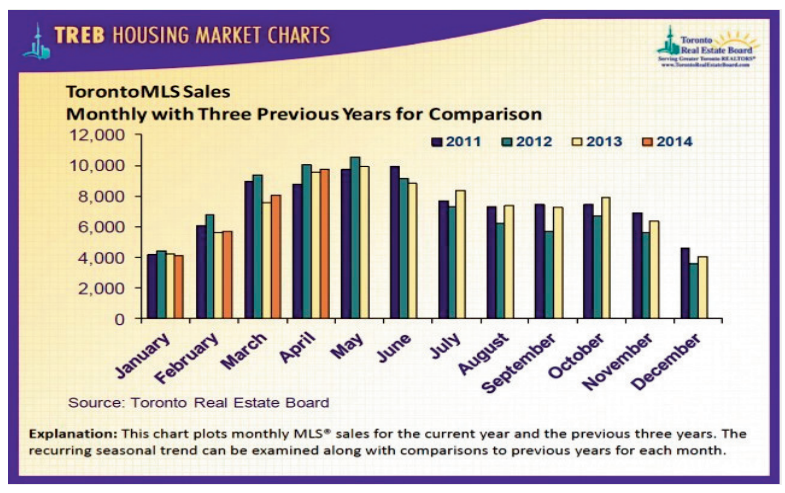

When my five children were getting old enough to vote I had two pieces of advice: a)- read something about the various platforms; b)- get off your butt and vote for the one that either appeals most or offends less.

I think that advice applies to all.

The New Generation of Real Estate

This week's theme:
"JUST BECAUSE?? EXPERIENCE? TIME IN BUSINESS?"

Experience although used endlessly to more misleading info than truth is used too often.

Gordie Howe (Mr. Hockey) as we all know was a force in his time. Cars over 30 are exceptional classics. However in this fast changing market of Real Estate It is essential that we have new constructive Ideas for marketing for the many changing ideas to have that Leading Edge. Unfortunately people rely on their Past achievements and not what they can do for you today.

Gordie Howe and these classic cars had their moment in time , however with this new technology and progress of course cannot compete today with the same force. Experience for example can also mean – tired, old, not current and an old way of doing business and unmotivated.- when you are selling your home you need up to date information, internet marketing with energy to aggressively sell fast with the best curb appeal to realized top dollar for your biggest investment.

Combination of young and experienced seems to work best for me. University and degrees add that component of hard dedication and knowledge of the search internet marketing brings up-to-date tools needed for today's market.

Agents speaking multiple languages complete the skills needed today with our diverse and ever-changing demographics. It is understood that in our industry 1 in 5 agents do NOT sell even 1 property per year, more than 80% sell less than 6. It is crucial that YOU interview agents before selecting the person to represent you. Experience although important is just one of the factors but by no means the only factor.

I recognize this early in my career and am constantly changing MY PRACTICE to better serve my clients with the above mention strategies. which had all-party support, but it was killed when the election was called.

Jones also lashed out at the scandals that have plagued the Liberal government, calling for leadership and transparency.

Green party candidate Karren Wallace recalled her work on the fight to keep the 2,300-acre quarry out of Melancthon Township, adding she has worked in government and understands how it operates.

"I'm passionate about being your next MPP," she said.

She also commented that education should be free of segregation based on sexual orientation or religion.

When it comes to strengthening business opportunities and job creation, Daid said it's important to work with small business to bring tax money into the economy.

Jones stressed she meets with all groups to learn and get ideas from them. She also pointed to her party's plan to create a million jobs.

Wallace focused on the Green plan to increase the employee health tax exemption for small business, commenting that will free up a lot of money. She also wondered how the Conservative plan to get rid of 100,000 positions will create jobs. She said it would impact on small business, since the people losing those jobs won't be spending money

Yazbek commented on the need to cut taxes to small business and reduce hydro rates. She said it's important to support small business, and not big-box retailers.

One woman in the audience commented on how the provincial debt has doubled under the Liberals, as well as scandals that have cost taxpayer dollars. "How can we trust any of you?" she asked.

Daid mentioned the gas plant scandal, agreeing it was a mistake that Premier Kathleen Wynne has apologized for. She added the Liberals were trying to create more accountability and transparency in their budget, which came down just before the election was called.

"It's time to move forward," she said.

"It was a lack of oversight," Jones said, also pointing to the fact there are two OPP investigations being conducted on the government. She said that points to the need for a change in who leads the government.

Wallace countered that the opposition still have oversight on what the government's up to, adding the Liberals lost a lot of money with the opposition doing nothing.

"I can't afford a Liberal government," she declared.

Daid said OPP investigations don't add up to guilt. She also referred to the scandals involving Ornge, pointing out the service still saves lives every day.

Wallace charged the Liberals did nothing to stop the Melancthon quarry, "and neither did Sylvia Jones."

Daid countered it was the Liberals who brought in the environmental assessment that did stop it.

On the subject of the 427 extension, Daid said the Dufferin-Caledon didn't have a voice at the table, and that's what she wants to provide.

Jones stressed the importance of the extension. "Our manufactured goods need roads, not congestion to get to market," she remarked.

The role of the Ontario Municipal Board (OMB) came up. One Caledon woman said four citizen groups have appeals before the board, with Caledon council siding with the developers.

Daid commented on the need for all levels of government to work together.

"Everyone deserves the right to appeal," Jones observed, adding the answer isn't to just get rid of OMB, as she pointed out the board backed the residents on the Rockfort quarry. Jones also said that before OMB, it was cabinet that dealt with appeals. "I don't want them making rules," she declared.

Wallace countered Jones supported the ministerial zoning order (MZO) that was issued for the Canadian Tire development which effectively took away people's right to appeal.

She also commented on the need to know who the people who sit on OMB are.

"It's disgusting what happened in Bolton with Canadian Tire," Yazbek charged. "The government shoved it through."

Jones said the matter is gong before OMB, but Wallace said it's the MZO, not the proposal.

Daid said the public was marginalized on Canadian Tire. "That's not the way to do business," she said.

Jones pointed out Peel Region endorsed the zoning of the site, adding studies show people spend money near where they work.

"I support council's decision," she said.

Yazbek said this will be a warehouse, meaning most of the jobs there will be minimum wage, and most of the employees will be Brampton residents.

Daid complained the community didn't get a say on the matter.

"Are you going to have a referendum on every vote that's taken in the legislature?" Jones asked her.

Daid repeatedly stressed the need for the riding to have a Liberal voice at the table, but several of the candidates wondered if she would be able to provide it.

"You will get you marching orders from the Liberals and you will never veer from that script, just like Sylvia," Wallace told Daid.

"I'm sorry, honey," Yazbek told Daid. "But your experience will make you a back-bencher."

Addressing the Conservative plan to get rid of the 100,000 jobs, Jones said it will bring the provincial workforce down to 1.1 million, which is where it was in 2009. Doctors, nurses, police officers, etc. will be protected, she said, adding the cuts will involve middle management positions, like those at the Ontario Power Authority.

Wallace was puzzled at how a million jobs can be created if 100,000 positions are cut.

Yazbek divided 100,000 by the number of ridings, and said 934 people in Dufferin-Caledon would be out of work.

"That 100,000 jobs is cutting the belly out of our community," Daid said.

Jones maintained it's doable and needs to be done in order to get the provincial debt under control.

"It's only going to go up," she added. "It's only going to increase if we don't get spending under control."

OFSAA title for St. Michael's senior boys' soccer team

By Bill Rea

The senior boys' soccer team from St. Michael Catholic Secondary School in Bolton are provincial camps.

The boys took the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Associations (OFSAA) title in a weekend tournament in North Bay.

Coach Paolo Ceccarelli said his men had seven games in the tournament, and three went into extra time, meaning they had to play the equivalent of eight matches in three days.

They came out of the opening round of four games with a pair of wins and two ties, putting them in second place in their group; good enough to advance to the quarter-finals.

That match was against a team from Ottawa, and it went to an extra period, with the local crew notching a goal with about a minute left to advance.

The semifinals saw the St. Michael squad facing opponents from Kingston. Ceccarelli said the score was 1-1 at the end of regulation time and 3-3 after the extra frame. "We had to come back both times," he said, adding the issue had to be settled with a shoot-out.

The championship match was against a team from Burlington, and the local guys got out to a 1-0 lead, but their foes tied things before time ran out. There was no scoring in the overtime session, and the first two saves in the shoot-out had to be repeated, but it all ended with a victory for St. Michael.

Ceccarelli commented Monday that he had been "exhausted" by the events of the weekend. He also commented on the instrumental contribution of assistant coach Sean Raposo.

"I think as the tournament went on, there was a certain amount of belief that permeated through the team," Ceccarelli said.

"We're just happy and proud to bring home the first OFSAA gold medal in the school's short history," he added.

And it wasn't just boys bringing home medals. The varsity girls travelled to Thunder Bay for their OFSAA tournament, coming home with fourth-place honours.

Coach Nicole Indellicato pointed out this squad had a lot of young players, "which is good for the future."

The tournament didn't get off to a great start, as the team was held to a loss and a tie the first day.

"It was kind of a tough one," Indellicato said.

But things improved the next day, as they posted two wins to advance to the quarter-finals.

That match was against Father Bressani Catholic High School of Woodbridge, and it ended in a 2-1 victory for St. Michael.

The opponents in the semifinals were Saint Michael Catholic High School from Niagara Falls, who had finished at the top of their pool.

The match ended 1-0 in favour of the crew from Niagara Falls, and then they dropped a 2-1 decision to St. Roch Catholic Secondary School of Brampton, who St. Michael had previously bested to take the ROPSSAA title.

"It could have gone either way," Indellicato observed. "We just couldn't get one in the semifinal."

The senior boys' soccer team from St. Michael became OFSAA champions Saturday.

The St. Michael varsity girls' soccer team brought home fourth place honours from OFSAA over the weekend.

Jr. C Bandits post two wins over Mimico

By Brian Lockhart

Last Tuesday night's Junior C lacrosse game at Bolton arena turned into target practice for the Caledon Bandits when they hammered the visiting Mimico Mountaineers 15-4.

After leading the fist period 3-2 on goals from TJ Burton and a pair from Austin Heughan, the Bandits notched four unanswered markers in the second then a fifth, before the Mimico squad could put one past Bandits goalie Ryan Woodworth.

Second period Bandit goals came from Jordan Oshowy, Chris Sehl (with two), Brodie McLean, Mile Douglas and Spencer Wood.

The Bandits were short benched in the Tuesday game and brought up a couple of midget players to fill in the gaps.

"We have one guy out with a concussion, and one guy with a suspension, so we had to bring up a few," said Bandit head coach Mike Gillan. "The guys we do bring up — they're players. They're prob-

VIGIL HELD AGAINST POVERTY

With the provincial election approaching, the Parish of Christ Church in Bolton held a vigil last Thursday evening in the parking lot of Bolton United Church, calling on participants to vote for a poverty-free Ontario. Dufferin-Caledon Green Party candidate Karren Wallace (far left) was among those taking part.

Tilson's bill passes the Senate

Dufferin-Caledon MP David Tilson has successfuly put his private members bill through the Senate.

The Bill, aimed at protecting war memorials and cenotaphs from damage or vandalism, passed third reading in the Senate last week.

Royal Assent is pending.

"It is an honour to finally have my Bill complete its final stage in Parliament," Tilson said. "This Bill will protect our war memorials and cenotaphs from vandalism and desecration which is vitally important, especially to our veterans and members of the Canadian Forces."

The process for Bill C-217 began just after the last election in June 2011, when it was first introduced in the House of Commons. In the intervening 35 months, C-217 has received many hours of discussion and debate in both the House of Commons and the Senate. Several veterans appeared with Tilson at Committee to support the legislation, including Chris Skalozub of the Orangeville Legion.

"I want to thank all of those who have supported this legislation as it made its way through Parliament. I want to especially thank the veterans who appeared with me before the House and Senate Committees studying my Bill," Tilson commented last week. "It is a testament to how Members and Senators and all Canadians look upon such acts of desecration as a grave crime. It is fitting that the Senate passed my Bill just prior to the 70th anniversary of D-Day next week."

C-217 adds significant penalties to anyone convicted of mischief against a war memorial, cenotaph or similar structure designed to honour those who have died as a result of war. A minimum fine of $1,000 would be imposed for a first offense, with a two week jail term for a second offense and a 30-day jail term for third and subsequent offenses.

We miss your smile,
your helpful ways,
We miss the things you used to say
And when old times we do recall
That's when we miss you most of all.

In our hearts forever
Linda, Bruce, Floyd, Colleen, Brenda, Brent & Families

JENKINSON, LES
October 17, 1938 -
June 16, 2013.

In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather.
The songbird's melody fills the air,
Long after the birds have gone.
And when the rose has lost its bloom,
Its fragrance lingers on.
And though we cannot see the one,
From whom we had to part.
His memory, like a melody,
Still lives within our hearts.
Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by

Lorna, Brenda, Barbara, Sandra and Families.

Councillor Allan Thompson was representing the town as he joined C3 Head Coach Barrie Shepley before the three to six-year-olds started to compete. "Please make sure you have fun," was Shepley's admonition to the kids.

By the third period, Caledon controlled the game and peppered the Mimico goalie with shots, scoring five more times in the final frame.

"We're starting to do the offence we're trying to implement," Gillan said of the way his squad is starting to gel. "It's been tough, we haven't had many practices this year so finally getting out to some practices and working on our systems, they're starting to implement them in games and it's starting to create more space for us on the floor to get the goals we need."

While the good offence scored goals, half the battle is keeping the other team from scoring on you.

"Offence can score as many goals as they want, but it won't matter if the ball keeps going into our net," Gillan commented on the squad's defensive strategy.

"The strongest part of any team needs to be your defence. That's what I enforce and that's what I expect from my players, and for the most part they deliver it when they can."

The Bandits made good in their second game against Mimico when they went on the road Sunday (June 8).

Leading in the first period on goals from Heughan and Wood, the squad returned for the second period two score two more from Sam McCanna and Oshowy.

Mimico managed two in the second period, but a final effort in the third frame from the Caledon squad sealed the deal with an 8-4 win.

Third period Caledon goals came from Heughan for two, Theo Solate, and Derek Czech.

The Bandits will be playing the rest of their home schedule games at Mayfield arena.

They return this coming Tuesday (June 17) to host Halton Hills.

Game time is 8 p.m.

Belfountain area Olympian Brittany Webster was among the celebrity athletes on hand for Sunday's triathlon.

Frank Svab or Caledon East was accompanying his daughter Dalma, 5, along the cycling portion of the race.
