Credit View School to close end of June

By Bill Rea

Credit View Public School will be closing its doors June 30.

Peel District School Board trustees accepted the staff recommendations to close the facility, at the corner of King Street and Mississauga Road, last Wednesday night.

Talk of closing the school has been on the table for months, although staff was orignally suggesting a June 2018 closure. But the Final Staff Report, that went before trustees in February, indicated a preference to get things over with, rather than putting up with another year of declining enrolment.

The recommendation concluded a Pupil Accommodation Review (PAR) that looked at enrolment numbers at Credit View, as well as other area schools, including Alloa, Belfountain and Caledon Central and Alton Public Schools.

The staff report that went to trustees last week repeated enrolment at Credit View has been declining. Things have reached the point that this year's enrolment of 81 students is spread over 10 grades. Every grade is split, six grades have less than 10 students and one has only two kids. The report stated this results in limited social interaction for students.

The report also stated that of the schools in the PAR, Credit View has the greatest need for maintenance.

The plan now is to send students in kindergarten to Grade 6 to Belfountain Public School. The Grade 7 and 8 kids will go to Alloa Public School.

The original plan had called for a split between students living north and south of King Street, with kindergarten to Grade 6 kids living to the south being sent to Alloa in September, and older students to the north going to Caledon Central. The staff report stated, however, that concerns had been raised at a public meeting early in February. There was a desire expressed at that session not to split the kids up, as it would divide the Terra Cotta community. There were also concerns about the long bus ride from the Terra Cotta area to Caledon Central.

There are also plans to adjust the boundaries for the catchment areas for Alton and Belfountain Schools.

"This is the final step is a five-step process," Randy Wright, controller of planning and accommodation support services for the Board, told trustees. He also said the rec-

2017 Caledon Home and Lifestyle Show is this weekend

This weekend marks the 35th annual Caledon Home and Lifestyle Show.

The Caledon Chamber of Commerce has announced the show is ready to open its doors to the public at 4 p.m. tomorrow (Friday) with a full house of vendors to discover on the floor of Don Sheardown Memorial Arena in Bolton.

Inspired by Mars Canada Inc. is the exciting addition of a pet-friendly feature, which invites guests to include their dogs on leash when they visit. Mars Canada embraces a lifestyle that includes the many positive benefits of pet ownership. Their booth will feature pet products produced locally.

In keeping with the spirit of the pet-friendly nature of this year's show, Modern Imagery Photography Studio will have a free photo booth set up at their table to capture fun, silly or serious portraits of family pets. Look for Modern Imagery on the show floor and pet owners should make sure they bring their four-legged friends' best smiles.

James Dick Construction is sponsoring Caledon's own and Ontario District Champions the Humberview Secondary School Robotics Team — The Alpha Dogs. This team will be demonstrating their robotic creations all weekend.

The Town of Caledon Climate Change Specialist, along with Hydro One, Enbridge and Chambers Energy, have come together to present ways for every home owner to save money on energy. Visit the quad of booths for information, such as what natural gas smells like, how to manage hydro consumption, information on solar energy and how to reduce the ecological footprint.

Saturday is earth day and what better way to celebrate than for people to get their hands dirty planting a spring bulb to take home and watch grow. Bring the kids to the John Brown Financial booth for this free bulb planting activity. Expect this booth to be a busy one, so come early.

The Friends of the Caledon Public Library Spring Book Sale is back and it's bigger than ever. This buy-one-get-one-free (of equal or lesser value) is a two-day event this year. It will run Friday from 4 to 9 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. All proceeds will go in support of the Friends of the Library.

Remember, as always, there is no charge to get into the community home show and parking is always free. The vendors are listed at www.caledonchamber.com and a door prize ballot can be downloaded there too, at www.caledonchamber.com/file/home-show-vip-card

Door prizes this year are donated by Motor Home Travel Canada and Canadian Tire.

Despite the hours of planning and management of this anticipated event, the Chamber of Commerce announces that the Magical Midway has been cancelled due to unforeseen difficulties and the organizing committee apologizes for any inconvenience this may cause.

Celebrate Earth Day on the Bruce Trail

Join the Caledon Hills Bruce Trail club for a tree planting, installation of bluebird boxes, an environmental clean-up and a Walk in the Woods Earth Day (April 22)

It will be at 10 a.m. on 5 Sideroad, just east of Airport Road, about three kilometres north of Highway 9 in Mono.

Credit View Public School will be closing at the end of June.

Currently no plans to sell property

ommendation reflected what is thought to be the best for the students and their learning.

Trustee Stan Cameron, Caledon's representative on the Board, established there are no programs currently available to students at Credit View that they won't be able to access at their new schools. He had also established that no staff member at Credit View will lose their jobs.

As well, he established there are no plans at this stage to sell the property or get rid of the building.

"It's such a beautiful property," he remarked.

Cameron was appreciative that the Board administration listened to parents when it came to putting students on long bus rides to Caledon Central.

He also pointed out a parent from Credit View had encouraged the Board and Director of Education Tony Pontes to visit the school and talk to parents and student. There were some trustees who made the trip, and Cameron said they met with 16 Grade 1 and 2 students.

"Are you going to close this school?" one of the youngsters asked.

"He has the right to be heard," Cameron remarked. "We have the responsibility to hear him."

He added it's not a nice thing to have to close a school, but in this case, it is the responsible thing to do.

"I echo Trustee Cameron's feelings," Board Chair Janet McDougald commented.

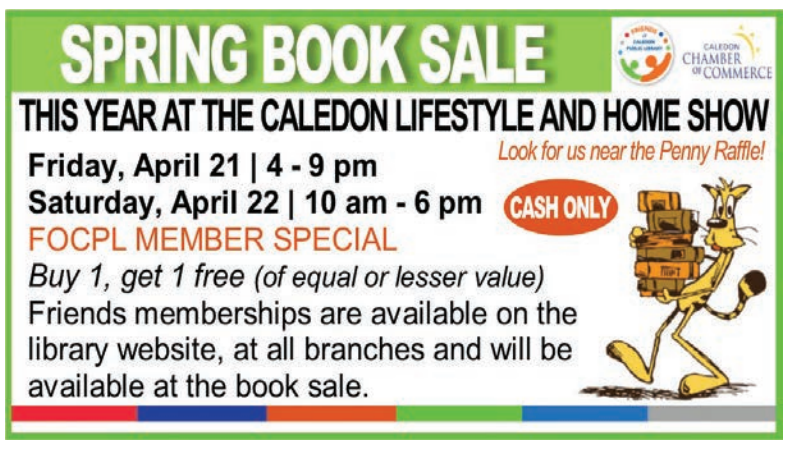

She added there's regret in closing any school, pointing out it's part of the heart of a community.

"When you lose a school, you kind of lose a piece of the community," she observed.

McDougald also pointed out demographics are cyclical, adding there's hope the school might be re-opened, or a new one built to replace it.

She expressed thanks to staff for listening to the community on this.

"Sometimes, we can't always do what they want," she remarked.

Commissioner rules Shaughnessy breached Code of Conduct

By Bill Rea

It looks like Councillor Barb Shaughnessy is going to be docked a week's pay from the Town, and attend a special training session dealing with rules, protocols and procedures pertaining to councillors.

These were the recommendations contained in a report from John Fleming, integrity commissioner for the Town of Caledon, dealing with Code of Conduct complaints against Shaughnessy. The report was received by council Tuesday after lengthy and sometimes heated discussion.

Shaughnessy excused herself from these discussions, but in a statement issued late in the day, she called the report "biased and unprofessional."

In his report, Fleming said Councillor Johanna Downey had launched a complaint regarding a letter Shaughnessy sent to a local newspaper dealing with confidential matters involving a case before the Ontario Municipal Board (OMB). In another complaint, Downey said there had been a lack of respect shown for the decision-making process of council, charging accurate information was not reflected in public blog comments.

Councillor Jennifer Innis had launched complaints stating that Shaughnessy had made it appear that Town staff were not following standard procedures regarding the matter before OMB, as well as concerns there had been a violation of confidentiality involving requests for information regarding the hearing.

Town CAO Mike Galloway had launched complaints alleging Shaughnessy had repeatedly portrayed staff in a negative manner, requested confidential information that was not appropriate for her to have and had undermined staff, using her position to try to influence staff.

In his report, Fleming concluded there was no breach of the Code in sending the letter to the newspaper.

Regarding Downey's complaint about respect for the decision-making process, Fleming concluded there had been a breach of the Code.

"Numerous incidents have been related to me, describing occasions when Councillor Shaughnessy, during meetings of council or committees, has used unparliamentary language, engaged in name-calling and stormed out of meetings," he wrote. "Such behaviour does not reflect respect for the decision-making process of council, nor does it promote public confidence."

He added such incidents, viewed individually, might not be taken seriously. But collectively, he said they represented a breach.

Regarding Innis's and Galloway's complaints about the way staff has been treated, Fleming cited a provision in the Code that states councillors are expected to "refrain from publicly criticizing employees in a way that casts aspersions on their professional confidence and credibility."

That complaint refers to comments Shaughnessy made in her letter to the newspaper.

"It is clear that Councillor Shaughnessy does not agree with the process in place, but publicly maligning professional staff of the Town is not the way to address that disagreement," he wrote.

Regarding the complaint that Shaughnessy requested information that was not appropriate for her to have, Fleming said it wasn't clear if she realized she was seeking confidential information, so he made no finding on that issue.

On the other issues involving staff, Fleming wrote that he interviewed 10 employees, including the CAO.

He also wrote that Shaughnessy has a reputation of approaching staff for information and advice. There have been indications that she can be aggressive, and some staffers used the word "intimidated."

He also said Shaughnessy has expressed concerns to her colleagues and staff when she was not able to have input in staff reports. Fleming cited recent "eloquently expressed" comments from Councillor Rob Mezzapelli, stating he does not expect to have input on reports. "My job is to have my influence here, amongst my peers," Mezzapelli said.

Fleming was not completely negative in his assessment of Shaughnessy.

"I have come to know her as a dedicated, hard-working and highly determined representative of her community," he wrote.

But he also expressed a concern that Shaughnessy might have trouble changing her approach, adding that if this conduct continues, he anticipates more complaints. In that event, "I will impose more onerous sanctions," he stated.

Shaughnessy declared an interest and left the council table while the report was being discussed before general committee of council. Innis, who usually chairs the committee, handed that task over to Mezzapelli, but she stayed in the council chambers for the discussion, as did Downey.

Several members of the public spoke in support of Shaughnessy, including her husband Tim Forster.

He questioned whether Innis and Downey should remain in the room.

"Anyone who knows Barb knows that she is open to accepting the tough assignments," he remarked. "She is a champion of the little guy, and isn't afraid to go that extra mile when something is amiss, or there is a problem to fix."

He added she doesn't bring up issues "on a whim or in isolation."

Regarding the OMB issue, Forster said he has emails from staff from the Town and OMB that the information that she was seeking was public.

"In fact, this is exactly why the OMB staff provided me with everything that was in the file," he declared.

Forster said he was never interviewed by Fleming, adding his wife was never contacted for clarification on her responses to the complaints.

Former councillor Ian Sinclair also spoke on Shaughnessy's behalf, commenting that much of the evidence against her was hearsay.

He also agreed the names of staff members who were interviewed should not be disclosed, but the evidence resulting from those conversation should be revealed, and he said there's been no indication that was the case.

"It should be noted that where the credibility of the individual is at issue, the principles of natural justice and procedural fairness usually require an interview or an oral hearing before making a decision," Sinclair said. "Councillor Shaughnessy has not had the opportunity to present her case, as the issue evolved in secret from the original three complaints."

He added there was no invitation for Shaughnessy to respond to the report before it went to council.

"The accused must have the opportunity to disabuse the commissioner of his concerns," he said. "The statutory provision for representations respecting the adverse report and recommendation has been arbitrarily denied."

"The commissioner's report is not properly before council," he added.

"This is not an easy situation to be in," Terra Cotta resident John Rutter remarked as he spoke in Shaughnessy's defence.

How to Sell Your Caledon Home for the Price Your Want and Need

CALEDON - When you decide to sell your home, setting your asking price is one of the most important decisions you will ever make. Depending on how a buyer is made aware of your home, price is often the first thing he or she sees, and many homes are discarded by prospective buyers as not being in the appropriate price range before they're even given a chance of showing.

Your asking price is often your home's "first impression", and if you want to realize the most money you can for your home, it's imperative that you make a good first impression.

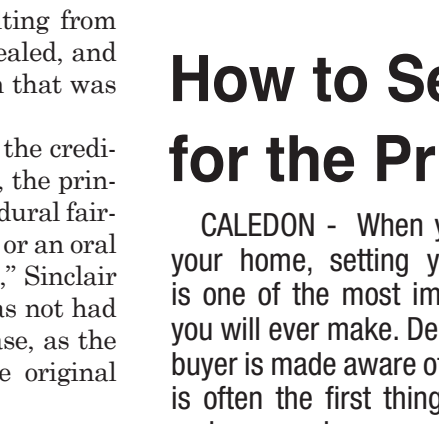

This is not as easy as it sounds, and pricing strategy should not be taken lightly. Pricing too high can be as costly to a homeseller as pricing too low. Taking a look at what homes in your neighborhood have sold for is only a small part of the process, and on it's own is not nearly enough to help you make the best decision. A recently study, which compiles 10 years of industry research, has resulted in a new special report entitled "Homesellers: How to Get the Price You Want(and Need)". This report will help you understand pricing strategy from three different angles. When taken together, this information will help you price your home to not only sell, but sell for the price you want.

Serious charges result from ValleyWood incident

A 27-year-old man from Brampton is facing a number of charges after an incident last Wednesday in the ValleyWood area.

Caledon OPP reports they were called to a home and found that three men had been socializing there early in the morning.

Police said one of the people was asked to leave. An argument started, with the accused apparently brandishing a knife and demanding the victim hand over jewelry he was wearing. He was assaulted with the knife when he did not comply with the demand.

The other man on the scene intervened in the incident, and he too was assaulted with the knife.

The alleged attacker fled, according to police. They added the victims and accused are all known to each other. One of the victims required hospital treatment.

The accused was later arrested and charged with robbery with a weapon, aggravated assault, uttering threats to cause death or bodily harm and assault with a weapon.

Traffic charges over Easter weekend

Caledon OPP joined other detachments over the Easter holiday weekend in a province-wide traffic safety initiative.

The local findings indicate there are quite a few people who don't get the message when it comes to traffic safety.

Over the course of this initiative, OPP officers focused their attention on the use of seat belts as well as the other "Big 4" causes of collisions: speeding, impaired driving and distracted driving.

In Caledon over the weekend, there were 181 people charged with seatbelt infractions, 44 charged with distracted driving, 125 charged with speeding and five impaired driving.

It only takes a few seconds to buckle up. A properly worn seat belt greatly increases one's chances of surviving a motor vehicle collision. In 2016, 45 people died in collisions on OPP-patrolled roads in which the deceased was not wearing a seat belt.

Brampton man charged

A 23-year-old man from Brampton is facing stunt driving charges after police made a traffic stop April 1.

Caledon OPP reports an officer was conducting radar enforcement on Highway 10 in the area of Travelled Road in Caledon village, and observed a black Kia travelling at high speed. The car was clocked going 128 km-h in a posted 60 zone. The driver was charged. His licence was suspended and the car was impounded for seven days.

Several Caledon resident speak out on Shaughnessy's behalf

now, and have found her to be very approachable and very willing to go out of her way to help me with any council issue that I may have," he said. "I do believe that many of the issues complained about have a lot to do with her personality and mannerisms."

"Is she honest?" he added. "Is she tenacious? Does she represent her constituents? Can she be intimidating (maybe not offensively)? Is she like a bull in a china shop? The answer to all these questions is 'absolutely!'"

Rutter added he has sat through a lot of council meetings.

"In no way have I ever seen or even suspected Councillor Shaughnessy of being in contravention of the councillors' Code of Conduct," he said.

Area resident Michael Ellis opened his remarks by asking Innis to stop smirking (something she denied doing, stating she was smiling toward staff to offer encouragement), then read a letter from former local MP Garth Turner, who owns Belfountain General Store.

While he stated he couldn't comment on the complaints against her, Turner did have things to say about her performance as a councillor, especially when he contacted her about taking on the store.

"She provide me with frank, unvarnished, practical and very useful information, focused on the statement that 'nobody wants a dead building in the heart of the hamlet'," he wrote.

"As a local business owner, Caledon resident and former elected official, I understand the complexities of representing many competing interests simultaneously, yet retaining one's own opinions and motivations for seeking office," Turner added. "This is overwhelming, especially in the first few years of public life. The best we can expect of politicians is to listen, be fair, be consistent, then willingly submit to judgement by those they have impacted. In our experience, Councillor Shaughnessy has thus far passed the test."

Ellis lashed out at Galloway for not doing enough to solve the problems before reaching this stage.

"It has to be resolved," Ellis said. "He didn't do his job."

He also said if a councillor takes a position different from that of staff, that is not influencing staff.

Councillor Annette Groves also supported Shaughnessy, saying she was disappointed with the report.

Regarding the reference to Shaughnessy storming out of meetings, Groves pointed out the whole Caledon contingent walked out of a Peel Regional council meeting about two years ago over an issue, breaking quorum in the process.

"It's really the pot calling the kettle black," she observed.

She also said Fleming's report will encourage more disfunction at the council table.

Councillor Nick deBoer expressed the wish that councillors had dealt with this among themselves. He said he's been the target of some of Shaughnessy's comments. "I'm not letting it bother me," he said.

"This shouldn't be considered a high point within how we operate here," he added. "I'd like to move on."

"I never saw anything so embarrassing as this," Councillor Gord McClure declared. "This is something we just don't do."

"We should take the damned thing, rip it up and throw it in the garbage," he added.

Mayor Allan Thompson also expressed disappointment that things had reached this point, although he said Fleming had done his job.

"I like spirited council," he said, adding that's how good decisions are made.

Thompson also said Galloway acted for staff on this, and that's his job.

Groves said this has been brewing for a long time, and now it was on the council table.

"I really think this is about fairness, and I don't believe the councillor was treated fairly," she remarked.

Downey said she submitted her complaint in writing, and she received a response from Shaughnessy.

"There was back and forth," she said, maintaining it was an open process.

In her statement, Shaughnessy took exception to Fleming stating in the report that his intention was to go beyond his mandate; link three separate issues into one complaint; claiming to know her future state of mind to the point of assuming what impending actions she would take; and not referencing any of her responses when he rendered his opinion.

"In my opinion, giving predictions instead of working from a set of facts is problematic and not good legal practice", she added.

"My legal counsel informed me that my actions and the questions that I raised on behalf of Caledon residents posed no concern, conflict or breach of the Code of Conduct," she stated. "In my view, the allegations against me are unfounded and are an attempt to silence me from asking the tough questions."

Shaughnessy also maintained she has a positive relationship with staff, adding that prior to Galloway's complaint, no CAO has ever brought a staff issue to her attention or requested a change in her behavior, either formally of informally.

While no decision has been made yet, Shaughnessy indicated she was reserving the right to appeal the issue.

"When it comes to asking the tough questions on behalf of Caledon residents, I will not be muzzled," she said. "I will continue to be an advocate and representative on their behalf and shine a light on areas of public concern."

Notice Date: April 20, 2017

Notice of intention to designate

TAKE NOTICE that the Council for The Corporation of the Town of Caledon intends to designate the following property as being of cultural heritage value or interest under Section 29 of the Ontario Heritage Act, R.S.O. 1990, Chapter O.18:

715 Bush Street, Belfountain
Town of Caledon, in the Regional Municipality of Peel

PIN: 14267-0044 (LT) – Part Lot 10, Concession 5 WHS (Caledon); Part Lot 3, West Side of Main Street, Plan CAL2 (Caledon), Parts 1 and 2, Plan 43R-16857

The property at 715 Bush Street in the village of Belfountain contains a 1½ storey, Gothic Revival style dwelling likely built in the late 1880s for Mary and Henry Willis. It originally faced east onto Main Street north of the Belfountain Village Church, and was relocated to its present site after being purchased by local schoolteacher John Drury and his wife Catherine McTaggart in 1905. The dwelling is made exceptional by the artistic merit of two features added by Drury: the Eastlake style verandah and the pressed metal (stamped tin) cladding of the kitchen interior. The property also contains a small scale timber frame outbuilding built as an urban driveshed/barn with stabling, now remodeled for residential use, with its section of rubblestone fence and several mature yard and street trees, this property just east of Belfountain's historic downtown core is a picturesque component of Bush Street.

Further information regarding the heritage attributes and designation of this property is available in the Heritage Resource Office at the Town of Caledon Town Hall.

Any person may, within thirty days of the publication of this notice, send by registered mail or deliver to the Clerk notice of his or her objection to the proposed designation, together with a statement of the reasons for the objection and all relevant facts. If a notice of objection is received, the Council for The Corporation of the Town of Caledon will refer the matter to the Conservation Review Board for a hearing and report.

‘Fair’ or ‘free’? It’s complicated!

Trade between Canada and the United States has been an issue since even before Confederation 150 years ago, and if Donald Trump has his way, it’s an issue that certainly won’t go away.

However, like health care, it’s also pretty complicated, and we doubt the U.S. president realizes either that trade between the two countries isn’t always “free” or that what’s “fair” to one party might be seen as terribly unfair by the other side.

At this point, all we really know is that Trump sees the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) as one-sided, favouring Mexico at the expense of U.S. workers.

Thus far, he has had little to say about Canada-U.S. trade, perhaps because we are not only his country’s major trading partner or because there’s neither the trade imbalance the U.S. has with Mexico nor any reports of U.S. manufacturers moving their operations north.

Long before there was talk of “free trade,” there was the concept of “reciprocity,” embodied in the Canadian–American Reciprocity Treaty of 1854, which was really a trade treaty between the United Kingdom and the United States that also applied to British possessions in North America, including the Province of Canada (now Ontario and Quebec), New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland. It covered only raw materials and was in effect only from 1854 to 1865. But since it was a move toward free trade it was opposed by protectionist elements in the U.S. and after the conclusion of the American Civil War, the protectionist elements were joined by Americans angry at alleged British collaboration with the Confederate States during the war, and the alliance was successful in terminating the treaty in 1866.

The response north of the border was Confederation, seen as primarily a bulwark against a possible U.S. invasion and as a means of stimulating inter-provincial trade.

Attempts by the Liberal party to revive free trade with the U.S. in 1911 led to a political victory for the Conservatives, who warned that it would lead to Canada being annexed by the Americans.

Talk of reciprocity ended for decades, but tariffs between the two countries gradually declined and the 1960s saw creation of the Canada-U.S. auto pact that permitted cars built in either country to be sold in the other without any tariffs.

And it was ironically the Conservative government of Brian Mulroney that negotiated the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement of 1987 that in 1994 was replaced by NAFTA.

As we see it, there’s precious little doubt that the Trump administration will find pressure from lots of lobbyists in the U.S. apart from the softwood lumber industry, which has so successfully moved to restrict the export of Canadian lumber products by claiming the British Columbia and Alberta governments don’t charge enough for trees cut from crown lands in the two provinces.

We would also expect to hear criticism of Canada’s marketing boards and limits that have been placed on imports of things like U.S. beef and eggs.

However, Trump and his negotiators might be surprised to find that free trade has led to thousands of Canadian jobs being moved to the U.S., not just to Mexico.

A couple of examples are Stelco and Caterpillar. Stelco, once Canada’s biggest steel producer, has all but disappeared since its purchase by U.S. Steel. And the huge Caterpillar plant in Brampton is long gone, with all its manufacturing now in the U.S., thanks to free trade.

Perhaps most complicated of all is the situation now found in the automotive industry, where virtually every vehicle assembled on both sides of the border has parts that can come from just about everywhere in the world.

Rotary Club of Palgrave’s Weekly Rotary Minute

By Ian Kittle

Rotary is not just belonging to a club and attending a meeting once a week.

Although it’s fun and surrounds you with good people, for me a Rotary Minute can happen at any time.

Let’s take the blood donor clinic that occurred the afternoon of April 6 at Caledon Community Complex. Our club has members who are in-clinic volunteers, which is a noble activity. But other good acts occur in a spontaneous fashion.

The new Caledon East Four Corners Bakery appeared with a donation of pizza for blood donors, which raised everyone’s spirits.

A blood clinic employee struck up a conversation which moved to the subject of Rotary. She is now looking into visiting a club in her neighbourhood.

A blood donor, while resting following a donation, explained a difficult period in their life. The conversation moves to Rotary and the helping, friendly members who make up our club. An offer is extended to visit our club which may add something beneficial in that person’s life.

Yes, a Rotary Minute can happen at any time.

If you are interested in learning more about Rotary and how you can help create and foster moments of impact here in Caledon and around the world, please visit www.rotaryclubofpalgrave.com for more information on our Club and all the wonderful ways you could get involved.

It happened today

He appeared in nearly 100 films, regularly landing parts in John Wayne movies.

But he’s probably best known for rescuing Fay Wray from the clutches of the monster in the 1933 classic King Kong, even coming up with the suggestion on how to get Kong off the Empire State Building.

Actor Bruce Cabot was born this day, April 20, 1904.

I hate tax time

Bill Rea

I need a break, so I’m taking one.

I’m sitting in the basement of my home Friday night, watching the Blue Jays blow another one, but I’ve barely been paying any attention. I am aware that my wife has been channel-hopping between the Jays and the hockey game between Montreal and the Rangers, which is going a bit better, from a Canadian point of view.

What I’ve really been concentrating on is my income tax. Justin Trudeau and the bureaucrats who work for him are expecting a full accounting of my financial situation throughout 2016 by the end of the month. Pardon me while I editorialize a bit. I’ll try to keep it clean.

I’m one of those guys who generally enjoys messing about with figures, and that essentially is what filling out an income tax return involves. But it is possible to OD on just about anything, as I have been learning the hard way.

I took last Thursday off (I’ll pause for a minute while you all re-read that last sentence, and shake your heads in disbelief at the thought that I actually took some time off). My wife and I spent the day in Muskoka, but it wasn’t all down time. I spent much of the day fussing about with a T1 General, with all sorts of paperwork scattered about the table at which I was working. Beth read a book.

In the evening, she channel-hopped between the Leafs and the Jays. I lost myself in numbers, although I was aware that neither game ended on a particularly positive note.

We came home Friday morning, and once the car was unloaded, I had to head to the office to address the work that I didn’t get done the previous day. But I got home in time to watch the ball game, and slave away on my financial documents.

I am currently writing these words because my mind needed some form of diversion. Like I stated at the top, I need a break.

I realize that just about all of you folks reading these words are going through roughly the same experience (ordeal), or have recently gone through it (some of you are a little faster off the mark than I).

Some people have relatively simple returns to fill out, but I am not in that group.

I have investments. I have been setting aside portions of every paycheque I have received for about the last 25 years for investments. Putting things in some perspective, as investors go, I’m pretty well small potatoes. But they have been paying off over the years, with the numbers gradually growing. They are amounting to something rather nice, but not stupendous. I am, after all, still working, and for a reason. But thoughts of retirement do pop into my head occasionally, and I am very mindful that my 60th birthday is now a matter of months away. I expect those investments, such that they are, will be there to supplement my lifestyle when I become a dependent of Trudeau and company.

Granted, I have been planning for retirement since I entered the workforce almost 40 years ago. My late parents always nagged me to make sure I maxed out on my RRSP contributions every year, and I have always been very glad they did. That was a very good habit to get into. And since RRSP contributions aren’t taxable, that was one line of the returned I filled in with a grin. As well, I’m a swell enough guy to make regular charitable donations, and that helps deal with the income tax burden. True, it doesn’t make a huge difference, but I have been on this planet long enough to appreciated the wisdom of the words “every little bit helps.”

I do a lot of driving in the course of my job, and the government, very accommodatingly, lets me claim the costs of keeping my car on the road. That includes gas, maintenance, insurance, getting the sticker for my licence plate, etc. But I also have to calculate how much of my driving is work related. For example, driving to and from my office every day is not considered a work-related expense. But there are a couple of Thursday mornings every month when I have to drive to the Peel Regional offices in Brampton to cover a council meeting, and I consider that trip work related. It involves a bit of estimating, but I’m confident I’m not skimping on Justin.

It is true that these forms can be complicated, but some people are better at puzzling them out than others. My late mother spent several years working for a chartered accountant. Among other things, she was responsible for payroll in the office. Thus she was well versed in tax law. I once wrote in a column that she could have lectured the Finance Minister (it was Paul Martin in those days) on tax law, and received a proper bawling-out for my pains. But she did enjoy emerging herself in such matters, and used to insist on seeing my documents. I used to go along with it because my mother told me to. But I had already gone through the process and come up with my own figures. I was always impressed with her ability to find a few extra bucks to go into my refund cheque.

My mother has been gone for several years, so I’ve had to do things on my own. I guess I do okay. I haven’t had to do time for evasion, yet.

But I have a job to do. The break’s over. The Jays lost. The Habs won. Beth fell asleep on the couch. Enough of me missing my mommy. I’ve got about two weeks to finish this job.

Just more than a week ago, the United States fired 59 Tomahawk missiles at Syria in response to what it believes was a chemical weapons attack by the Assad regime, which killed more than 100 people.

In taking this action, the U.S. has sent the Assad regime a clear message that using chemical weapons against its own people will not be tolerated. This action is in stark contrast to the approach of the current Liberal government in its approach to Syria. It's time for Canada to stand up with countries, like the U.S., and hold the Syrian government accountable for its actions.

The Conservative Official Opposition strongly supports the efforts of the U.S. to prevent Syria's military from launching further chemical weapon attacks. The global community cannot sit idly by while deadly nerve toxins are unleashed on innocent civilians. Unfortunately, to date, Prime Minister Trudeau has offered very little in terms of concrete action to hold the Russian-backed Syrian government accountable. It's yet another example of the current Liberal government's naïve efforts to normalize relations with Russian President Vladimir Putin. Canadian foreign policy must always be based on the principles of freedom, democracy, and rule of law. Moreover, Bashar al-Assad must be held accountable for his crimes against humanity and we must support our allies to achieve this end.

We, as the Conservative Official Opposition, have always rejected the Liberal government's "go along to get along" approach at the United Nations. Contrary to the Prime Minister's beliefs, the United Nations Security Council has proven itself ineffectual when it comes to resolving the Syrian conflict. In fact, the Prime Minister and the government of Canada seem to have been out of the loop on this action by the United States.

The Conservative Official Opposition supports the actions of Canada's allies in holding the Syrian government accountable. Furthermore, we call on the Prime Minister to finally recognize and respect Canada's traditional role in confronting evil and tyranny wherever it exits. Canada has a long and proud history of doing this and should continue to do so.

Have a happy Earth Day this Saturday

From Queen's Park

MPP Dufferin-Caledon

Ontario's Green Leaf Challenge has a goal of planting millions of trees across Ontario.

With Earth Day coming up April 22, the Green Leaf Challenge is a great opportunity to celebrate nature and do something good for your local environment — as well as a great excuse to get outside for a few hours.

Each year, Ontario plants approximately three millions trees under its 50 Million Tree Program (50MTP). The hope is that with the public's help, three million more trees will be planted this year; raising the total to six million trees planted in 2017.

The Green Leaf Challenge builds on the great work by my Progressive Conservative Colleague, MPP Ted Arnott, who, along with the County of Wellington, has been advocating for this program to be expanded across Ontario. The County of Wellington's Green Legacy Program is the largest municipal tree planting program in North America and was recognized by the United Nations in 2010. In 2015, Ted Arnott brought a resolution to the Ontario legislature calling on the Province to take the County of Wellington's model province-wide. I am pleased to see that MPP Arnott's advocacy has paid off on this issue.

Individuals, organizations and businesses can participate in the Green Leaf Challenge by planting a tree, participating in a community tree planting event or making a donation to have a tree planted on their behalf. To find out information on the challenge, you can visit greenleafchallenge.ca

The website also allows you to "add your trees" to an interactive map of Ontario, where it shows where fellow Ontarians are planting trees.

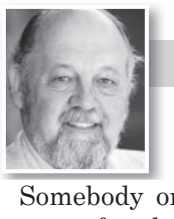

Earth Day is a great opportunity to celebrate spring and encourage good environmental practices. If you are looking for ways to become involved, there are a number of events happening across Dufferin-Caledon. For example, The Caledon Hills section of the Bruce Trail Club is celebrating Earth Day starting at 10 a.m. at the Gosling Volunteer Forest Parking Lot, on 5 Sideroad north of Highway 9 in Mono. Also, Let's Make Orangeville Shine is looking for volunteers to assist at their Earth Day Tree Planting and Cleanup. Volunteers are asked to meet at Broadway Pentecostal Church in Orangeville starting at 9 a.m. Also, Tree Canada is hosting a tree planting at the Alder Parklands (275 Alder St.) at 9 a.m., and the Orangeville Sustainability Action Team and Dufferin County Cultural Resource Circle are hosting a tree planting at Island Court Parkette (150 Amelia St.) at 1 p.m.

Whether you are celebrating Earth Day by planting a tree or cleaning up our local roadways and open spaces, Earth Day is an important reminder to value and protect the beautiful natural spaces around us in Dufferin-Caledon. I encourage you and your family and friends to spend time in the great outdoors this spring and help Ontario reach its goal of six million trees planted.

Budget bill another broken promise

National Affairs

Claire Hoy

Somebody once said that when people are two-faced the only thing you know for sure is that you can't trust either one of them.

Which brings us, alas, to Prime Minister Justin Trudeau. Actually, it brings us to pretty well any politician, but the most recent example of a politician campaigning on one side of an issue and governing on the other happens to involve the current occupant of the Prime Minister's Office.

You may recall that leading up to the last election, one of the most enduring criticisms of then prime minister Stephen Harper was that he didn't respect democracy, i.e. that he was prone to doing an end run around open public debate of his policies by loading a ton of them in the so-called "omnibus bills."

Those who criticized Harper for this — Justin Trudeau being one of the main players — were quite right in insisting that these bills are a disgraceful abuse of parliamentary power.

Harper himself, we should remember, had railed against them in opposition when then Liberal prime minister Paul Martin was using the tactic. Harper argued that the subject matter of omnibus bills is so diverse that a single vote on the contents puts members in conflict with their own principles. He strongly advocated dividing these bills into separate components to allow voting and debate on each particular subject.

The Liberals, naturally, ignored his advice and carried on.

When Harper took over it seems he forgot his outrage about omnibus bills and picked up right where the Liberals had left off, a practice that — surprise, surprise — prompted the Liberals to express outrage and demand an end to this heinous practice.

Indeed, during the election campaign itself, Trudeau accused Harper directly of having "used omnibus bills to prevent Parliament from properly reviewing and debating his proposals. We will change the House of Commons standing orders to bring an end to this undemocratic practice," he said.

Here. Here. The voters apparently shouted.

Once again, however, a funny thing happened on the way from the campaign trail to the actual cabinet office, and we now find our brave reformer Sir Justin dumping a huge omnibus bill on the Commons, a huge budget bill that contains 307 pages covering a host of various subjects, many of them having nothing to do with a budget.

As Globe and Mail columnist John Ibbitson wrote, this omnibus bill "contains, among other things, clauses that could limit the independence of the Parliamentary Budget Officer . . . a new law that creates the Canada Infrastructure Bank, which deserves separate scrutiny. The bill increases the number of judges on the Court of Queen's Bench in Alberta. It changes the rules for immigration applicants, toughens the Canada Labour Code rules concerning 'employer reprisals . . .' And on and on."

This is precisely the sort of thing that Trudeau had promised to put an end to. Well, so much for that promise.

There's a certain irony here in that the first omnibus bill in Ottawa was introduced by — ta da! — Pierre Elliot Trudeau, late father of our current prime minister, who, as justice minister in 1967 introduced legislation that partially legalized abortion, legalized homosexual acts between consenting adults, imposed new limits on gun ownership, allowed government-run lotteries and authorized police use of breathalyzers, all in one sweeping bill. It also prompted one of the elder Trudeau's most famous quotes, i.e. "there's no place for the state in the bedrooms of the nation."

Every prime minister since that time has a)- railed against the use of omnibus bills while not in the prime minister's seat and b)- used omnibus bills at the first opportunity upon being elected.

In his Globe column, Ibbitson neatly ties the current Trudeau's disregard of his election promise to the presence of two senior advisers — principle secretary Gerald Butts and chief of staff Katie Telford — who were young Liberal advisors during the Mike Harris years at Queen's Park. Butts became Liberal premier Dalton McGuinty's principal secretary and helped him ram several omnibus bills through the Legislature before scooting off to Ottawa to help Trudeau thumb his nose at the electorate.

Trudeau himself told the Commons that "any budget bill includes a broad range of provisions" that "will touch on a broad range of issues," prompting NDP MP Nathan Cullen to quip "I didn't think I'd see him (Trudeau) quoting Stephen Harper."

Well, when it comes to political hypocrisy, they pretty well follow the same script.

And they wonder why the public doesn't trust them.

Cuba — where one truly gets 'away from it all'

By Constance Scrafield

Landing in Cuba from a Canadian city is an instant transport to a very different world, a different place in time.

A mix-up of time: antique cars from the 1950s; horse-drawn carts of all kinds carrying individuals, families, goods, construction materials; acting as busses. Horses are not simply pets, but transportation.

The drive from the airport at Santiago de Cuba to the resort Brisas Sierra Mar is an hour's trip through countryside that is hilly — larger than hills, smaller than mountains — covered in bushes, not jungle, speaking of a dry land. The road runs flat between the hills and the ocean. All along the way, there are people: living in small houses and complexes of buildings as holiday places for Cubans.

They wave at the bus as they go about their lives, riding bicycles, on donkeys, inevitably horses, horse-drawn wagons. For anyone in an automobile, there are no speed signs so they just drive any speed they like, but the roads are not uniformly safe or paved — some caution is required.

The Brisas Sierra Mar is a three-star resort, not luxurious, but people from all over Canada and Europe come to stay, many of whom could well afford to book elsewhere. Lots of people come year after year, for years and many stay for anywhere between three to six months.

We met Graham, retired for some years, who stays in Cuba for three months a year and observed, as he wiggled his flexible, happy fingers, "I don't have any arthritis here, which I sure do in Canada, especially in the winter!"

He smiled so broadly and dashed off for a walk. Nice alternative to Florida, maybe.

Going to Cuba so soon after the death of Fidel Castro, and having been fed mostly negative stories about the man, we were naturally determined to learn how Cubans themselves actually felt.

The Saturday after our Wednesday arrival, we took the tour to the city of Santiago de Cuba, partly to see the grave site of Fidel Castro and talk to people about him. Our tour guide was really clear. "We are so sad about his passing," she told us. "He had been Cuba's leader for 50 years. For lots of people, he was the only leader they ever knew."

Combined with a determined force of fighters, Fidel brought to an end the corruption of dictator Fulgencio Batista and various elements of American mobsters and drug dealers in early 1959. (The Godfather II is an interesting history lesson about that period in Cuba). To most Cubans, Fidel Castro was a great leader and they were sad at his death.

In conversations with well-educated Cubans, Fidel's mistakes are admitted and excused. As they inevitably point out, where is there a government without punishment and mistakes?

In Cuba, education is free: go as far as you can: the MC and entertainment manager at the resort has a PhD in English literature and history. He speaks four languages fluently and his English is polished and very colloquial. It is not for money that Cubans go on to university: a doctor will earn the same as a barkeeper, but Cuba famously produces more well-skilled doctors per capita than anywhere else in the world. Cuban doctors fill the gap in many countries, where they can earn real money; then, they go back to their homeland, Cuba.

Chivirico is the town nearest Sierra Mar, a small town with a few restaurants, a bank, some shops and a park on the beach with food vendors and others. It is a meeting place, with people gossiping and playing music.

For music is the heart and soul of Cuba, where so much of what is Caribbean music originates in Santiago de Cuba. Influenced by the African and European historical presence in the island, Cuban music is loved around the world. The Rumba, Cha-cha and Son found their birth here. Wherever one goes, there are really fine musicians and singers. Many foreign musicians coming to Cuba to visit from abroad bring musical instruments to give, so impressed are they with the talent they encounter there.

Ours was intended to be a restful break from life here in Canada and the enslavement to the Canadian winter. However, we also went horseback riding, dashed about on mopeds and snorkeled over a coral reef.

As we were riding one day along a wooded path, a sow and her eight piglets were grazing, free to roam where they wanted. When the piglets saw us coming, they all scurried under their mother's belly. Very cute.

Later, along the road, crossing a bridge over shallow water, there were egrets just hanging out with four or five cows to take advantage of the bugs exposed when the cows uprooted a bit of grass.

On our last day, we took a hike up a steep hill to catch the view. On our way back down, we wandered through a village where we were greeted with smiles and offered coffee, grown in those hills, brought down and roasted nearby.

The houses are small with yards in which chickens peck and tropical fruit trees stand. Everything is neat and swept.

And wonderful.

Work coming on George Bolton Parkway

George Bolton Parkway will be reconstructed from Regional Road 50 to Nixon Road, starting soon.

The Town of Caledon reports the project will run from May 1 to July 20. The work will include minor repairs to the storm sewer, replacement of curbs and road reconstruction with 140 millimeters of asphalt. The driving surface will be reconfigured to include bicycle lanes and a left turn lane.

This road is a fully urbanized industrial road and acts as a collector between Coleraine Drive and Regional Road 50. Temporary lane closures are expected, but two way traffic will be maintained.

Up at sunrise to greet Easter

Many people get up early Easter Sunday to attend Sunrise Services, and that was the case in Caledon Sunday. The faithful were on hand at Spirit Tree Cidery before dawn to greet the morning at the service conducted by Rev. Mary Campbell of Claude Church. There was also a large gathering hosted by the Caledon Optimists Club at the top of the Alton Pinnacle.

Crowds out for Easter Egg Round Up

The weather Saturday improved a lot, make for a sunny day for the 50th anniversary Easter Egg Round Up at Teen Ranch on Highway 10. These young folks were stampeding to take part in one of the scheduled Easter Egg hunts.

The petting zoo attracted lots of attention. Stephanie Albanese of Orangeville helped her son Matteo, 2, feed the animals as her nephew Ethan, 11, watched.

There were craft activities at Teen Ranch. Cailey Allen, 8, and Lily Dasilva, 10, of Orangeville were working on dying “dinosaur” eggs.

Angel Brown of Orangeville was helping her son Daniel, 2, collect his Easter eggs.

TEA TIME AT CHELTENHAM BAPTIST

Cheltenham Baptist Church was decorated for St. Patrick's Day recently, just in time for the St. Patrick's Day Tea. Ella Vander Sluis joined her grandparents Barbara and Bob Vander Sluis, formerly of Inglewood, for tea. The event was a fundraiser for the renovations at the church.

4-H explores the community through birdwatching

By Kayla Emmerton

Local 4-Her's had a great time this season exploring and learning about birds in the community through a new fun and interactive club — Birdwatching.

We were able to get outside and see some interesting birds in their natural habitat, as well as complete some fun crafts for the birds and ourselves. We made bird houses both out of recycling materials and wood, as well as some sticky suet blocks. We also had a lot of fun making (and eating) our chocolate nests with jellybean eggs.

Birdwatching is a great way to get out in the community to enjoy nature as well as find out more about these amazing creatures. Birdwatching is one of the many clubs that has been offered through Peel 4-H.

To find more information and to see more pictures of the club, visit www.4-hontario.ca/4h-in-my-area/peel.aspx

Pork chop dinner at Palgrave Church

Palgrave United Church will be the scene of a barbecued pork chop dinner June 3.

It will run from 5 to 7 p.m. The menu will feature pork chops, as well as salads, baked beans, baked potatoes and Palgrave United's famous pies.

The price will be $14 for one chop, $16 for two, and $5 for children younger than 10.

The church is at 34 Pine Ave.

Lots of Easter fun at SouthFields Village

The annual Easter Egg Hunt in Dennison Park was arranged by the SouthFields Village Residents' Group and Renew Church, and even the threatening weather couldn't dampen the enthusiasm. There were plenty of fun activities to attract young and old. Evan Armstrong is just 23-months-old, so he wasn't quite sure what he was supposed to be doing with the eggs he was collecting. His father Jeff was there to help.

Photos by Bill Rea

Many of the children got the chance to get their faces painted. Addyson Hayes, 5, watched as volunteer Ursula Mundy worked on a design on the face of her brother Caleb, 2.

The rain was no problem if there was an umbrella handy. Loretto Veneziale, 3, was able to concentrate on collecting his eggs while his father Steve helped keep him dry.

Construction on Headwaters' new wing is in FULL SWING!

Scheduled to open doors to the public this July, construction on Headwaters Health Care Centre's (Headwaters) new 8,700 square foot expansion is well underway and moving steadily towards completion.

The transformative project is a significant step forward in increasing access to important health care services for the growing community. The addition of the new space is the first major expansion of the hospital since it opened at its current location in 1997. The new wing will be home to much-needed clinics, services and programs like chemotherapy, minor procedures, orthopaedics and telemedicine. Headwaters is also taking on an exciting renovation of 11,800 square feet of existing hospital space to add another operating room, improve reception and expand pre- and post-surgical recovery areas.

Central West CCAC recognized at the Central West LHIN's inaugural Quality Awards

Earlier this year, the Central West Community Care Access Centre (CCAC) was honoured for its innovative Palliative Patient Early Identification Program at the Central West LHIN's inaugural Quality Awards.

The Quality Awards shine a spotlight on quality and excellence by celebrating the innovative achievements of local teams as they focus on putting patients at the centre of the health care system.

The Palliative Patient Early Identification Program was selected as a winner from 17 award submissions from health care organizations across the Central West region. The program focused on identifying patients with palliative care needs earlier in their illnesses, giving them access to well-coordinated, high quality palliative care sooner and improving their quality of life. The project was a partnership between the Central West CCAC and the Central West Palliative Care Network, with support from Osler, Health Links leadership, Dufferin County Paramedic Service, local primary care teams, and the IDEAS leadership program.

Fundraising lottery will boost Caledon Meals on Wheels

By Mark Pavilons

Caledon Meals on Wheels (CMOW) has put its fundraising in high gear, with the launch last week of its Wheels for Meals Lottery.

The lottery, which runs until Aug. 31, offers a grand prize of a 2017 Ford F-150 pickup truck and camping equipment.

Meals on Wheels executive, local politicians and residents gathered at Bolton's Fines Ford Lincoln to make the announcement.

Bob Fines, a venerable supporter of local charities, admitted that "giving back is a responsibility." The community has been good to him, and the family run dealership is marking its 30th anniversary this month.

As well, the dealership will host a Lincoln test drive event June 10, with proceeds going to Meals on Wheels.

Councillor Doug Beffort said the Town always here to support local efforts such as these. He lauded Fines Ford for its commitment to the community.

"This councillor is going to look good driving around in this truck," he joked.

Dufferin-Caledon MPP Sylvia Jones said it's important for people to donate time, treasures and talents to their communities. The creativity the Meals on Wheels board has brought to this project will ramp up their fundraising efforts.

CMOW Executive Director Christine Sevigny said the support from the community constantly amazes her. It's so "heart-warming seeing the smiles on the faces of people, and the impact we're having," she said. "You know we're doing good work."

This lottery will go a long way to expanding Meals on Wheels programs.

Only 8,000 tickets have been printed. They are $20 each or three for $50. They will be sold at numerous community events throughout the summer. For more, visit their website at cmow.org

Jan Holland, father of Arizona Coyotes skater (and former Toronto Maple Leaf) Peter Holland, purchased the first lottery ticket from Christine Sevigny, executive director of Caledon Meals on Wheels.

Fundraising performance at Townhall Players

The Caledon Village Association will be partnering with the Caledon Townhall Players for a fundraising performance of A Point of Viewing.

The performance will be May 12, and it will raise money to help cover the costs fo removing Christmas decorations from the village.

This comedy deals with a special, 10th-anniversary edition of a popular daytime TV talk show. When a technical mishap destroys their pre-taped broadcast, the three women who host the show, Point of View, are forced to replace it with a last-minute, live-to-air broadcast. Things are complicated by behind-the-scenes politics, tell-all tabloid stories and rumours about the show's fate. With no chance for edits or re-takes, 10 years of off-camera differences are about to explode on the air for all to see.

Curtain is 8:15 p.m. Tickets for this fundraiser can be ordered by emailing caledonvillage@rogers.com or by phoning 519-927-3495.

Atom Hawks capture March Madness Tournament

By Jake Courtepatte

What a way to end the season.

Both the atom A and atom AA Caledon Hawks were golden recently at the Toronto Avalanche's March Madness Tournament, one last weekend hoorah in the rep schedule.

The Hawks' squads were the only representatives of Caledon hockey, with both making undefeated runs to the finals.

The As opened up Friday with a statement, taking down the nearby NobleKing Knights by a score of 6-2. Following up with a 2-1 win over Grimsby Friday afternoon, they took down both the Clarington Toros and Richmond Hill Stars Saturday to advance to the semifinal match.

There they once again met the Stars, cruising to the afternoon's final 9-2.

Grimsby was the last opponent to beat, having come the closest to solving Caledon in the round robin. It was once again a close match, with Caledon coming out on top 2-1.

The atom AAs were just as relentless against their opposing goaltenders, putting up seven goals against the Mississauga North Stars in their opener. They followed with another seven-goal performance against Stoney Creek, before advancing to the semifinals on the back of a 3-2 win over the Guelph Gryphons.

A 5-3 win over Stoney Creek booked their ticket to the final, where they took the title in a 3-2 win over Mississauga.

Fines Ford takes title in senior league

Fines Ford Lincoln threw the team bandwagon into reverse Monday and backed into the Caledon Senior Hockey League playoff championship.

Once Jiffy Lube Oilers lost by a 4-2 margin to Yale Industrial Trucks, the title went to Fines Ford, thanks to their lead in the first meaningful tiebreaker, goals scored in the playoff round-robin. Fines Ford and Jiffy Lube were tied with identical 3-0-1 records going into the games, but Fines had scored five more goals than Jiffy Lube. So when Jiffy Lube only managed two goals, the crown went to Fines Ford, who went on to lose 9-5 to Bolton Chiropractic Centre in the season finale.

In the other game at Caledon East arena, Rutherford Global Logistics downed Heart Lake Insurance 5-2.

Properly dispose of household medical waste

The Region of Peel would like to remind residents who generate household medical waste and sharps that they need to properly dispose of them.

Plastics that have been used for household medical waste cannot go in recycling. They must be double-bagged and placed in the garbage.

"The Region of Peel has seen a spike in the amount of this type of waste that is being placed in recycling since we introduced our carts," Manager of Waste Program Planning Erwin Pascual said. "If you're not sure how to dispose of an item, visit peelregion.ca/waste and use our 'how to sort your waste' tool."

Household medical waste (other than sharps) includes dialysis tubing, filters, and disposable towels and sheets, colostomy bags, IV bags and tubing, gastric and nasal tubes, and soiled dressings and incontinence products.

Residents who use sharps (needles, syringes and lancets) should obtain a free biohazard container from one of the Region's six Community Recycling Centres (CRCs) so that they can:

- place their sharps in it,
- return the biohazard container filled with the sharps to a CRC for free disposal, and
- get a free replacement biohazard container.

The sharps should not be placed in any other container or cart.

Residents can also visit pharmacies participating in the Ontario Sharps Collection Program for a similar biohazard container service. (Check: healthsteward.ca/returns/Ontario)

If residents have more household medical waste than will fit in their garbage, they should contact the Region at 905-584-2216 or wasteinquiry@peelregion.ca to inquire about how to be added to the Region's medical waste exemption list.

OBITUARIES

For now we see through a glass darkly
but then Face to Face.
Jack Harper (John Edward Alexander)
is now face to face with his Saviour and Lord, Jesus Christ. Jack grew up in a loving family of five in Toronto, graduated from the University of Toronto and become a teacher. He served in the Canadian Armed Forces as a medic, marrying his beloved Frances while still a soldier in February of 1945.He taught briefly with the Toronto Board of Education but soon made plans to go to Southern Africa with the South Africa General Mission. He was influenced in this decision by his church and the InterVarsity Christian Fellowship. Jack and Frances together made great friends and trained pastors and teachers during their years in Malawi and Zimbabwe. Later in life he served as a special Education Teacher with the Etobicoke Board of Education. Jack loved Muskoka, and was a camp director for many years at Camp Miniyowe on Mary Lake. He especially enjoyed canoeing, sailing and swimming in the lake. He specialized in telling exciting and wonderful stories to the children at camp, and to his children and grandchildren. One of his daily practices during his days at the cottage in Muskoka, was hiking up the hills behind the cottage to pray, read his Bible and meditate on "God's carpet' his term for the mossy areas between the Muskoka rocks. This practice was the secret of His Christian Life, and formed his character and integrity. Jack and Frances moved to Orangeville during retirement, where he served as a volunteer at the Headwaters Health Center. He continued his daily swim and walks for years. He loved people, and was always friendly, caring and interested in others. He had a devoted prayer life with many who remained on his list for years. We will not know until heaven, the results of the many prayers that Jack sent forth for others. His five children and their spouses, 12 grandchildren, 10 great-grandchildren (with another on the way!) are all greatly blessed to have had him in their lives.
The key to understanding his life? "Remain in Me, and I in You", from John 15:4.
A Celebration of Jack's life and legacy will take place at Compass Community Church, 246289 Hockley Road, Orangeville, Ontario on Friday, May 19, 2017 at 12:00 p.m.
Gifts given in Jack's honour will go towards the Compass Global Missions Fund.
Condolences may be offered to the family at www.dodsandmcnair.com

Vivaldi's Gloria will highlight chamber choir concert April 23

By Constance Scrafield

In what promises to be an evening of wonders, a concert at Westminster United Church in Orangeville this month will feature Vivaldi's Gloria and include soloists, choral and instrumental chamber and Baroque music.

John Wervers, the director and coordinator of this concert and community choirs based in Orangeville and Alliston, has conducted five previous concerts in Orangeville. They have mainly featured classical music, most recently a choral Tribute to Canada by the Dufferin Concert Singers and New Tecumseth Singers.

"We wanted to do something a little different this year, leading us to assemble the chamber concert beginning with Vivaldi's Gloria," Wervers commented.

The concert is headed by the Amaranth Chamber Choir and The Waterloo Chamber Players Orchestra, a 23-piece orchestra.

"I organize these concerts but, where I can, I use local musicians as soloists," he said.

Certainly, that has been the case here, for Cara Cameron is the mezzo soprano and Hannah Shelton Campbell is the soprano. Both are from this area. Henry Janzen, who is soloist on the viola, is with Hart House Orchestra in Toronto.

As for the Amaranth Chamber Choir, its members come from 13 different communities.

"Our goal is to work with strong voices: seven of them are music teachers and the others have musical backgrounds, all people I've worked with," Wervers explained.

The music comes from Vivaldi, J. S. Bach, Elgar, Rutter, Whitaker – a collection of small and major music and songs, duets and solos, full orchestra with choir, fabulous.

"We do segments of seven weeks," Wervers explained about his circuit with the singers and musicians, "in the fall and the spring."

Although Wervers and his wife currently live in London, they were based in Dufferin for many years. Since the move west, he has had the use of an apartment in Schomberg which readily facilitated his continuing to work with the musicians and singers to perform in this region.

Over the years, the former head of music at two Dufferin high schools said, "we did 150 concerts in Alliston. We had a good time."

He went on to explain some differences between a choir and a chamber choir.

"The chamber choir is smaller; typically, everyone is responsible for their own parts — there must be clarity, precise singing."

The style of chamber music differs as well.

"The energy, the rhythmic development and the repetitiveness are beautiful,' he said. "There are slow and tense elements like the Bach that we are dong for this concert."

Nancy Sicsic, organist and music director for Westminster United Church, is also in this upcoming concert, playing as accompanist and soloist. Sicsic has been with the church for about two years and has been instrumental in producing several concerts there during that time.

Naturally, people within and without the church are delighted about the renovations to the interior that took place over the summer last year. The balcony was taken down, the whole was brought to one level and a state-of-the-art sound system was installed.

Designed to reflect its historical look and to attract performers and musicians to produce their concerts in the church, the work done to the interior of the is a real boon for the community at large. Sources say there are plans to carry on with improvements to the building with a view to making it a more multi-use facility for the whole community.

So, the concert is April 23, at 7:30 p.m. at the church, 247 Broadway. Tickets are being sold at the church, BookLore, and by calling John Lemke at 519-216-2830.
