Kyle Seeback secures D-C Conservative nomination

Written By MIKE BAKER

After securing a comfortable victory in last week's Dufferin-Caledon Conservative nomination rerun, Kyle Seeback is anxious to make up for lost time as October's federal election looms.

Mr. Seeback, a former one-term MP for Brampton West, cut a confident figure last Wednesday (July 31) as members of the Conservative Party in Dufferin-Caledon gathered at the Orangeville Agricultural Society Event Centre to select a new candidate to replace the retiring David Tilson.

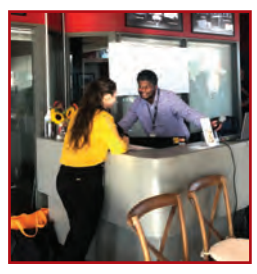

Also seeking the nomination last week were former Caledon Regional Councillor Barb Shaughnessy, former Orangeville Mayor Jeremy Williams and Brampton realtor Gurminder Gill.

A total of 1,343 ballots were counted at the meeting, which, just as was the case at the original nomination held back on March 19, made use of the much-maligned ranked ballot system. In that process, members are asked to select a first, second, third and fourth choice when placing their vote. All votes are counted, and the numbers revealed in the first round disclose how many first choice selections a candidate received. Each round, the candidate with the lowest number of votes is eliminated, with their votes then being reallocated to the remaining members, based upon where they placed on a voter's ballot.

In the first round of voting, Mr. Seeback received 485 votes. Ms. Shaughnessy received 392 votes, Mr. Gill 365 votes and Mr. Williams 70 votes. In total, 28 ballots were spoiled. With Mr. Williams and Mr. Gill eliminated in the first and second rounds respectively, the final round saw Mr. Seeback and Ms. Shaughnessy go head-to-head for the nomination.

Davis Family Feed Farm set to host sunflower festival

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC: Sean Davis, Manager of Davis Family Feed Farm, is excited to host the facility's very first sunflower festival, running now until Sunday, August 18.

Written By KIRA WRONSKA DORWARD

It's almost a year to the day that Davis Family Feed Farm was closing down their sunflower fields for 2018. They'd had 18 000 visitors, some from as far away as New York.

"It all started three years ago," says manager Sean Davis, "when Global TV did a show on the sunflowers. Once the blogs got a hold of it, it just blew up."

Although the Davis' have been growing the 40 acres of sunflowers for twelve years, and the farm has been in the family since Sean's great-grandfather bought the property in 1952, only last year did they open up their fields and farm to the public. This year, they've gone a step further to make the two-and-a-half-week bloom period a festival, including other local vendors.

"With people coming from different parts of Ontario," and some calling about the flowers as far away as Hong Kong, "we just wanted to showcase Caledon East and certain vendors."

The farm has set up a vendor area next to the driveway and acre-wide parking lot. This year alongside the sunflowers, visitors can also view Creative Quest's animal exhibition, which includes a peregrine falcon, grey horned owl, red footed tortoises, baby chicks, rabbits, guinea pigs, and small reptiles. Mount Wolfe Farms will be present, selling their fruits and vegetables, in addition to June and Rose Candles, Crystalview Greenhouse, and Main Street Ice Cream. The Davises will be selling their own sunflower cooking oil and sunflower honey (made from the farm's own sunflowers and 21 bee hives), although Sean warns that only a little stock is left as they usually sell out early in the season.

It's not been an easy year for the Davis' and other Caledon farmers. A very late start to the growing season has now been compounded by a lack of rain, hence why the sunflower fields are open so much later this summer. "We would love to turn on that switch to make them turn on today, but it's all up to nature," says Sean. However, with the 1.75 km walk cut through the fields on various paths, "it'll be a good hour in the sun for people," he adds.

This year's festival takes place from Monday August 5 to Sunday August 18, with operating hours from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. From 6 p.m. until 9 p.m., the sunflower fields are reserved for family photography and engagement photos, by appointment only. Two yoga classes on Tuesday evenings have already filled up, with 100 women eager to find their zen amongst the flowers.

Entry fees for adults are $10 per person. Children 12 and under are free, and leashed small dogs are welcome as long as they are friendly and their owners pick-up. For every admission, $1 goes to support the Davis' charity of choice, the Canadian Celiac Association. Both Sean and his young son suffer from the disease, so for them the cause is personal. All proceeds from the yoga sessions are divided between the CCA and Caledon Community Services. On Tuesday August 13, Mira Budd is also leading a walk through the fields to raise money for the Trailway Association.

Two water stations will be manned by volunteers. Saturdays and Sundays, proceeds from the sale of water is going to the Caledon East United Church, and on Fridays money raised will benefit Abbey Fields.

Sean and his family ask that visitors please not go into the sunflowers and stay on the path. In terms of parking, "We'd just like to remind everyone that we're a small family farm. We don't have ten acres of parking like Costco, so we've had to sacrifice some land to parking. We hope people are understanding of that. We're hoping it's enough, but we're not too sure."

Of the whole enterprise, Sean says, "It's wild. We're all in it together, basically." His brother, who works in Prague will be returning to help, as will his brother from Newmarket, "So it's a big family effort. We just open it up and cross our fingers. It's definitely a new adventure."

4-H Canada launches first ever fundraising campaign

Written By MIKE BAKER

4-H Canada has announced the launch of its first national fundraising campaign, in partnership with Veseys Seeds Ltd.

Developed in consultation with 4-H youth members and volunteer leaders across Canada, the initiative will give 4-H'ers the opportunity to explore the joys of gardening, and develop hands-on leadership and fundraising skills through the sale of seeds, bulbs, and roots.

With a product that reflects the interests and passions of 4-H members and ties back to 4-H's roots in agriculture, the campaign aims to instill in the budding entrepreneurs a sense of pride in the 4-H movement, and encourage them to spread awareness of how the program has impacted their lives and give back to 4-H through engaging their clubs and communities.

Interested 4-H regions, counties and clubs can sign up online until the fall. Sixty per cent of their retail sales will go back into supporting 4-H in Canada, with over half of the profit staying local. For the first time, a national fundraiser will benefit all levels of the 4-H movement – from grassroots to provincial and national organizations – thus strengthening and ensuring a thriving, bright future for 4-H in Canada.

"Our youth members told us they wanted to be part of a collective fundraising effort that embodied the 4-H values, was Canadian and had a positive impact on the environment," said Shannon Benner, 4-H Canada CEO. "Thanks to Veseys, our fundraising campaign fits all these criteria, and supports our mission of empowering youth to be responsible, caring and contributing leaders that affect positive change in the world around them."

"Veseys Seeds has had a decades-long relationship with 4-H clubs on Prince Edward Island, having donated vegetable and flower seeds for their annual competitions," said John Barrett, Director of Sales, Marketing & Development, Veseys Seeds Ltd. "We are delighted to partner on the national level with 4-H Canada in this fundraising initiative, as we believe strongly in their dedication to agriculture, and the environment in which we live."

The 4-H Canada Veseys fundraiser is available across Canada but participation in the fall pilot is limited. 4-H regions, counties and clubs can find out more and sign up by September 30 at 4-h-canada.ca/fundraising.

Barb Shaughnessy claims 'the fix was in' in recent nomination

Written By MIKE BAKER

While a second appeal won't be forthcoming in the wake of last week's rerun of the Dufferin-Caledon Conservative nomination vote, Barb Shaughnessy, a candidate in the recent race, has launched a scathing attack against her party and the man tasked with leading the Tories forward in her home riding.

In a notice distributed to the 3,000-plus membership base on Tuesday morning (August 6), Ms. Shaughnessy claims "the fix was in" for Kyle Seeback, who handily ran out as the winner following the nomination vote last Wednesday (July 31) at the Orangeville Agricultural Society Event Centre.

Beating Ms. Shaughnessy in the final round of voting, Mr. Seeback will now represent the Conservatives on the ballot in Dufferin-Caledon in October's federal election.

This marks the second time in just five months that Ms. Shaughnessy could be perceived as criticizing the Conservative Party. Immediately following the initial nomination process, which concluded on March 19, she appealed the decision, alleging that the winner, Harzadan Singh Khattra, had broken Party rules and manipulated the system to come out on top. Following a month-long investigation, Mr. Khattra was disqualified.

Immediately following that disqualification, Ms. Shaughnessy expressed her belief that the nomination should be awarded to one of the top two remaining candidates – herself and Kevin Weatherbee. In the end, following weeks of silence, Conservative Party Executive Director Dustin Van Vugt revealed, on June 13, that a second nomination process would be launched in the riding, with new candidates eligible to put their name forward.

"Kyle was preparing himself for a nomination campaign before it was ever publicly announced," Ms. Shaughnessy alleged in her release. "This is evident from the new Facebook profile picture (Mr. Seeback placed on his profile) on May 7, that became his campaign's main image, and a rapid professionalization of his social media presence."

She added, "You might say, 'well maybe Seeback was just getting ready in case a new nomination was announced'. Good question. Except that in all other situations where the party removed the victor of a nomination, they appointed the second-place finisher, or appointed someone else entirely who did not participate in the race, often a star candidate."

"The party has not once, in its recorded history, opened a second nomination race after the first one's results were invalidated," Ms. Shaughnessy continued.

During that initial nomination, Kevin Weatherbee marginally beat out Ms. Shaughnessy as the second-placed candidate. Following Mr. Khattra's disqualification, Mr. Weatherbee believed he should have been afforded the opportunity to represent the Conservatives in Dufferin-Caledon in October's election. But after initially declaring he would run again in the second nomination, he quickly withdrew his name from consideration and, like Ms. Shaughnessy, criticized Conservative Party top brass for deciding to host an unprecedented second nomination.

Ms. Shaughnessy also drew attention to Mr. Seeback's ties to Campaign Life Coalition (CLC). In a release on May 8, more than a month before the Conservative Party announced the new nomination, Campaign Life Coalition stated it had a candidate in the Dufferin-Caledon riding that aligned with their values. On nomination day (July 31), the group put out another notice asking members to vote for Kyle Seeback.

While Mr. Seeback informed the Citizen last week that he has no ties to Campaign Life Coalition, Ms. Shaughnessy alleges he has long been associated with the organization, claiming he has given speeches at CLC conventions, while also "promoting their cause" online through websites such as YouTube.

"His commitment to Campaign Life Coalition is to re-open the abortion issue," Ms. Shaughnessy alleges.

More than 750 words in length, Ms. Shaughnessy's statement also takes shots at Mr. Seeback's personal life, bringing up his alleged infidelity and past involvement in the website AshleyMadison.com – a site for married individuals to find extra-marital affairs. She goes on to claim that Mr. Seeback's baggage will come back to bite the Conservative's in October's election.

"Information regarding Mr. Seeback's past and personal views is well known to the Liberal Party and will become common knowledge throughout the Dufferin-Caledon community during the upcoming election," Ms. Shaughnessy wrote. "The Liberals will reopen the playbook they used in 2015 to defeat (Mr.) Seeback."

She added, "Members have asked my position on Mr. Seeback. I can unequivocally say that I cannot support Mr. Seeback. He plays loosely with the truth. He does not reflect the values of the members I introduced to the party. He does not have my trust."

When contacted by the Citizen, Mr. Seeback admitted he was very disappointed that Ms. Shaughnessy decided to engage in the type of "dirty politics" he says he tries to avoid.

"Obviously I'm disappointed that Barb would send out an email like that. I think this type of negative mudslinging is the type of politics that generally turns Canadian voters off. It's not the kind of politics that I will ever engage in," Mr. Seeback said. "I ran a very positive campaign in my nomination. I spoke about my positive vision for Conservatives and now I'm going to talk about my positive vision for the people of Dufferin-Caledon."

> "Members have asked my position on Mr. Seeback. I can unequivocally say that I cannot support Mr. Seeback. He plays loosely with the truth. He does not reflect the values of the members I introduced to the party. He does not have my trust.
> Barb Shaughnessy
> Former D-C Conservative candidate

Ms. Shaughnessy wasn't the only candidate to have issues with the most recent nomination process. Former Orangeville Mayor Jeremy Williams, who finished in fourth place with 70 votes, took to social media to congratulate Mr. Seeback for winning the nomination, while also making note of the backing he received from CLC. While stating he had "more fun in this nomination race than any race before", Mr. Williams admitted he had one regret.

"My only regret is for all those who wanted to vote tonight and couldn't. My wife. Most of my family. Many friends and supporters. All had current memberships. But were denied their right to vote. Shameful," Mr. Williams wrote.

When asked if she had received any further complaints from local members, Dufferin-Caledon Conservative Association President Jennifer Innis informed the Citizen she had heard only good things about this second nomination.

Kyle Seeback emerges as the winner of second D-C Conservantive nomination

Catching up with Ms. Shaughnessy's team on nomination night, there was a feeling they were going to fall short in the final vote. When results were revealed shortly after 11 p.m., those fears came to pass, with Mr. Seeback coming out on top with 566 votes to Ms. Shaughnessy's 448 votes.

The result finally brings an end to months of uncertainty within the local Conservative community. At the original nomination meeting, held in March, Harzadan Khattra emerged as the shocking, yet overwhelming, victor, besting Ms. Shaughnessy, Mr. Williams and, at the time, the perceived frontrunner for the role, Kevin Weatherbee. Just days after that nomination, Ms. Shaughnessy filed an official appeal with the Party's head office. Following a month-long investigation and subsequent appeal process, it was determined, on April 25, that Mr. Khattra was to be disqualified as the candidate and barred from running in any future process.

Speaking to the Citizen this week, Mr. Seeback was keen to put all of that controversy, and all of that discontent behind him as he focuses on securing a sixth consecutive term for the Conservatives in Dufferin-Caledon.

"This was a really big moment for me. I felt really overcome with emotions on the night, mostly because I didn't know I was going to win having entered the race so late," Mr. Seeback said. "But, I've taken a little time to let it all sink in and now we need to get to work on making sure we have the support ahead of the federal election to win this riding."

Mr. Seeback took a lot of flak during what was a shortened six-week nomination race, with criticism pouring in from all directions. Claims that he was simply a parachute candidate with no ties to the community, that he was running only to serve controversial groups such as the Campaign Life Coalition and Parents as First Educators, or, more nefariously, that he received assistance from the Conservative Party's head office to not only ensure he was able to run in the nomination, but to also assure his eventual victory, are, in Kyle's own words, categorically untrue.

"There were a lot of unfair comments made over the past few weeks. So many people have criticized me as a parachute candidate, which isn't the case," Mr. Seeback said.

When asked by the Citizen to explain his potential ties to some of the controversial groups that backed him in this nomination, Mr. Seeback indicated he has nothing to hide.

"I don't have any connections to Campaign Life. They've supported candidates in nominations across the country. They chose to support me. That's fine," Mr. Seeback said. "I am not beholden to any group that supported me. The only people I'll be beholden to are members of the Conservative party, and my constituents. That is it, full stop."

Regarding rumours that he received help from higher ups within the Conservative Party, Mr. Seeback simply labelled them untrue, stating he had to go through the nomination process just the same as the other three candidates.

"If the party wanted me as their candidate, they could have appointed me. They have the power to do that and it has been done before," Mr. Seeback said, noting this was an open nomination process that he had to fight to win.

Now that he is firmly in place as the Conservative candidate in Dufferin-Caledon, Mr. Seeback said he'll be spending the next few weeks meeting with local residents and identifying the issues that are important to the community.

"While I will, obviously, be following the Party platform, I made it clear during the nomination process that I truly want to be a voice for our community. If elected, I will commit to holding townhall-type meetings every four months, where everyone is invited, everyone is welcome to attend. I am prepared to talk about any issue – that's the number one priority," Mr. Seeback said. "Number two, I am going to set up a whole bunch of citizen advisory groups that I'll meet with to keep me informed on all the issues going on locally. Those committees will be absolutely non-partisan. I'm telling people that I want to hear the good, the bad and the ugly when I'm the representative."

Delving into some specific issues, Mr. Seeback noted high-speed internet for rural residents requires urgent attention, with infrastructure investments a close second on his list. He also vowed to do his part to "deliver real tax relief, real affordability" for Dufferin-Caledon residents, asserting that the current Liberal government has failed in its promise to keep taxes down for the middle class.

Having worked hard to dispel fears of corruption and, worse, incompetency in recent months, Dufferin-Caledon Conservative Association President Jennifer Innis said she was happy with how last week's nomination meeting unfolded, noting there had been few complaints registered by the local membership.

"I think the nomination meeting ran very smoothly from what I saw and heard. There weren't really any long line ups, there was no confusion. From what I saw, everyone followed Party rules. I didn't hear any negative feedback, in fast I heard a lot of positive feedback from members who had concerns or issues last time around," Ms. Innis stated.

She added, "I saw one comment on social media, asking about rumours that individuals were using Brampton drivers' licences as identification – I asked staff about it and they said the rules were followed. The one thing I will say is, this time around, head office, at the request of the association, conducted a thorough audit of the membership list. It was not a significant number, but there were some members removed. Head office conducted a thorough check of the membership list and I am very confident in what they supplied to us."

With the election now just two months away, Mr. Seeback says he'll be working hard to convince local residents that a vote for the Conservatives is "the right choice to make". Having served as MP for one term in Brampton, he said he has the necessary experience to hit the ground running in Ottawa.

"The learning curve for being an MP is incredibly steep. There are so many issues, both federally and locally, that you have to understand. I really have a great grasp of the federal issues. I have a good grasp of how to go about getting things done. That's a big thing," Mr. Seeback said. "I've been there for four years, I delivered a lot for the people in Brampton West. I don't need to spend the first two or three years figuring it out, I'll be able to deliver results right away."

He added, "I think the Conservative Party has the best leader, the best platform that is going to make the changes in people's lives that are necessary for them to succeed."

Mr. Seeback will compete for the local vote alongside Liberal candidate Michele Fisher, Green candidate Stefan Wiesen and People's Party candidate Chad Ransom. To date, there is no declared NDP candidate in Dufferin-Caledon. The federal election will take place on Oct. 21.

Notice of Study Completion/ Transportation Environmental Study Report Submission

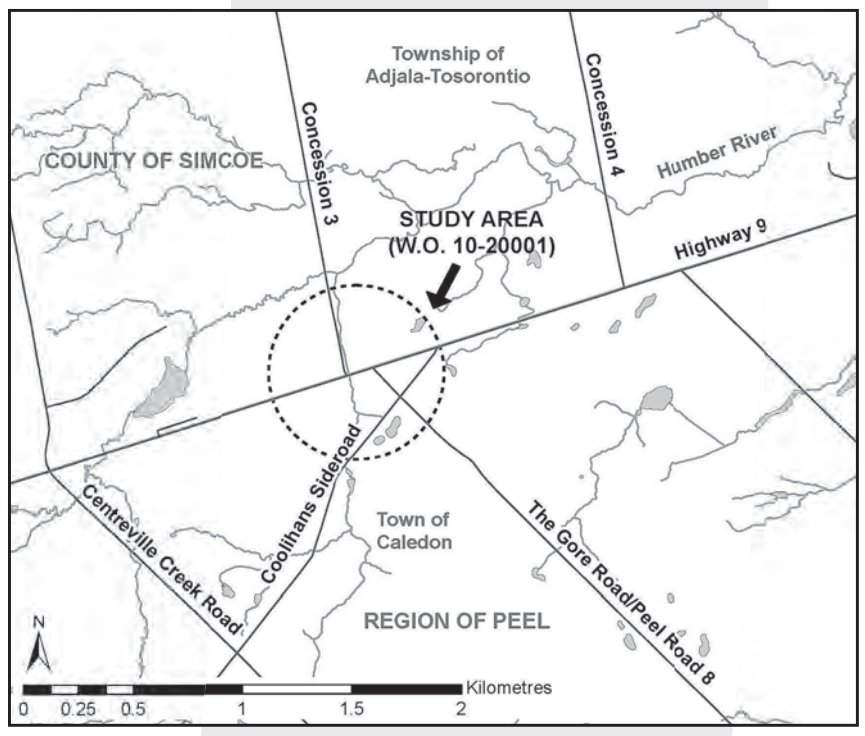

Preliminary Design and Class Environmental Assessment
Highway 9/Peel Road 8 (The Gore Road)/Concession Road 3 Intersection Improvements
Town of Caledon, Region of Peel and Township of Adjala-Tosorontio
County of Simcoe, W.O. 10-20001

THE STUDY

The Ontario Ministry of Transportation (MTO) retained HDR Corporation (HDR) to conduct a Preliminary Design and Class Environmental Assessment Study for improvements to the intersection of Highway 9/Peel Road 8 (The Gore Road)/Concession Road 3 in the Town of Caledon, Region of Peel and Township of Adjala-Tosorontio, County of Simcoe. The study area is presented on the map.

The recommended preliminary design for the intersection includes the following components:

- provision for a new traffic signal system with partial illumination and approach lighting at the intersection of The Gore Road and Highway 9;
- provision of partial illumination and approach lighting at the intersection of Concession Road 3 and Highway 9;
- provision of pedestrian crossing facilities at the intersection of The Gore Road and Highway 9;
- new westbound auxiliary through lane on Highway 9 extending from west of Coolihans Sideroad westerly to beyond Concession Road 3;
- new westbound left turn lane on Highway 9 at The Gore Road;
- new eastbound left turn lane on Highway 9 at Concession Road 3;
- widening to provide northbound left and right turn lanes on The Gore Road at Highway 9;
- provision of a 2 m wide mid-height berm along the north side of Highway 9 east of Concession Road 3, where the height of the earth cuts exceed 5 m;
- closure of Coolihans Sideroad at Highway 9 and creation of a cul-de-sac;
- drainage improvements including general grading of ditches, addition of new/replacement culverts, and removal/extension of existing culverts; and,
- utility relocations.

THE PROCESS

Initially, this study was classified as a Group "C" project under the MTO Class Environmental Assessment for Provincial Transportation Facilities (2000). However, due to the recommendation to close Coolihans Sideroad at Highway 9 and create a cul-de-sac at this location, it was reclassified/stepped-up to a Group "B" project in March 2017. As a result, this study is now following the approved planning process for Group "B" projects under the MTO Class Environmental Assessment for Provincial Transportation Facilities (2000), with the opportunity for public input throughout. Following contact with external agencies/stakeholders, Indigenous communities, property owners and the public, as well as review within the Ministry, it has been determined that this project will not result in any significant adverse environmental effects.

A Transportation Environmental Study Report (TESR) has been prepared to document the results of preliminary design and will be available on August 8, 2019 for a 30-day public review period. Interested persons are encouraged to review this document and provide comments by September 6, 2019. If, after consulting with the Ministry's staff and consultants, you have serious unresolved concerns, you have the right to request the Minister of the Environment, Conservation and Parks (in writing to: Ferguson Block, 11th Floor, 77 Wellesley Street West, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 2T5) to issue a Part II Order ("bump-up") for this study. A Part II Order may lead to the preparation of an individual environmental assessment. A copy of the Part II Order request that is sent directly to the Minister of the Environment, Conservation and Parks should also be forwarded to the study team representatives at the addresses listed below. If there are no outstanding concerns at the end of the review period, the study will be considered to have met the requirements of the Class Environmental Assessment, and detail design may start without further notice.

10th anniversary Midnight Madness coming to downtown Bolton

Written By JULIA LLOYD

Are you ready for a night filled with good music, good food and great company?

Midnight Madness 2019 is this Friday (August 9) from 6 p.m. till midnight in the heart of downtown Bolton. Queen St. will be closed for traffic from King St. to Mill St., to allow people to visit as many booths as they can, which will be set up all along the street.

"The initial idea behind Midnight Madness was to support the new faces in the community. It was a twofold event, it was meant to support businesses in the community and also bring the community together," said Annette Groves, Regional Councillor for Ward 5.

This year Coun. Groves raised $19,000 through sponsorships to support Friday's event. Midnight Madness has been around in the town for so long that, in 2015, when a decision was made to cancel the event, the community revolted. In 2018 Area Councillor for Ward 5 Tony Rosa and Bolton Community Crew "resurrected" the event for it's 10th anniversary.

The street will be an outdoor marketplace filled with booths from different local business, local talent will play live music and there is also a kid's zone and a car show, so the whole family can enjoy the event.

Live music will feature Bolton's own Izzy, G-Fad, Ramblin' Soul and the Epic Eagles. The kid's zone will consist of a petting zoo, pony rides, bouncy castle and soapbox derby. A raffle will be held at the Bolton Community Crew Booth and the Diamond Auto Collision will host their annual car show at the Albion Bolton fairgrounds.

Funds raised at the car show will go towards Caledon Meals on Wheels and both events have been coordinated with shuttle bus available all day to bring people up and down the hill on Queen St.

Last year, about 7,000 residents came out to participate the event, however, Coun. Groves believes even more people will attend this year's Midnight Madness.

Coun. Groves also stated that the new all day parking in downtown Bolton would not affect Friday's event. Roads are being closed around 4 p.m., two hours before the start of Midnight Madness.

"The community really look forward to it because it brings the community together," said Coun. Groves. "We've been taking my son since he was little and that is what you will find, families come out and it's a nice opportunity for families to come out. Sometimes I even see people who haven't been around town in a long time and so it's just a great event overall."

The sponsors for this years event are: Panson Electric, Orange Theory, Treasure Hill Homes, Fleetex Transport, the Bolton Business Improvement Area (BIA), the OPP, Markall Road Closure and Dibco Underground Services.

BUSINESS in Caledon

Bolton's first business networking event hosted by CBIZ

Written By JULIA LLOYD

Last Wednesday (July 31) Caledon Business Innovative Zone (CBIZ) held their first networking event at Via Trailers and was a huge success.

"We did a study back in 2016 and we found out a lot of small businesses in the area were having a hard time getting access to resources from, say the accounting department to the marketing department," said Jith Dravin, Business Development and Research Officer for the Town of Caledon.

The owner's of Via Trailers hosted the event. There was delicious food catered by a local business and there was a bar with complimentary sangria.

The theme for the night was marketing and there were three "marketing champs" who put on a panel for everyone to share their insights on best practices in marketing for businesses.

The night started around 6 p.m. and the panel had Jacqui and Tyler Viaene, owners of Via Trailers to speak first and introduce how they first started the business to the success it is today.

Tyler started the business out of college. At the time he worked in North Etobicoke, so when he was looking for a lot to buy he found one in Bolton for $700 a month.

"So we started there. We had an impressive inventory of three trailers and it was slow going like any business when you are starting out. But I think there was a bit of luck and timing that came into play, the industry started to grow, more people were going into trades, landscaping, marketing and food trailers all started to grow year after year," explained Tyler.

Eventually Tyler and his wife's business grew and they expanded and moved across the street to a larger property. There, their inventory grew to about 90 trailers. Tyler talked about how for a while they were the only dealer in the area that they knew of, so that helped them out a lot but they also used the tactic of marketing.

"We do use a lot of marketing services. We work with agencies and we partner up with a lot of local businesses and so we have a good relationship with the local community," continued Tyler.

The couple said they worked with a lot of local papers and local magazines to have ads to promote their business.

"So — now we not only just do regular trailers but we do fleet for organizations like Hydro, we do a lot of government speciality trailers. About eight years ago food trucks became a lot more popular, so we got into that. We are kind of the alternative to food trucks we do food trailers and that has gone really well," Tyler said.

The next speaker was Samira Abubakar from Brand Tigers — a marketing agency. Samira has an incredible background in marketing consulting for big agencies in Toronto. Her father was a businessman. She understands the business community and what impacts its failures and successes.

"But really, I belong to an entrepreneurial family and my dad has lots and lots businesses, I have seen so many failures and successes in my life that my forte has become turning around brands," explained Samira.

Samira introduced a powerpoint that went over her formula to starting a successful business. She also discussed some of the ways she's been successful in only a very small amount of time.

The next speaker was Steve Conforti who started We Are Creative, a graphic design marketing agency that helps its customers to create their own website to help them gain a greater online presence.

The night was deemed an incredible success, with roughly 50 representatives from local businesses and start-ups around town.

The CBIZ program helps connecting financial incentives with like-minded people and mentors. This year CBIZ started a training program that launched this June and a few people in the training program attended the event and were overwhelmed by the community support in local businesses.

Jith Dravin asked everyone at the end of the night if they would like a similar event like this in the future and the audience just screamed — YES.

When you buy from a small business you're not helping a C.E.O buy a 3rd holiday home, you are helping a little girl get dance lessons, a little boy get his team jersey, a mom or dad put food on the table, a family pay a mortgage or a student pay for college.

Thanks for shopping local!

Mayor's View: Holidays and coming home

Last month I did something I've never done before – I went on vacation for longer than one week.

The past year has had its ups and downs and for me and my wife Anne this holiday was a much need break. A time to reflect and refresh.

We drove west as far as we could go. We stood on the ice fields, walked at the foot of the mountains, took in breathtaking landscapes, skies, lakes and rivers. It was an adventure. It really makes you think about how big and amazing Canada is. It was a fantastic, memory making trip and yet we were ready to come home.

On the drive home, I thought a lot about Caledon and all it could be. I'm excited at the possibilities and ready to get back to working with Council, the community and staff in creating a bright future for our community of communities.

Midnight Madness

There's so much going on in Caledon this time of year. We have our farm stores and markets, hiking trails and parks, events and celebrations. This Friday August 9th, is Bolton Midnight Madness. A big shout out to Councillor Groves and Councillor Rosa who have worked so hard fundraising and pulling together a group of dedicated volunteers. it's shaping up to an awesome night of family fun, food and entertainment. I encourage residents from all over Caledon to come and support the Bolton community and businesses.

Pet Adoption

The Caledon Animal Services Adoption Program seeks to find homes for healthy pets in our care!

WHY ADOPT FROM US?

Adopting your new pet from us has many advantages:

- We ensure each pet has up-to-date vaccinations.
- Most pets are spayed or neutered before they are adopted out.
- We implant a microchip in most pets so they can be identified if they are ever lost.
- Affordability! When you add up what it would cost for all these services, our fees are very reasonable!

WHAT IS THE PROCESS?

If you are interested in adopting a pet, please contact us to book an appointment for a "meet and greet." Appointments are scheduled up to a maximum of 5 days in advance. Staff may contact you to cancel your appointment if the pet you are interested in is no longer available. Unfortunately, pets are not held in reserve.

Our goal is to find each pet in our care their forever home and all applicants must complete a form which is subject to review.

To learn more about our adoptable pets, our adoption process and to schedule an appointment, please call us at 905.584.2272 x.4698, send an email to animal.services@caledon.ca or visit us at caledon.ca/animalservices.

We are so fortunate to live in Canada

by Mark Pavilons

There are many uplifting, even corny sentiments that float around the Internet every day. Some involve cats.

Some are funny, some are serious. Most are stupid. But sometimes you come across some real gems that make you think.

My wife sent me one recently and it points to some very fundamental reasons that we North Americans are so lucky and blessed.

If you can read my words each week in the newspaper, you're lucky. Not simply because you get to enjoy my pearls of wisdom but because you can read at all. Roughly 17% of the world's population remains illiterate. A rough calculation indicates that 1.2 billion of our fellow humans can't read or write.

For those who really enjoy picking up the newspaper or grabbing a book and finding your favourite chair, you will know how sad this is. Fortunately, we are making inroads and numbers continue to improve, but not without tremendous efforts on the part of literacy groups and volunteers worldwide.

When you got out of bed this morning and perhaps felt a spring in your step, consider yourself lucky. Today, roughly 153,424 people will die. That's just over 100 people per minute!

There are many reasons for this, of course. Here in North America the main causes of death are heart disease and stroke; cancer; unintentional injuries and respiratory disease. Some are preventable and some are linked to our lifestyle.

In less developed parts of the world, deaths are attributed to TB, diarrhoel diseases caused by malnutrition, HIV/AIDS, and road injuries. In some places, a lot of people travel by boat and ferry, just to get from place to place. Overloaded, unsafe and unregulated ships often sink, killing hundreds. The animal that kills the most people annually? The hippo.

There are literally millions living in less than normal conditions in refugee camps across the world. While they survive, they are much more susceptible to disease and illness, and may never find a real "home" again.

The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) estimates that about 815 million people of the 7.6 billion people in the world, or 10.7%, were suffering from chronic undernourishment in 2016. Almost all the hungry people live in lower-middle-income countries. There are 11 million people undernourished in developed countries, including ours.

The top reasons to worry in less developed nations range from war and terrorism to lack of proper drinking water.

Every day we hear of suicide bombers taking lives in various public locations. Can you image fearing for your life just making a trip to the market? Have you ever turned on the tap and received nothing? Can you even imagine flicking the switch and having no lights?

Have you been unjustly imprisoned or beaten for being in a public demonstration lately? Well, you're lucky. People are assaulted and wrong imprisoned every day without due process.

If you have money in your wallet, some spare change and even a few bucks in the bank, you are among the top 8% of the world's wealthy.

Funny, I never thought of myself as wealthy, in any way. Here, we have very different challenges and fears. Our fears centre around uncertainty, the economy, mortgage rates, car repairs, the cost of gas at the pumps and the cost of post-secondary studies. When you put it in perspective, those are the worries of the rich.

The people my daughter Lexie worked with in Rwanda were lucky to go to school at all. In many countries they charge a nominal fee to attend school, but most average citizens can't afford it. It's a dream for many just to send their kids to elementary school for a few years.

Lexie can really put things in perspective for anyone. She stayed in a traditional dung hut in Kenya and has been to the bateys in the Dominican Republic. She knows how hard people work just to put food on the table in Guatemala and Matelot, Trinidad.

And these people are among the "lucky" ones, when you consider that 75% of the world's population don't have enough food, clothes or a roof over their heads.

Yes, food and shelter are what we consider basic necessities in Canada. And yet, these are not cheap, either.

The astronomical house prices in the GTA have put owning a home out of reach for many.

While "experts" cite market demand, something is off when average homes hover around the $1-million mark. My children may never be able to afford a home of their own. And what of their children?

Again, I'm considered one of the lucky ones, since we have a home, food, a refrigerator, clothes, and a way to get to work that doesn't involve dodging hippos. I even own a wallet, although it's stuffed with more receipts than cash.

It's funny, you know, that we are so very comfortable and don't even think of others very often. Our kids are masters at modern technology and despite the mountains of information available on the Internet, few teens or 20-somethings seem overly concerned about infant mortality, world hunger, child labour and TB.

No, their worries centre around data plans, where to eat out, piercings, running shoes, and live streaming.

As part of morning announcements in school, or opening comments at civic events, perhaps we should all take a moment to thank our lucky stars we are safe here in Canada.

Our Readers Write

Is this the year of the gun?

IT'S GETTING PRETTY SCARY when on the same weekend we hear of 40 innocent people being gunned down in two cities south of the border and 13 people being shot in a single night in Toronto.

There's little doubt that in North America this could be called the Year of the Gun, or that gun control could well become an issue in next October's federal election as well as in the 2020 presidential election in the United States.

We think Canadians ought to be proud of the fact that our Constitution has no provision similar to the Second Amendment of the U.S. Constitution which has been interpreted by that country's Republican-dominated Supreme Court as barring any meaningful form of gun controls.

Those of us living on the edge of the Greater Toronto Area shouldn't take too much comfort from the fact shootings locally are mainly by hunters and that thus far in 2019 there have been no reported illegal discharges of firearms in Dufferin County.

Rather, we should note that the rash of shootings in the GTA is no longer confined to Toronto, with hardly a day going by without at least one occurring in York and Peel Regions.

The massacre of 31 WalMart customers in El Paso, Texas and another nine outside a nightclub in Dayton, Ohio, has led President Donald Trump to visit the two cities yesterday after remarking that the El Paso killer, not the assault rifle he used, was to blame.

Despite the fact that about 90 per cent of U.S. citizens support universal background checks of those seeking to purchase firearms and a ban on sale or ownership of assault weapons, neither is likely to take place without the support of the gun lobby.

We've never heard a coherent explanation as to the need for Americans to possess assault rifles, or for that matter of Torontonians to own handguns, and we certainly support Toronto Mayor John Tory's campaign for a handgun ban.

The need for gun controls in the U.S. has become all the more evident because of the fact that some of the mass shootings were a form of domestic terrorism carried out by killers full of hatred for minorities, be they Muslims, Jews, blacks or, as in the case of the El Paso killer, of immigrants from Latin America.

And that element is by no means found only in the U.S. Quebec has been the scene of the 1989 massacre in Montreal's École Polytechnique, where 14 women lost their lives because of the killer's hatred of feminists, and the more recent deaths of six worshippers in a Quebec City mosque by a killer full of hatred toward Muslims.

Thankfully, none of the fatal shootings in the GTA appear to have been race-related, with most seemingly being connected to warfare between gangs of youth, with both killers and victims for some reason being mainly black.

However, it was just last year that we witnessed the horror of a van being driven down a sidewalk on Toronto's Yonge Street by a young man who appears to have become as anti-feminist as the shooter in Montreal 29 years earlier.

If nothing else, that horror demonstrated that guns and knives aren't the only potential weapons for someone bent on killing others.But that's hardly an argument against the need for tough gun controls.

A Wikipedia list of firearms deaths per 100,000 residents shows Japan with the lowest tally, at 0.06, with all of them suicides, not homicides. In contrast, the rate in the U.S. was 12.21 deaths per 100,000, with 4.46 of them homicides and 7.32 suicides.

Canada was somewhat better, with an overall rate of 2.05 per 100,000, made up of 0.61 from homicides and 1.52 attributed to suicides.

It's surely no coincidence that Japan has some of the world's toughest gun controls, to the point where even gang members content themselves with knives as their weapons. Anyone wishing to purchase a firearm must submit to interviews in which they demonstrate the intended purpose.

In the U.S., most of the support for gun controls comes from Democrats and most of the opposition from within the Republican Party, perhaps because one of its big financial supporters is the National Rifle Association.

The Democratic Party wants stricter regulation of firearms, especially assault weapons, with its views centred around the belief that the constitutional right to own firearms is subject to reasonable regulation.

The 2012 Democratic platform said it didn't want to override the Second Amendment but wanted common-sense reforms.

Similarly, in Canada, calls for tougher gun controls have tended to come from centrist and left-wing parties, with the Liberals having brought in a short-lived long gun registry that was quickly killed by the Conservatives.

It will be interesting to see whether 2020 will see any toughening of gun laws in either the U.S. or Canada.

IMF: Another treaty bites the dust

GWYNNE DYER
OUR WORLD TODAY

The Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces (INF) Treaty died last Friday, but there won't be many mourners at the funeral. There should be.

The problem the INF was intended to solve, back when U.S. President Ronald Reagan and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev signed it in 1987, was 'warning time'.

Bombers would take many hours to get from Russia to America or vice versa, and even intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs) would take 30-35 minutes. That would at least give the commanders of nuclear forces on the side that didn't launch the surprise attack enough time to order a retaliatory strike before they died.

Whereas intermediate-range ballistic missiles (IRBMs) based in Europe could reach the other side's capitals, command centres, airfields and missile launchers in 10 minutes: barely time to tuck your head between your knees and kiss your ass goodbye, as they used to say.

The IRBMs put everything on a hair-trigger. You had maybe five minutes to decide if you trusted the data from your radars or your satellite surveillance before you had to decide whether to launch your nuclear counter-strike. Which makes it all the weirder that the Russians took the lead in introducing IRBMs to Europe.

They were called SS-20s, and they put all the capitals of NATO's European members on 10 minutes' notice of extinction. However, Moscow would also have only 10 minutes' warning once the U.S. developed its own IRBMs and based them in Europe (they were called Pershing IIs).

But the United States is not in Europe, and only the Soviet Union's ICBMs could reach it. No matter what happened with IRBMs in Europe, the U.S. would still have a half-hour-plus warning time. The Russians were exceptionally foolish to start this particular bit of the arms race.

By the mid-1980s the Russians were looking for a way out, and Ronald Reagan, who hated nuclear weapons, was happy to help them. He and Gorbachev signed the INF treaty in 1987, banning all land-based ballistic missiles with 'intermediate range' (500-5,500km).

They also banned all land-based cruise missiles of similar range, although the relatively slow-moving cruise missiles never posed a 'warning time' problem. The INF Treaty was the first major sign that the Cold War was ending: 2,700 missiles were destroyed in the following two years, and everybody lived happily ever after. Sort of.

So why have they now just let the INF Treaty die?

The Russians have been fiddling around with an existing sea-launched cruise missile that has a range of several thousand km. That's legal at sea, but then they test-fired the same missile from a land-based mobile launcher. They kept that test below the INF-permitted limit of 500 km for land-based cruise missiles, but the test proved that it would work at any range.

Naughty and stupid, but boys will be boys. It's a cruise missile, so it has no impact on warning time, nor would it give Russia any strategic advantage. Why didn't Vladimir Putin not just stop the nonsense, and maybe apologise?

Same goes for the United States: the INF is good value, and the Russian infringement is legally questionable but strategically unimportant. Why haven't you taken the time to sort this out and keep the treaty alive?

The reason is China. All the arms control treaties of the later 20th century were made in a bipolar world: the United States and the Soviet Union were the only players who counted. Now China counts too, and arms control becomes a 'three-body problem'. Those are very hard problems to solve.

The sane answer is simply to deal the Chinese in. Beijing doesn't want to live with 10 minutes' warning time either. It would probably sign up to the INF terms provided that the U.S. and Russia were willing to grant it parity in other weapons. You could even throw in a new ban on 'hypersonic' missiles of intermediate range, which will be otherwise be threatening warning times in a few years.

But there are people in Washington, and no doubt in Moscow, who would love to have the option of a no-warning disarming strike on Beijing. You have to kill the INF to achieve that, because you would need to put land-based intermediate-range ballistic missiles on the ground in Asia. But those people have won the argument, because nobody else cares enough.

Former U.S. secretary of state George Shultz, who negotiated the INF Treaty, told the Voice of America recently: "When something like the INF goes down the drain almost like nothing, it shows you the degree to which people have forgotten the power of these weapons. One day it'll be too late."

It's 30 years since the Cold War ended, and the insiders in the American and Russian defence establishments who are letting the INF die are betraying our trust. New weapons, new strategies, new threats are the building blocks of their careers, and they have forgotten to be afraid of nuclear war.

So don't blame Donald Trump or John Bolton or Vladimir Putin, who are only doing their usual belligerent shtick. Blame the careerists, who should know better.

When backpacks are bulletproof

SHERALYN ROMAN
TALK CALEDON

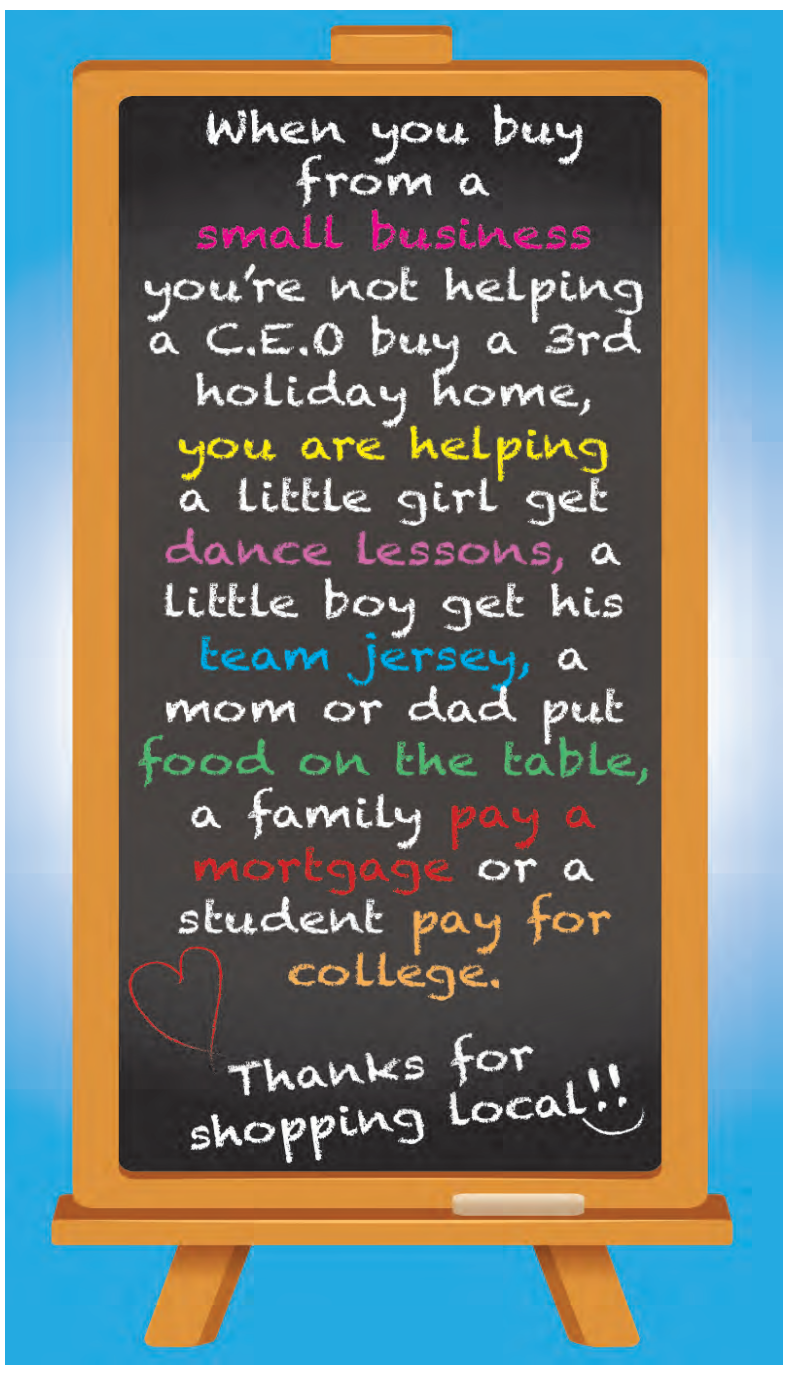

A draft of this week's article was already underway that thankfully, has absolutely nothing to do with Caledon, when news broke about two separate mass shootings in the US. We planned on discussing the sad state of affairs when manufacturers there, capitalizing on an already fearful nation (and sadly, on an identified need) began their "Back To School" marketing on the first of August with this year's latest trend – the bulletproof backpack. Convinced it was a joke or a meme, I did a little bit of research and found that indeed, it was no joke. If you're sending your kids to school, anywhere in the US, purchasing a backpack might just have become a life and death decision.

What a sad state of affairs. What are we to make of the decision by at least one manufacturer, called BulletBlocker, to capitalize on the very real potential need for such an item? Should we applaud their initiative at keeping kids safe or berate them for fuelling the hysteria of worried parents across the nation? Such parents no longer worry about bullying or whether their kid makes the cheer squad but rather – whether their kid will come home from school at all. One wonders if there are other options besides building bulletproof backpacks, like oh I don't know….banning the sale of guns? Or gee, maybe consider changing the Second Amendment, an archaic law written during a time that is no longer relevant and for a political climate that no longer exists? Maybe, just putting it out there, the US might at the very least consider banning the sale of AK 47 (and similar) assault rifles because I've gotta think if one is merely purchasing a gun to go deer hunting, such a weapon would leave very little of the carcass left to use. In other words, unless the US is about to declare war on the entire world, why do its citizens need to possess such weapons of mass destruction? Because, that's what they are. Assault rifles serve no other purpose than to wreak havoc and mayhem on absolutely anything that is even remotely within its sights.

This past week's tragic turn of events with not one, but two mass shootings is – if you can believe it – the 255th (273 fatalities) mass shooting in the US THIS YEAR! Yes, you read that right. We had to go back and check that statistic for accuracy and sadly, it's 100% true. Hence, one assumes, the very real perceived need for bulletproof backpacks. Manufacturers like Armor Me and Guard Dog, as well at BulletBlocker stand behind their claims that they will help keep kids safe although independent testing showed they were actually only good for stopping bullets from certain types of handguns – not the assault rifles that tend to be the weapon of choice for school shooters everywhere. By the way, since we're talking statistics, a mass shooting is considered to be one when more than four people are shot. Just a few days prior to El Paso and Dayton, 12 people were shot in Brooklyn but that one didn't even make the headlines!

Before you think I've gotten too preachy or forgotten about bullets that have flown through school corridors right here close to home – I have not. I lived within a stone's throw of one of the worst school shootings in Canadian history and that was in the '70's. Of course we all recall the terrible events of December 6th 1989 when 14 female students lost their lives to a madman. Bad things do happen here – but rarely. While any loss of life is tragic, the key difference here in Canada is that when bad things happen, fewer people die. As well, fewer bad things happen, in part because access to guns (especially assault rifles and their ilk) are not only very closely monitored but largely restricted. Further, the Ecole Polytechnique incident resulted in much stricter gun laws, with Bill C-68 implemented in 1995 a direct result. Makes sense to me. Makes sense to most of my Democrat neighbours to the south. Sadly, it doesn't seem to make sense to most of the rest of America. These are the parents who would rather go back to school shopping with just one thing in mind – finding a pretty pink or blue backpack (or even a tie dye version which seems truly ironic) not just for crayons and computers but which can also be used as a shield while your kids run for their lives. A sad state of affairs indeed.

Mental health pre-charge diversion program in Caledon

Officers from the Caledon Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) in partnership with the Canadian Mental Health Association Peel Dufferin, are proud to announce the launch of the Mental Health Pre-Charge Diversion Program in Caledon.

The Mental Health Pre-Charge Diversion Program is for adults who come in contact with officers from the Caledon Detachment OPP. Candidates for this program have committed a minor offence and present with symptoms of an underlying mental health condition.

The program is voluntary and offers short term, one-on-one community supports up to six months. It addresses criminal behavior while supporting mental health recovery and reduces the need for criminal prosecution.

The Mental Health Pre-Charge Diversion Program covers criminal offences such as:

- Theft, fraud, mischief or possession of property obtained by crime under $5000;
- Take motor vehicle without consent;
- Cause disturbance, and
- Minor drug possession (possession for personal use).

Supporting mental health in our community is complex and requires a collaborative approach that involves the healthcare and judicial systems, including the police. They work together to provide a wide-range of supports which focuses on a continuum of care for those in crisis.

"The program demonstrates our commitment to supporting our communities, an important element of OPP's Mental Health Strategy."

Provincial Constable Joe Brisebois, Caledon OPP Mental Health Coordinator.

"This partnership between Caledon OPP and the Canadian Mental Health Association Peel Dufferin ensures that individuals have access to the right support at the right time, without increasing impact of community waitlists. Together, we are taking steps to decriminalize mental illness and enhance access to immediate supports for those in a mental health crisis."

Shelly Schneider, Manager, Mental Health and Justice Services, Canadian Mental Health Association Peel Dufferin.

For more information regarding the program, please contact Mental Health Coordinator Joe Brisebois at joe.brisebois@opp.ca. and/or Shelly Schneider, Manager, Mental Health and Justice Services, CMHA Peel Dufferin at schneiders@cmhapeel.ca.

Flagged down on Highway 9

On Thursday, July 31, 2019, at about 6:27 p.m., an officer from the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) Caledon Detachment was in the area of Highway 9 and Rolling Hills Drive in the Town of Caledon, investigating a motor vehicle collision.

The officer was flagged down by a motorist stopped at a red light at the above intersection. The motorist advised that the driver of a white pickup truck behind him was impaired - the pickup truck was seen swerving all over the road and striking an object.

The motorist provided a detailed description of the suspect vehicle, however, he left abruptly before providing his own information.

A short time thereafter, the investigating officer intercepted the suspect vehicle and conducted a traffic stop.

As a result of the investigation, Sarah Bellamy, 46, of Grey Highlands, was arrested and charged with:

- Failure or refusal to comply with demand.

The accused is expected to appear at the Ontario Court of Justice on August 22, 2019, to answer to the charge.

Caledon OPP is thankful to the unknown motorist, who brought the information forward to the officer and assisted in taking an impaired driver off of our roads. We would like to ask the motorist to contact Caledon OPP Detachment at (905) 584-2241 or toll-free at 1-888-310-1122 to obtain his information.

Belfountain Music Festival taking over Alton Mill next weekend

Written By CONSTANCE SCRAFIELD

"This year what we did is reduce the number of concerts to three. I came with a vision that we needed to do so. In the past, there were seven or eight concerts in a number of venues and we thought concentrating on the three would be easier for most people and assure strong attendance. We're looking to expand for a stronger following," so said Emily Rho, this year's Artistic Director for the re-designed Belfountain Music Festival.

"This year, a lot of it is classical chamber music, starting with Bach, Mozart and on to Tchaikovsky, then, up to Joni Mitchell songs and that will be a sing along.

"The middle concert is at Paul Moran Studio. There are 12 musicians and 10 student musicians involved, so, it's a mixture of local artists and those coming from different parts of the country – namely, Quebec and Manitoba. It is mostly strings, and one of the singers is originally from Erin. About half of the artists are returning artists from previous music festivals."

How Ms. Rho came to be involved, and is now AD, is "I was involved as a performer and a volunteer with Alex McLeod. He is my brother-in-law and he invited me to participate in the Belfountain Music Festival." She is based in Toronto, Ms Rho said, "I drive out to Caledon many times. I have several friends here. One of the artists this year, is based out of Owen Sound and Toronto but she keeps her horse in Caledon.

"The venue [the Alton Mill Arts Centre] was suggested by the previous artistic director. I wasn't 100 percent involved with that decision. The Alton Mill has been very supportive of the music festival. The Alton Mill people were very happy to have the series of concerts here.

"Everybody's getting paid because it is funded by the Ontario Arts Council (OAC) and the Town of Caledon. This is the first year for support from the OCA.

"We wanted to create concerts that are accessible and enjoyable for many people," she continued to say, "this is a romantic location and, hopefully, we'll have nice weather. So, the music is romantic and exciting. It's really great to have musicians who have played here before but also some musicians, coming for the first time, who are some of the best musicians in Canada.

"I am personally connected to a lot of them, through school and as colleagues," she added.

Friday evening's concert will be held in the Pond Gallery upstairs in the Mill.

Ms Rho explained, "The first concert is very pretty, chamber music by Brahmas, Hayden and Dinuk Wijeratne, a Canadian composer, born in Sri Lanka. The specific piece we're playing on Friday night won a Juno award for Best Classical Piece of the Year, a couple of years ago. "

Friday's concert is prefaced by a cocktail reception at 6:30 p.m., with the concert staring at 7:30 p.m.

Saturday's concert is likewise in the evening at 7:30 p.m. at Paul Moran Studio, 19741 Main Street, Alton.

"The Mill has a wedding on Saturday," is the story behind the shift, "and Paul happened to be at that meeting. He offered to have that concert in his venue. His venue is always being used for concerts anyway."

"One of the focal points of that concert is Souvenir de Florence," she commented. "A classical, ultra- romantic and lush piece, with really exciting moments. There's a story how it got composed.

"Tchaikovsky – there's this lady, Nadezhea von Meck, a Russian business woman, who also had 13 children, and who was a huge fan of Tchaikovsky. She wrote him a letter and said, 'I want to sponsor you.'

"So he gratefully accepted that, under one condition: that 'we never actually meet face to face.'

"She was happy with that arrangement. They've heard a lot about each other and, one day, in Florence, he ran into her by coincidence. He dashed off immediately, very embarrassed. He wrote to her to apologize to her that he breached that contract. 'I'm going to keep supporting you,' she told him. So, he went home to Russia and wrote this piece and dedicated it to her. It's the highlight of the program on Saturday evening.

On Saturday, there will be 14 or 15 people performing. The Tchaikovsky is originally for six string players. We start rehearsals Monday in Toronto, the musicians are coming from all over.

"I get to see these people, which, personally, also makes me really happy."

Sunday is Beer and Baroque: Goodlot Brewery as well as Partake for non alcoholic.

"We're playing the Grieg string orchestra piece. We wanted to include something the audience could partake as well. So, we're going to use the time it takes to set up to play Joni Mitchell, as a sing along. One of the musicians will be playing the guitar, another will lead the audience."

This concert will be performed in the Mill Race room down in the lower level of the Mill. Each concert is ticketed separately.

Ms Rho told us, "There is a three concert bundle and we have a 10 percent promotion on at the moment for people buying tickets online: tick '10off' at the check out. Tickets are available at the door as well."

Emily Rho is a pianist, having studied and lived in Toronto.

"I work for a couple of different places - Pocket Concerts. They are Chamber music concert series that brings music into private venues - people's homes and offices, during the school year. And I teach with the Royal Conservatory of Music.

For Ms Rho, the big reason for coming to any or all of these Belfountain Music Festival events, in Alton is, "I think the idea of listening to live music together, sharing that moment is really special and can open people's minds and get closer and make friends – meeting people and being able to provide that through music."

Sorrento, Bolton's new luxury retirement living facility

Written By JULIA LLOYD

A new building for retirement living is expected to open in early 2020, in the heart of downtown Bolton.

"I want to do seniors' living right, with an emphasis on ending ageism, valuing seniors and making them an integral part of our society and every day life," said Deena Linehan, VP of Retirement Operations at Sorrento Retirement Residence.

A presentation centre will be officially open to the public on mid-August, and will give people an idea of what to expect when construction is finished.

There will be floor plans available for people to look at; as well they will have an actual suite built in the centre, identical to one of the suites available for rent once Sorrento retirement is officially open.

The development company, King Station, chose to develop in the area because they feel Bolton is underserviced when it comes to senior living. When Sorrento first introduced the idea of a new retirement residence downtown, a lot of people in the town showed interest, stated Linehan.

Construction for the project began in October 2017, shortly after the developers received approval from the Region of Peel.

The location of the development is 10 Station Rd. in Bolton. The facility is expected to have 140 suites available for rent.

Suites can be claimed once the presentation centre is open, according to Linehan, and right now, people are registering their interest.

The president of the development company — Raymond Nicolini — wanted to build Sorrento so that his parents could live the rest of their lives in luxury.

"Raymond's father, Vittorio Nicolini, moved to Canada from Italy many years ago and was a skilled craftsman. He passed along his passion for quality building on to his family and was instrumental in the planning and vision for Sorrento, " said Linehan. "You can see his influence in the building's fine millwork, attention to detail and the outdoor dining terraces."

A majority of suites are one bedroom, and there are also studios, one bedroom plus den and two bedrooms available. Cost of the units will differ depending on the number of bedrooms, the square footage and location.

One of the really cool aspects Sorrento offers that many retirement living residences don't, are programs to stay active in your local community. Sorrento will offer a lifelong learning plan lecture series as one of the developers' new approaches to senior living. A new wellness program will be offered, with a focus on healthy living — which includes, fitness, learning, social and volunteer programs designed for the senior who wants to live a full life filled with purpose.

"The idea behind the volunteer program is to hook seniors up with volunteering on a regular basis so that they have the option of a regular plan of activities, rather than that one or two time a year volunteer activity," said Linehan.

Some of the other amenities offered are a full-service restaurant for lunch and dinner, as well as a pub that will open before and after scheduled dining hours. There will also be a bistro for breakfast. The food offered is mainly Mediterranean and Italian.

There will be a swimming pool with aquatics programs offered as a part of the wellness program, as well, an in-house physician, and registered staff available at all times.

The residence will have beautiful landscaping. There is a full-service salon, and pet-friendly pet services, including a pet wash station, which is a rare feature since many retirement residences frown on pets. However, Sorrento is committed to keeping seniors and their pets together.

Sorrento will run a shuttle bus service for seniors to travel to local stores, attractions, or appointments. As well, Linehan says, the Residence will plan trips to downtown Toronto, the casino and other fun locations.

"Retirement is lovely but you need to have purpose in life and we want to make sure our seniors continue to live life to the fullest. If you have purpose, Sorrento is designed to help you continue with that. But if you aren't certain, we can help you find it." stated Linehan.

Lighten-up, eh! It'll do you good

Content Courtesy of BRENDA ALDERDICE

You've heard this one before, but what if there is really something to it. Most of us are so busy balancing careers, relationships, teenagers and aging parents, we may have forgotten how to have fun.

As we go from one crisis to another, we tend to find ourselves on auto-pilot rather than living and enjoying every single day. The trick is to lighten-up… before you burn out!

But, you ask, how can I lighten-up? Where do I start?

1. Accentuate the positive. Choose your attitude. Make a list of everything that is good about your life. Greet everyone with a smile and make people wonder exactly what you've been up to!

2. Act like a kid again. Remember when life was fun? What were you doing? Who were you doing it with? Go biking. Check out the swings at the park. Run through a sprinkler. Organize a game of hide-and-seek. Now that you're a grown-up, you can even stay out after the street lights come on!

3. Be spontaneous. When someone suggests doing something, don't hesitate or evaluate, just say YES!!!

4. Do nothing.

5. Don't take yourself too seriously. Celebrate your inner child. Blow bubbles. Play the kazoo. Fly a kite. Find an outrageous hat and wear it when you're visiting a friend in the hospital.

6. Forget about what other people are thinking. Be unique. Be creative. Be yourself! Enjoy every moment because you probably won't regret the things you did, but you might regret the things you didn't do.

7. Go for a walk. It's amazing what you'll find in your own neighbourhood when you go for a walk. Talk to your neighbours. Admire the gardens. Stope to enjoy a treat in a local shop. Get back into your community!

8. Keep it simple. Stop living to have and start living to become. Clear the clutter from your home and office and create space to grow. Reduce, reuse and recycle.

9. Laugh out loud! Not just a quiet snicker, we're talking REAL BELLY LAUGHS! Collect silly hats, crazy maskes, animal noses and wear them. Rent funny movies, go to a comedy club or hang out with hysterically funny friends. They say children laugh more than 400 times a day, but by the time we become adults, the total dwindles to 14 times a day. Change the statistics… start laughing!!!

Active seniors rule the carpet in local bowling scene

SUBMITTED CONTENT

Bowling. The rented shoes, gutter balls, strikes and spares. Almost everyone has been bowling at some time in their lives, but have you ever been carpet bowling?

Played indoors on a 30ft carpet, the object of the game is to roll your ball as close as possible to the target white ball, called the jack. The closest ball is the winner. Carpet bowling is a fun, low-impact game for all ages, including active seniors right here in Caledon.

Every Wednesday morning at the Riverview Terrace Senior Apartments, residents come together in the recreation room, ready to bowl and have fun. Whether you're an expert bowler or watching from the sidelines, all are welcome here. The best part is that the entire activity is organized and run by senior volunteers!

It all started on a whim explains Wilma Moore, one of the senior volunteers who helps lead this activity. "We had this carpet for about 25 years and it was just sitting in the closet," said Moore. "Everyone would ask about it, and I'd tell them it's used for carpet bowling and then all of a sudden it clued in, why don't we use it?"

That's when Wilma along with two other residents, Emily O'Neil and Mary Copeland, began carpet bowling within their residence, as part of Caledon Community Services' Seniors Helping Seniors program. The program encourages seniors to run their own senior activities within the community, and provides financial support to purchase any supplies they might need.

Staying physically and mentally active is vital for seniors' health and wellness. Bernard Nadeau is a retired police officer who served 41 years with the Toronto police and he credits carpet bowling for helping him remain active. "It gets you out of your apartments and you get to mingle with your friends," said Nadeau.

A NEW TAKE ON BOWLING: An enthusiastic group of seniors are attempting to launch carpet bowling in the community.

Seeing the residents enjoy themselves also makes it worthwhile for the senior volunteers. "We see what it's doing for the residents and they talk about how much fun they had afterwards," said Moore. "We feel we started something that's rewarding and people are enjoying it."

Adults 55+ are welcome to join the fun with Seniors Helping Seniors! To learn how you can volunteer or be a participant, contact Silvana Ferrari, Acting Coordinator, Seniors Health and Wellness at sferrari@ccs4u.org or call at 905-584-2300 ext. 273.

Brand new pump track opens up in Alton Village

Written By JULIA LLOYD

Alton Park is now home to a brand new BMX and multi use pump track.

But - what, exactly, is a pump track?

A pump track is a continuous loop of dirt berms and smooth dirt mounds that people can ride without pedaling. Cyclists of all ages and skill levels can ride any pump track.

"A lot of people had spots in the community that were unsanctioned, it got to the point where municipalities and the riders started to have to work together to create legitimate sanction facilities in our communities," said Chris Dewar, president of Transitions Bike Parks Inc. "And that's where I saw an opportunity to be involved, from a rider and volunteer standpoint, and then eventually I got more and more involved"

On Saturday, the Town of Caledon and the Alton Village Association and Lynx & Hare Cycles held a grand opening for the Alton Village Pump Track. Mayor Allan Thompson participated in the opening ceremonies and was very overwhelmed by the great turnout in the community. Over 50 people attended the grand opening and barbeque at Alton Park.

"This track was designed to complement the landscape, while providing a fun and challenging track for our youth and children to enjoy cycling, skateboarding and using a scooter," said Mayor Thompson. "This is a great example of the types of spaces we can create for our young people in our rural communities."

A spokesperson from the Town's recreation department said this location was not the only one being considered for a pump track, however the Alton community responded so well to the idea, the Town decided to build the pump track in Alton Village.

Transition Bike Parks Inc. offers professional experience in a variety of projects for stakeholders. From the design and development of public municipal bike parks to full-scale XC trail systems.

Dewar collaborated with residents in the town about the concept for the track. It was tendered by the municipality in 2018, with construction beginning in late 2018. It took about four years from conceptual design and initial consultation to the finished project.

Transition Bike Parks designed the track in 2016 and construction began in 2018 by TDI International AG Inc., and was completed this summer. There are two tracks that were built, the main track and the junior loop. The junior loop is for young children and is 25m in length whereas the main track is 175m in length.

"We didn't grow up with things like this. This is only th sixth municipal asphalt track in Ontario and I think this is the way of the future. The maintenance and traction that you get with asphalt is superior to any other product," said Dewar. "And, the cost per square foot is really low compared to tradition sports like hockey or baseball."

Transition Bike Parks worked with New Line Skateparks on the design for a small skateboard park that is slated to begin construction in 2020. The skateboard park will be adjacent to the track.

Dewar started the company Transition Bike Parks 15-years-ago and they have done many projects like this one, in other towns across Ontario. Last year they did a track in Stratford and another one near Trenton.

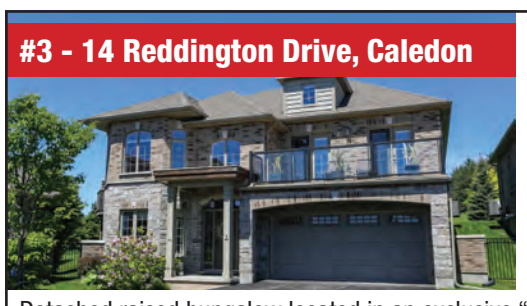

The grand opening had kids attending from a range of different ages; moms and dads were even attempting to ride the track. The turnout at the event was a clear indicator of how much cycling means to the residents in Alton.

Local health unit to study climate change impacts across region

Written By PAULA BROWN

Wellington-Dufferin-Guelph Public Health and the Region of Waterloo Pubic Health are collaborating to study health vulnerabilities and the impact of climate change in our communities.

"This is a project of adapting to the reality of climate change in our area," said Chuck Ferguson, Manager of Communications at Wellington-Dufferin-Guelph Public Health.

Mandated by the Province and with funding by the federal government, the two public health institutions' collaboration will focus on health vulnerabilities impacted by climate change in Waterloo Region, Guelph and Dufferin and Wellington counties. The team's research will address rising temperatures, extreme weather, vector-borne diseases – Lyme disease and West Nile virus – food and water-borne illness and air pollution.

The study will examine "what interventions can public health have that make sure people stay well when we are experiencing the impacts of climate change, which we already are, and they're going to get more extreme as we move forward," said Mr. Ferguson.

The two public health units jointly applied for funding from Health Canada and were awarded $300,000 for the project. The funding will cover research into data gaps in the public health institutions.

"What we're doing currently is we're structuring the project. We're identifying what we know, what we need to know, and we'll go out and build those information gaps and really come up with different strategies to mitigate different risks based on the needs of the community or population that we're working with," said Mr. Ferguson.

He said the $300,000 is more than enough to fund the project and gives residence assurances that the Public Health agencies will look deep into understanding the issues and building strategies that will make a difference.

As part of the project the public health agencies will be working with ICLEI Canada (International Council for Local Environmental Initiatives), a non-profit organization that works to build and serve local and regional governments that are working towards improvements in local sustainability.

The institutions will also be working with consultant Dr. Chris Buse from the University of British Columbia, a specialist in linking health and climate change Mr. Ferguson told the Citizen. Mr. Buse in 2018 published an article in the Canadian Journal of Public Health focused on why public health agencies should study climate change and health vulnerabilities.

"We are asking these consultants to look at all the communities involved, which includes all of Waterloo Region, Wellington County, Dufferin County and the City of Guelph. What they're doing is looking where the most vulnerable populations are and how do we help them," said Mr. Ferguson, "whether that be elderly residents, whether that be rural residents. We just really want to identify where the risks are and come up with strategies to help mitigate them."

The project, which is already under way, is set to run over the next three years.

Barb Shaughnessy claims 'the fix was in' in recent nomination

Regarding comments made by Mr. Williams, Ms. Innis said she checked in with senior party officials who were on hand last Wednesday.

"Regarding Jeremy, I can't speak to specifics, but I do know what happened. I have been made aware. The Party was very clear on when memberships were due by, and Party followed the rules it set out," Ms. Innis said. "Just because you're a candidate doesn't mean you are exempt from those rules. Everyone has to follow them."

She added, "I know Jeremy had concerns. HQ made me aware of what the outcome was. There were some members whose membership had probably lapsed. However, each candidate was given the membership list. People would have been receiving communication from candidates. It's their job to make sure all of their members and supporters are on that list and to ensure it's up to date."

The federal election will take place on Oct. 21.

MoD adds music and beer to mid-summer line-up of fun

Written By BRIAN LOCKHART

The Museum of Dufferin offered some extra fun over the long weekend by providing music and some local craft beer during their Tunes n' Brews event on Sunday, August 4.

This was on top of the weekly farmer's market that is held at the museum every Sunday throughout the summer months.

Kicking off at noon the afternoon party featured Dufferin County Line performing on stage and craft beer from GoodLot Brewing Company. GoodLot grows their own hops on-site to make their beer.

With long line-ups of traffic along Airport Road during the summer the Museum thought passers-y might take a interest in the museum they always pass on the way up north if they saw something special going on – and it worked.

Many visitors heading up to Wasaga were intrigued by the event and stopped in to see what was going on for a Sunday afternoon.

"This is for the people who don't go away up to Wasaga Beach and hang around the neighbourhood and want to have a good time," explained Nanci Malek, Marketing and Events Coordinator at the museum. "We have GoodLot beer from Caledon and the Dufferin County Line band. Country 105 is broadcasting live right now. We have a bouncy castle for the kids."

Country 105 is Shelburne's radio station.

"We just want to have fun on this long weekend for the folks who don't go away so her we are having a party," Ms. Malek said. "We have a country band, we're outside, we need something to drink," said of how the brewery got involved.

Visitors also took the time to enter the museum and see the exhibits as well as the art show that is currently on display in the Silo Gallery.

Notable women who helped shape history

Women continue to blaze trails in the 21st century, influencing world events, politics and businesses near and far.

In the United States, more women were elected to Congress in 2018 than in any other point in history. In 1916, Jeannette Rankin became the first woman to hold a seat in the House of Representatives, and today there are 110 women serving in Congress. And such progress is not exclusive to the United States. The World Economic Forum says 56 of the 146 nations studied have had a female head of government in the past 50 years.

Females have also grown in their high-priority roles in the business sector. In 2017, Fortune magazine reported there were 32 female CEOs leading companies such as General Motors, PepsiCo and Lockheed Martin.

Throughout history, many women have made notable impacts in their communities and on society. The following are just a handful of women whose accomplishments are worthy of celebration.

· Millicent Farrett Fawcett: This powerful leader campaigned for women's suffrage in 1866 at the tender age of 22, leading the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies. Her goal was realized 61 years later.

· Marie Sklodowska Curie: This Polish-born scientist founded a new science of radioactivity, which would have a sizable impact on the treatment of cancer. Curie also was the first woman to win a Nobel Prize.

· Ruth Law: Despite Orville Wright refusing to teach her to fly, Law learned to be a pilot in the early 20th century. At 28, she beat the cross-country flight record with a 590-mile flight from Chicago to Hornell, N.Y., and later inspired Amelia Earhart.

· Ada Lovelace: This gifted mathematician is considered to be the first computer programmer in the early days of computers.

· Valentina Tereshkova: In June 1963, cosmonaut Tereshkova became the first woman in space. Despite a lack of formal flight training, Tereshkova was selected for the space program due to her skills as an amateur parachutist.

· Oprah Winfrey: Winfrey's rise from poverty to the status of household name and billionaire mogul is a true rags-to-riches story.

· Nancy Pelosi: Congresswoman Pelosi became the first and thus far only female to serve as Speaker of the United States House of Representatives. She is the highest-ranking female elected official in U.S. history.

These are just a handful of the many influential women who have shaped history.

Caledon's Karl Slezak rides to Pan Am bronze medal

Written By JAKE COURTEPATTE

Chock up a podium finish for the Caledon equestrian community.

Karl Slezak was one-fourth of the Canadian team that took home equestrian eventing bronze at the Pan Am Games in Lima, Peru, a three-day competition that wrapped up on Sunday.

Eventing, for those not within equestrian circles, refers to what amounts to be an equestrian triathlon: riders and their steeds compete in three days of a variety of competitions to test the skills of the pair, including dressage, cross country, and show jumping. It holds its roots as a military test to determine the mastery of the rider.

The experienced Slezak took his ten year old gelding, Fernhill Wishes, into day one of the competition on Friday, where he set his own personal record with a score of 27.7 points to put Canada in good standing after day one.

"It was fantastic," said Slezak in a press release following the day of competition. "I was really focused on the quality today; there were a few little blips in the accuracy, but I was really pleased with it.

"We've got a great team," he added. "They're all super-supportive. We've had a lot of fun the last couple of weeks."

Day two brought about the cross country portion of the event, which Slezak called "the heart of the sport" and "by far the most exciting." Rider and horse navigate a natural terrain course to prove their worth, in the case of the Pan Am track, a 4.5-km test involving 26 obstacles and 35 jumps.

Slezak started out well on day two, once again aboard Fernhill Wishes, yet found trouble later in the track to incur a string of penalties and land in thirteenth place individually.

"It was riding well," said Slezak. "He was a bit spooky at the beginning, as it was the first time he has seen crowds and was trying to figure out his lanes. There's a lot to do at the beginning. I was a little bit down on the clock; going up to the mound at 23 I thought he jumped around it nicely but he almost slipped and I couldn't make that turn. It was a bummer. Then he was back on it and he felt great to the end; he felt like he had lots of running still."

Canada fell to third place heading into the final day of competition, a spot they held onto on show jumping day to land on the podium.

"He's a fantastic jumper; he's always so level and that probably was one of his more lively rounds," said Slezak. "He came out feeling like a million bucks – he didn't feel tired at all. For him to kind of be up on the last day, that's good. He did what I wanted him to do and that's all I can ask for."

Slezak finished off the event with a score of 58.9 in the show jumping, good for a twelfth place finish overall.

The American squad finished atop the podium to clinch their 2020 Olympic berth, earning a total of 91.20 points to edge Team Brazil by over thirty points, who took the silver position.

Slezak owns and operates Wolf Run Farm in Caledon East.

IN MEMORIAM

Natasha Paterson
June 17, 2003 ~ August 8, 2015

In loving memory of my special niece, Natasha

The day you left and gained your wings
My heart just broke in two
I wish you could have stayed with me
But heaven needed you
You left me with the memories
And I love you dearly still
No matter how much time goes by
You know I always will
You were a very special person
With kindness in your heart
And the love
we had together
Grows stronger
now we are apart
I know I cannot bring you back
Although I wish it every day
But a piece of me
went with you
The day you went away

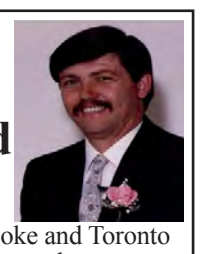

Love you forever,
Aunt Suzie & Family

Dennis Edward Moore

(Retired Captain with Etobicoke and Toronto Fire Departments) who passed away
August 9th, 2016.

I miss the strength you brought me.
and the comfort that it gave.
And every day it's so hard,
Pretending to be brave.

But I've found hidden courage.
And it helps to see me through.
It guides me and protects me.
And I know it comes from you.

Here on earth we shared a life,
As happy as could be.
And I never took for granted.
All you meant to me.

All Our Love Always,
Linda, Shaun, David & Families and the Hume Family!
